

TRUSTEES MEETING— UPROAR ON QUARTERS

By SUSAN HULL
News Editor

Governor Edmund G. Brown lit the fire and Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke jumped in.

Figuratively, this was the situation at a meeting of the Board of Trustees in San Francisco yesterday. Kindled by the much debated question of quarters for semesters for the state colleges, board members took sides in the heated discussion over what one Trustee labeled a "formal charge from the Governor."

In a recent statement Brown blasted the Board of Trustees for "not acting as quickly as the University in converting to a year-round operation," within the state colleges.

Dumke opened the Joint Committee Meeting by backgrounding the state's efforts to follow the Master Plan for Higher Education. Completion date for the changeover to "year-round" operation has been set for 1975, as stated in the Master Plan.

The University of California's completion date has been set for 1971.

And this difference in completion dates has been one reason for controversy between the Governor's and Chancellor's offices.

In a vigorous plea for the board to consider requesting additional funds in meeting the changeover, Dumke noted the heavier teaching load carried by state college instructors compared to University instructors.

The State-wide Academic Senate, which represents all state college faculties, has continually fought against the installation of the quarter system.

Faculty members "have grave doubts about the conversion and want to see more data on pilot and experimental quarter system programs," said John Livingston, chairman of the Academic Senate.

"The changeover ultimately affects faculty loads which we do not want to see increased," he said.

Albert J. Ruffo, chairman of the Board of Trustees, denounced the suggestion by Dumke that obtaining additional funds should be a major consideration of the board.

If additional funds are obtained the Trustees will be able to move faster in completing the changeover.

"This kind of proposal to push up the date (of completion) has political and psychological tones," Ruffo said.

"There is a tremendous conflict between the University and state colleges. As soon as we remedy this, higher education in California will be in a much better position," he added.

Today the Trustees meet again in an effort to iron out this, among other major state college problems.

Gas mask parade startles observers

Snickers, cat-calls, double takes, and comments like "Oh, you're kidding" greeted SF State's latest war protestors.

Jeffery Resnik, a junior anthropology major, looking somewhat like the missing link in his surplus gas mask, and non-student Jim Robinson, paraded in front of the Commons and library yesterday morning.

Wearing surplus gas masks, carrying a sign warning "Buy Your Gas Mask Now — Prepare for Chemical Warfare in WW III," and carrying a mock bomb, the two protestors caused students to almost bump into each other as they passed the pair.

The first reaction to their protest came as they were walking towards the library. A male student in front of the Commons let out a shrill whistle and yelled, "Hey, walk down here. I want to see you do a trick."

Students walking in pairs at first smirked, laughed, and then fell to discussing the merits of the protest and the pros and cons of the Vietnamese conflict.

Marilou Irvine and Jean Pearson, both Freshmen, agreed the demonstrators drew their attention.

"It sure is different," Miss Irvine said.

Other comments included, "Pretty bizarre" "Are they going to bomb themselves now?"; and "Some things,

JEFFERY RESNICK
crusades against WW III

though seemingly ludicrous, might jar people into thought."

The two protestors are members of the American Society to Defend Children. Resnik said the demonstration was designed to warn of the increased use of napalm and other chemicals. He said they were also trying to "sort of frighten" the observers.

Resnik and Robinson paraded for about 45 minutes and then took a break. The goggles on their masks were steaming up, and it was hot. Fortunately, there was no gas around as they took off their masks. After a short pause, they resumed their protest.

SF State student jailed: three years for draft-dodging

LOS ANGELES AP—A federal judge sentenced an SF State student from Los Angeles to three years in prison for draft-dodging.

Denying an attorney's request for probation for Robert A. Lawrence, 21, District Judge Peirson M. Hall said:

"Probation might somewhat discourage American men fighting in Viet Nam, to think that one could establish his own moral code and thus evade the draft simply by saying after the time for induction that he had become a conscientious objector."

Lawrence was convicted of knowingly refusing to be inducted into the armed forces.

Evidence at his trial showed this sequence:

He registered with the Selective Service System in January 1964. Classified 1-A the following June, he was ordered to appear for induction June 22, 1965.

When summoned, Lawrence reportedly refused to submit to induction because of "personal moral convictions."

On June 28 he submitted to his local draft board in North Hollywood a special form for conscientious objectors. He asked a restudy of his classification.

In the form he expressed belief in a supreme being involving duties superior to those arising from any human relation.

U.S. Atty. Manuel L. Real, who prosecuted the case, said Lawrence did not indicate at this time affiliation with any religion or adopt any religious doctrine.

The board told Lawrence it could not review his classification and that he was still 1-A.

Lawrence said at his trial that he did not submit the conscientious objector form until June 28 because "my beliefs had not yet crystallized."

The aspects of teaching abroad will be a topic of discussion today by Francis T. Bailbraith, lecturer in secondary education.

The Student California Teachers Association is sponsoring the talk which will be held in Ed 202 at 12:30 p.m., and is designed for those who are interested in travelling, living the Asian way or seeing foreign action personally.

Skiers set for winter camp-out

Forty-four ski buffs and snow bunnies heading for the cold country right after Christmas have five days of hand warming exercises, lessons in snow etiquette (camp clean-up) and how-to-do-it-without-breaking-a-leg sessions all planned for them.

It's called Winter Camp or more technically PE 2.37 and Recreation 2.37 — worth one unit of credit. And it only costs $33.

The annual recreation fiasco includes transportation, room and board at the Sierraville Hotel and ski equipment and lessons at the ski lodge of Vic York, assistant professor of recreation, at Yuba Pass.

In order to participate in the ski trip one must be a student and have enrolled in the classes during registration. Three on campus class meetings must be attended. The next class meeting for the Christmas trip is Monday, Dec. 6 at 1 p.m. in Gym 217. A final payment of $23 must be paid to the Associated Students cashier in Hut T-1 by Dec. 9.

Members of the PE and Recreation department faculty and their assistants participate in the week's activities as instructors and trip organizers.

Aside from the Christmas trip Dec. 27 to Jan. 1, there will also be a Winter Camps during semester break, Jan. 24-29.

Thick, warm clothing, bedding, towels and ski boots are a must. Those who have not signed up for the trip will have to wait until next September to register.

The class has a long, long waiting list of students hoping some already signed will drop out.

Forum discusses frosh courses

Five professors will discuss a situation facing all English graduate students today at an English Forum meeting.

The discussion will center around the qualifications and problems involved in teaching freshman English reading and writing courses.

Bernice Biggs, Clifford Josephson, Niel Snortum, Herbert Kaufman, and Robert Tyler, all of the English department, will lead discussion and answer questions at the meeting, to be held at 71 Delmar St. at 3:00 p.m.

Conservatism --talk today

The historical and contemporary philosophy of American conservatism will be discussed today by Erik von Kuehnelt-Leddihn, a prominent conservative observer of international affairs.

The talk entitled "Meditations on an American Conservatism" is a reflection of Kuehnelt-Leddihn's political philosophy and a culmination of his experiences in world problems.

At 16 he wrote for various periodicals and newspapers including the London "Spectator." When Kuehnelt-Leddihn was twenty he was sent to Russia as a correspondent for a Hungarian daily.

In addition to teaching in both England and the United States, Kuehnelt-Leddihn has traveled throughout the United States and has visited 53 countries outside Europe.

Following his talk in the Main Auditorium at 12:30 p.m. he will appear in the Gallery Lounge from 2 to 4 p.m. for a coffee hour.

Business talk by patrol agency VP

E. L. (Buz) Sawyer, vice president of the Associate Security Agency (ASA) of Palo Alto, will discuss the growth of small business and the profitability of a service industry, at the Business Club meeting, today at 12:30 in BSS 202.

ASA has about 350 full time employees.

It provides uniformed guard service for manufacturing plants and patrol service for merchants.

It also markets fire and burglar alarm systems and fire extinguishers, which it buys from a manufacturer and installs in plants, warehouses, and stores.

Afro-leader speaks

I. B. Tabata, president of the Unity Movement of South Africa, will be the speaker at a meeting jointly sponsored by the African Students Union, Negro Students Association, Arab-American Association, and College Y, today at noon in HLL 135.

In 1961, in the face of mounting political tensions, the leadership of the Unity Movement made Tabata its president.

Luck enabled him to escape continual police pursuit. In May 1963, he was advised that he should make his escape, since under the 90-Day Detention Act arrest was imminent. He escaped through Natal

CIP and roaming teenagers

(Editor's Note: This is the second of three articles examining the new Community Involvement Program. While yesterday's dealt with the CIP in general, today's article focuses on a specific project—teenage gangs.)

By R. J. DUTRA
A teenager today without money is heading for trouble. Ken Johnson, Community involvement coordinator, explained the teenager who can't afford cigarettes gets branded as a "leach" by his contemporaries.

If he can't afford bus fare, he gets a tardy record at school and faces expulsion. If he has no money for a show or coke, he must stay on the streets or steal.

SF State's new Community

Involvement Program (CIP) is working on several projects that deal with the moneyless, street roaming teenagers in the Mission, North Beach and Chinatown Districts.

Johnson has been working six months with a gang in the Mission District called the "Little Yards."

He said the boys, whose average age is 16, are "borderline delinquents." Their older brothers belong to the Yards, Johnson said, and "they're really . . . tough guys."

"They haven't got in any trouble lately," Johnson said about the Little Yards, adding 240 Mission District teenagers recently attended a dance and there wasn't one fight.

Johnson said another CIP coordinator, Del Sonsten, is working with teenage gangs in North Beach and Chinatown. Again the program, Johnson said, "tries to get them off the street."

CIP is also working with or looking into neighborhood improvement groups in Hunters Point, the Haight - Ashbury District, Hays Valley, North Beach, and the Western Addition.

Johnson said with neighborhood groups the CIP tries to "find out what the people's gripes are" and "to get the people together on what they think is the problem."

When the people know their problems, Johnson continued, the CIP tries to organize them into an active political group.

This gives people in neighborhoods "some security, self respect and integrity." Johnson said, besides showing them their vote has some meaning.

The main problem CIP workers run into when working on neighborhood improvement projects, Johnson said, is that "you don't know what the problems are — you don't live there."

A CIP program, beginning this week, will bring teenagers with educational problems into contact with a college student.

The first of these programs was held Monday. About eight teenagers visited the campus. Each accompanied an SF

State student through a regular college day.

It is hoped this program will encourage teenagers to continue their high school education and possibly orient them toward a college education.

A lively 'Winters Tale' unraveled here tonight

William Shakespeare's "Winters Tale" opens tonight for a three-night run in the Little Theatre at 8:30 p.m.

The production is sponsored by the Graduate Drama Association, which hopes to raise money for scholarships. Admission is $1 for the general public and 50 cents for students.

"Winters Tale" is one of the lesser known Shakespearean dramas but reputedly contains some of Shakespeare's finest poetry.

The plot is lively. A jealous king suspects his wife is messing around with a friend so he throws her in jail. Her friends sneak her out and convince the King she had died of grief whereupon they berate him for his cruelty.

The heroine, who is a friend of the queen's, declares that she will create a statue of the supposedly dead queen. Actually, the queen stands very still until a specified time when she comes to life. Everybody is then very happy and they romp around the woods. Once again, all's well that ends well.

Faculty talk: 'Revolution'

"A Quiet Revolution" is the topic of tonight's Faculty Lecture Series presentation.

SF State Activities Counselor Claire Salop will speak in the fifth of the "College Without Walls" series at 7:30 p.m. in the Frederic Burk School auditorium. Admission is free.

No money, so no more Friday coffee bargains

The nerve-soothing TGIF price for coffee—five cents—is no longer being offered by the Commons.

A tottering profit margin in the Foundation's budget and a $1,500 loss in October, the trial month, were cited by Commons manager Richard Mahoric as reasons for the termination of the lower price.

The Commons, hoping to build a closer relationship with students through the periodic nickel price, found it impossible to maintain it on a weekly basis.

Mahoric, working with AS President Terry McGann, still hopes to instigate "Some special deal" for students each Friday, but no definite plans have been made.

Students will have to wait until the Foundation has more money to make Fridays cause for thanks.

Gymnastics team may be best ever

The 1965 gymnastic season opens this Saturday with the prospect of SF State having its best team ever.

Coach Jerry Wright has 14 candidates, the largest in recent years, including some outstanding performers.

Leading the team will be two junior college transfers, Pete Gruber and Dave Voris. Gruber was the northern California high school all-around champion when he attended Sequoia High. Voris, from Capuchino, is rated a top performer on the parallel bars, still rings, and long horse.

Returning lettermen include Bob Sakai, Larry Booth, Sam Cobb, Tom Fester, Al Harmon, Don Hughes and Bill Walton.

Sakai placed third last year in the Far Western Conference all-around event. He also was the team's leading scorer last year.

Cobb was third in the FWC trampoline competition, and seventh in the NCAA university division regional championships.

Fester, who according to Wright was last year's most consistent performer, will be strong in the parallel bars, side horse, and still rings competition.

Wright also expects outstanding performances from Booth in the floor exercise, Harmon on the trampoline, and Hughes on the still rings.

Wright also counts on Walton, and newcomers Ken Canada, Chuck Gibson, Bob Hutchinson, and Mike Doody to give the Gators the added depth necessary for a successful season.

Last year SF State finished second in the FWC behind Sacramento State. Since Sacramento has its entire club returning, it should be favored to capture the title again this season.

The Gators lost only captain Gary Fry, who is an assistant coach this year, from last season's squad.

Wright is optimistic about his team's chances:

"Barring injuries to key personnel, we have the prospects to make this the best season we've ever had."

The Gators have 12 meets on their schedule, including five at home against the University of Nevada, Stanford, San Jose State, Sacramento

State, and the Western Open, which will be the first home meet, this Saturday.
