Wages hurt College Union

The Foundation Board of Governors—dominated by the recently elected Common Interest State—are likely to authorize a wage increase to $2.25 an hour today.

This increase, it was brought out yesterday, would decrease the Foundation's total profits to under $25,000 a year and completely submerge the Foundation's college union financing plans.

On top of this, construction estimates have risen half a million dollars above the student authorized expenditure of $3.9 so that the decrease in Foundation profits geometrically increases the college union's bleak fiscal future.

Under the original plan—approved by the student body three years ago—the college union was to be a $3.9 million construction.

$3.4 million of this sum was to be in the form of a loan, to be paid off by the student body over a period of 40 years.

Students were to be assessed $16 a year, beginning in 1969. The proposition allowed for an assessment as high as $20, but it was thought at the time that $16 would be adequate.

An additional $500,000 was to be allocated to the college union from sources other than student assessments.

Subsequent to the passage of the proposal, the Foundation Board of Governors decided to include food services in the college union plan, even if it meant exceeding the cost ceiling.

Following this the Foundation agreed to include a bookstore in the union. With the inclusion of food services and a bookstore the cost of the union stood at $6 million.

Through the years the Foundation pledged $174,000 to the college union. It also pledged $426,000 for a bookstore addition.

These sums were to be compiled over a period of time by the Foundation as "appropriated surpluses."

Architect Moshe Safdie indicated that he could incorporate food services (which would replace the Commons) into his college union plan exclusive of a bookstore.

This phase of the college union would have remained within the original sum of $3.9 million. A bookstore addition costing $500,000 raised the cost of the union to $4.4 million.

Glenn Smith, vice-president for administrative and business affairs, pointed out at the meeting that there are two basic costs for union in addition to the $3.4 million loan.

One part is the $500,000 which was agreed to be paid from non-student sources. This sum, according to Smith, is now available in the form of $318,000 currently in the Foundation and $200,000 which has been turned over to CUC by the Associated Students.

The second part is $500,000 which was to have been financed by Foundation fund surpluses and other means of fund raising. This second part is not available, according to Smith.

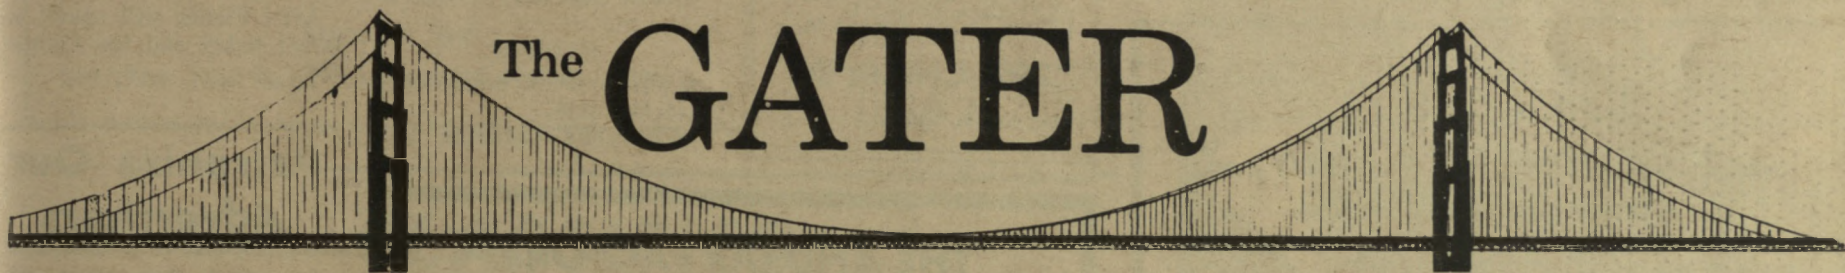

Necessary funds could be generated through a $4 increase of student assessments, extending the total to the $20 allowed.

This assessment would eliminate depending on the Foundation for anything except the $318,000 they are now holding for the college union.

MOSHE SAFDIE

The fee would provide sufficient funds to complete phase one but would in no way allow for a second phase.

Carol outclasses them all

Six campus cuties vie for Homecoming Queen

By CLEM GLYNN

Carol Doda, living contradiction of Shakespeare's "frailty, thy name is woman," will be here Friday to inject some life into Homecoming.

Yesterday, however, six amateurs bumplessly and grindlessly told why they wanted to be Homecoming queen.

And there was a funny sort of echo.

"I'll try really hard to represent all the students at SF State," they said—one by one—while the noon sun got hotter—and most passers-by kept on passing.

About 100 persons surrounded the Speakers' Platform to listen to the six lovelies tell it like it is—and around these parts, Homecoming is like a dwindling tradition.

Bert Parks wasn't there, but he should have been, as the girls circled the quadrangle in a honking car caravan, before shakily taking the microphone to lend aid and comfort to their first-place footballers.

Evangelina Thomas, sponsored by the Black Students Union, took the only different approach to the campaign.

She said she is a candidate to help erase the BSU's image of being exclusively for American blacks.

Miss Thomas is of Philippine descent.

But the event was only further evidence of what some consider to be an unhappy fact of life: every time Miss Doda takes off her T-shirt she draws a bigger crowd than a whole season of SF State "spirit" boosters ever will.

Profs to picket for bargaining

The SF State chapter of the Association of California State College Professors (ACSCP) has asked the faculty to form a picket line in front of the Administration building tomorrow at 1 p.m.

Newman Fisher, president of the ACSCP, called for "informational picketing" to protest the recent action of the State College Trustees in denying a collective bargaining agent for SF State.

The SF State faculty selected the ACSCP as its bargaining agent in a campus election last spring.

Fisher, assistant professor of mathematics, said the picketing will not be directed against the administration and would not attempt to obstruct the entrance of the building.

The picketing will be largely "symbolic," Fisher said, to underscore ACSCP's commitment to collective bargaining.

Announcement of the picketing comes after a faculty meeting Tuesday which was called to inform faculty members of collective bargaining issues discussed at the last trustee meeting.

The estimated 175 professors who attended Tuesday's meeting were told by Ross Y. Koen, Executive Secretary of ACSCP, that the trustees had been approached three times on collective bargaining and requests to hear the issue were turned down three times.

"Now that our route has been closed, it is necessary that the faculty speak to the trustees through another medium," Koen said.

Koen warned the professors that the "11th hour" had been reached, and that it was "time to get down to some solid discussion."

Convocation Planners Meet

The War Crisis Convocation will meet this afternoon in HLL 219 from 3-5 p.m., and at the same time tomorrow in HLL 345.

Faculty speakers have already been chosen and student speakers must be selected by Friday. All interested persons are urged to attend.

Forensics Union participates in two debating tournaments

The Forensics Union will split their forces on Nov. 10-11 in an attempt to add to the awards they have won already.

They will participate in two debate tournaments — one at Idaho State College in Pocatello, and the other at UC Berkeley.

The local orators made a good showing at their first regular debate competition, held Oct. 21 at Foothill College in Los Altos, winning nine awards.

Eight students won awards for outstanding performance in persuasive speaking. They were: Dan Walther, Donna Minkler, Larry Baum, Jeff Wickam, Cecily Floyd, Eddy Fried, Martha Alvarado, and Bob Tanczy.

Larry Baum also won an award for outstanding performance in extemporaneous speaking.

The topic debated was, "Should the federal government guarantee a minimum income," the topic assigned to all college debaters this year.

Students from five local high schools will be here Wednesday night to participate in the first weekly session of public speaking and debate instructions by Forensics members.

Gators try pro-ams

Next Monday night, the SF State wrestling team will come to grips with some professional amateurs.

In a benefit match designed to raise $1,900 for a sauna bath in the athletic department, a team of Gator and ex-Gator wrestlers will tussle with the United States World Freestyle Team at 8 p.m. in the main gymnasium.

The U. S. team, which is coached by former Olympic champion Bill Smith, is holding workouts here prior to the World Freestyle Championships in New Delhi, India, Nov. 12-14.

Gator Coach Allen Abraham, who will center the bulk of his attack around ex-SF State grappler Jim Burke, is optimistic concerning the match.

"We'll win a couple, I hope," he said.

"But we're going to have a doctor stand by anyway."

Besides Burke, a National Collegiate and AAU champion, the Gator line-up will feature Ben Northrup (154 lb.), Russ Camilleri (191), Freshman Gene Kopecky (213), Tom Powell (310) and Emmett Herrera (115).

In addition to the main attractions, Abraham hopes to have several guest performers from the Bay Area Wrestling Association.

Tickets for the match sell for one dollar and are on sale in Hut T-1.

MARKET AT STOCKTON — STONESTOWN

Get an entire quarter's reading under your belt in the first week!

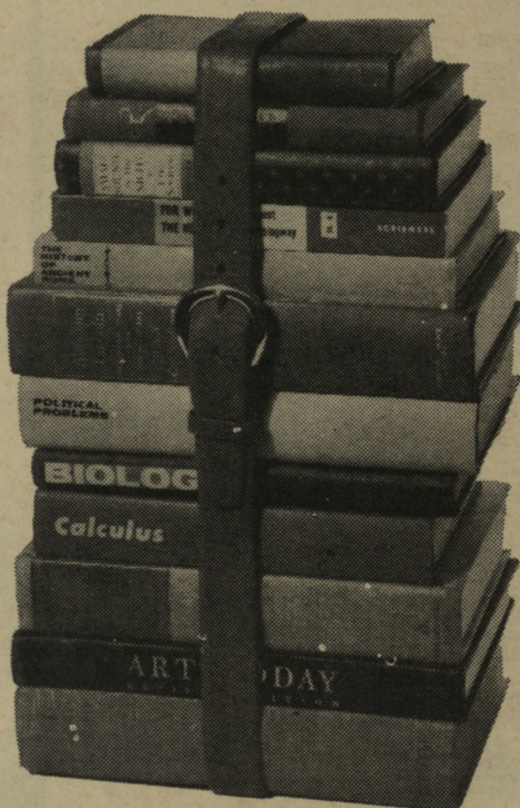

If you are an average student carrying around 15 units, you have the capacity to read in one short week every single textbook in every single course you are now carrying. And what's more, you'll understand the material you have read and will be able to retain it for a long, long, time.

If you are an average student, your present reading rate is around 350 words per minute. The Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics Institute guarantees to increase your reading efficiency to at least three times. Most graduates of Reading Dynamics learn to read from four to ten times faster. Doubtlessly, you yourself have doubts about your ability to develop this extraordinary reading skill. That's why a special student demonstration is being scheduled this week. You and your friends are asked to attend this free demonstration to find out first hand why Reading Dynamics works and how it can work for you.

At the campus demonstration you will be given a one-time only opportunity to enroll in the Reading Dynamics program at special student discount and terms.

You will be given a thorough description of the new Reading Dynamics program specifically oriented to the needs of the college student which emphasizes the reading of textbooks and technical material.

You will see a compelling documentary film featuring United States Senators, and an average teenager who dramatizes the fantastic reading breakthrough now known as Reading Dynamics.

You will discover in a provocative illustrated lecture that you have a capacity to read at staggering speeds with full comprehension.

You will be confronted with documentation on 30,000 Northern California Reading Dynamics students who at least tripled their reading speed in the short span of eight weeks.

You will actually be tested in the audience to determine your present level of reading speed. Only you will know your score.

You will join in a frank question and answer session designed to acquaint you thoroughly with the Reading Dynamics program.

You will be presented with a complete portfolio of informative materials discussing the amazing discovery of Reading Dynamics.

You will see a Reading Dynamics graduate reading a book he has never seen at astounding speeds, and give a detailed account of the contents of the book.

You will be given a chance to win a free scholarship to the Reading Dynamics Institute.

You will be stimulated.

You will be entertained.

You will be challenged.

You will have an evening as unforgettable as any you have ever had. The campus demonstration is entirely free. You can leave as anonymously as you entered with absolutely no obligation, except, of course, your first obligation which is to yourself and your own desire for self-improvement.
