4. Dr. Crisco and Dr. Wang discussed the changes they've proposed to the M.A. in English: Composition Theory Option. The option name is being changed to Rhetoric and Writing Studies to better reflect the expertise of the current state of the field and needs of students. Several courses were also updated to better incorporate the expertise of current faculty: English 278T Seminar in Composition Studies was added as a core course. The course units for English 282 were increased to be commensurate with the number of semesters graduate students are engaged as Teaching Associates. Two units were added to thesis, raising this from 2 units to 4 as most students are spending two semesters to complete their thesis. Finally the title and catalog description for English

270 Writing Workshop for Teachers were updated. These changes, and the corresponding changes to the catalog, have already been approved by the Graduate Curriculum Subcommittee. Dr. Crisco and Dr. Wang left at 2:40 p.m.
