

TEAGUE AND GOLDWATER - I

Many Republican and independent voters will vote for President Johnson in November because they disapprove of the record and philosophy of Barry Goldwater.

The supporters of the incumbent congressman, Charles Teague, say that Mr. Teague deserves to be returned to office on the basis of his record. Yet his voting record differs only slightly from that of Barry Goldwater. Like Goldwater, Teague has voted consistently against Kennedy-Johnson legislation. Even during the Eisenhower administration, he voted most of the time with the conservative wing of the Republican party rather than in support of the Eisenhower moderates.

In the present session of Congress, Senator Goldwater voted against the tax cut. So did Charles Teague. In the present session of Congress, Senator Goldwater voted against a number of programs for support of education, including medical school aid, college aid, vocational education and library aid. So did Charles Teague. In the present session of Congress, Senator Goldwater voted against the Housing Act. So did Charles Teague. In the present session of Congress, Senator Goldwater voted against development loans and the Area Redevelopment Act. So did Charles Teague.

In the present session of Congress, Senator Goldwater voted against trade expansion. So did Charles Teague. In the present session of Congress, Senator Goldwater voted against the Food and Agriculture Act and the Emergency Feed Grains bill. So did Charles Teague. In the present session of Congress, Senator Goldwater voted against the minimum wage bill. So did Charles Teague.

This district needs a congressman who will support the legislative program of the President rather than obstruct it. It needs a man whose outlook is constructive and forward-looking, not negative and reactionary. It needs a man whose philosophy is moderation, not Goldwaterism.
