SILENT LOVE

To say I love you
Were it nothing more than empty words
I would shout it to the world

To say I love you
is a silent sound that breaks the barriers of the night
While I lie silent in my sleep

To say I love you
Is to see your face
Your eyes, your lips, your smile
In every billboard that I read

To say I love you
Is to feign indifference
When, before him, you approach me

To say I love you
Is to say NOTHING at all.

TRUTH

Do not carve a saddened face
When realization of a feared
Truth beckons on your thought.
Not only live to love the Wonders of this life, but also Strengthen mind and frame,
For the weight of heavy truth
Requires strong support.

THE BLIND OWL OF THE BARRIO

I heard the cry of pain and agony

So I kept on walking
I turned, I looked and saw no one in pain

And I went on talking
About love and goodness

And of God's forgiveness
But, a thing so strange
Each time I pass the street, I hear
The same strange cry of agony
As of someone in deep pain
But then again
And of dropping coins in empty baskets

I turn, and all in vain
I try to see someone in pain
