

MAJOR IN CHILD DEVELOPMENT

Fresno State College offers an interdisciplinary major leading to the Bachelor of Science Degree in Child Development. The major is appropriate for students interested in vocational opportunities based on children. It may lead to employment in the areas of preschool, child center, private nursery, early childhood and elementary teaching, special programs for disadvantaged children, special education, adult education programs, and other child-related vocations. Interested students should consult the Elementary Education Department for assistance in program planning and assignment of advisers.

The curriculum is designed to provide insight on children in a variety of subcultures and social contexts. Courses may be selected from several departments to provide theoretical bases and sequential varied experiences in the study of children. The program includes a behavioral science base from psychology, sociology, and anthropology; home economics courses in child development, family relationships, and nutrition; and courses on young children which are offered in the departments of art, music, physical education, social work, and speech.

The major consists of twelve basic courses and three selected alternates from anthropology, psychology, and sociology.

	Units
Art 120T (Studio-Education), H Ec 39, 40, 131, 139, 161, Music 155, P E 152, Psych 119, S Wel 122T (Child Welfare), Soc 165, C D 102	35
Anth 113 or Psych 145 or Soc 162	3
Elect from: Psych 111, 150T (Problems in Personality), 152, 163, 167, 168, Soc 111, 143, 148, 151, 163	6-7
	44-45

Under the restrictions of the major, students may make approved adaptations in their programs to fulfill specific needs and career objectives. Students planning to complete an elementary credential before 1973 will need nine additional units in upper division behavioral sciences prior to the completion of the fifth year. (See brochure on Child Development, Elementary Education Department, for additional information.)

CLASSICAL STUDIES COURSES

Although the college does not offer a bachelor's degree program in classical studies, there are many courses in several disciplines which are concerned with this subject. By appropriate selection of courses in the area as electives or within the requirements of various majors, a student can secure a useful background of study as preparation either for graduate study or for his vocation.

The following list includes the courses most directly concerned. For further information consult the Coordinator of Classical Studies, Dr. Stephen Benko, Department of History:

- Art 5. History of Art (4)
- Art 105T. Topics in Art History: The Ancient World (3)
- Drama 185. Seminar: History of the Theatre (3)
- English 112. World Literature: Ancient (4)
- English 113. World Literature: Medieval (4)
- English 169T. Forms of Literature: Comedy (4)
- Mythology (4)
- English 191T. Supervised Independent Reading: World Literature, Ancient-Medieval (1-4)
- Foreign Languages
  - Greek 1A-B. Elementary Greek (3-3)
  - Greek 148. Greek Literature in Translation (3)
  - Latin 1A-B. Elementary Latin (3-3)
  - Latin 3A-B. Intermediate Latin (3-3)