"What about housing for the military police unit that will be guarding the Center" I asked.

"All facilities for the military are outside of the fenced area. I understand they are due for arrival today or tomorrow" ~~responded~~ replied the one about ~~six feet tall~~ my height (which was 6 feet tall) "Are you an inspector"?

"No, I'm not." I answered, I'll have the "Service Division" and I am just beginning to find out what my responsibilities are going to be. So far I have only met the manager and assistant manager and am in the midst of my first look around to see what an Assembly Center looks like and what facilities are here to work with."

The two men had now pryed the lid of the box open and were beginning to stack dishes they were removing from the straw filled box, and on the top of one of the service tables.

I thanked them for the information they had volunteered and told them I was sure we would meet again soon. Walking back through the dining room I exited through the door I had originally entered. It seemed to be warmer and the sun brighter than when I had stepped into the building a few moments before. Walking around the truck that was parked close to the door, I made my way to the next building which was a toilet building I discovered upon

Oh! The Service Division?" Your offices will be in Bldg 20 on Administration Row. The reason we know is because we delivered a truck full of office furniture and supplies to that building only yesterday. I think another load of equipment marked Service Division came in and was delivered to the Hospitals. It looks like you are going to be in charge of hospitals too".
