

ternational Studies 295 is required during the last semester. Both courses apply toward degrees. For further information, see International Study Programs—Graduate Courses.

Depending on the quality of his work in the first semester and his ultimate purpose, the graduate student may at the end of the first semester continue in one of the following directions: (1) If he has chosen a new field or if his undergraduate work was not equivalent to a Fresno State College bachelor's degree, he may petition to complete bachelor's degree requirements. (2) If he wishes to select only those courses which have greatest value for him, regardless of degree requirements, he may follow an individually planned and approved sequence of courses leading to a Certificate of Attendance. (3) If his first semester's work gives evidence of probable success in master's degree study, he may seek admission to a master's degree program. Whichever alternative the student from abroad selects, appropriate course work taken during the first semester may be accepted for credit toward this goal.

FOREIGN GRADUATE STUDENT ADMISSION

Graduate students from abroad follow the same procedures as all other graduate students except that, beginning in spring 1968, the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) is required of all students whose native language is not English. Exception may be made for students transferring from American colleges and universities with grades that demonstrate full competency in English. TOEFL scores, applications, and academic documents should reach the Fresno State College Admissions Office at least four months before the semester for which admission is desired. TOEFL is administered at various centers throughout the world. For further information, write to the Test Office, Fresno State College.

Graduate students with a total score of less than 450 on TOEFL will not ordinarily be admitted to graduate study at Fresno State College. Exception may be made for students who are otherwise admissible and who satisfactorily complete an approved intensive program in English as a foreign language. The college offers such a program beginning the second week in July. This intensive program should not be confused with the International Studies program required of all students from abroad.
