Dear Squire:

As an old and long-time friend may I respectfully call to your attention the fact (which has been called to my attention by members of the Women's Division) that something is missing from your otherwise excellent article, "Something Is Missing On Johnson Slate".

In the long list of men (and the Dragon Lady who, of course, is always mentioned) there is no mention that the party officers, who are the Women's Division's elected leaders, are also on the delegation: Charlotte Danforth, Northern California Women's Chairman; Jane Tolmach, Southern California Women's Chairman; and of course myself. (Jane and I are also members of the Delegation Selection Committee.)

It's of no importance now, but it's of importance for the future, and for future women's chairmen.

Women contribute a great deal, as you know, and their role in politics is rapidly expanding. I honestly believe they're a strong force for clean politics.

After all it's a man's world--and look what they've done with it!

If there's any way in which the recognition of women could be increased, I'd be grateful for your advice and help--as always!

Best to you,

Eleanor Fowle
State Women's Chairman
