It was sure some start of a cruise that we had! Oh well, this was cruise and cruise was... After carefully missing any bridges along the way we arrived at our first glamorous port, Sacramento.

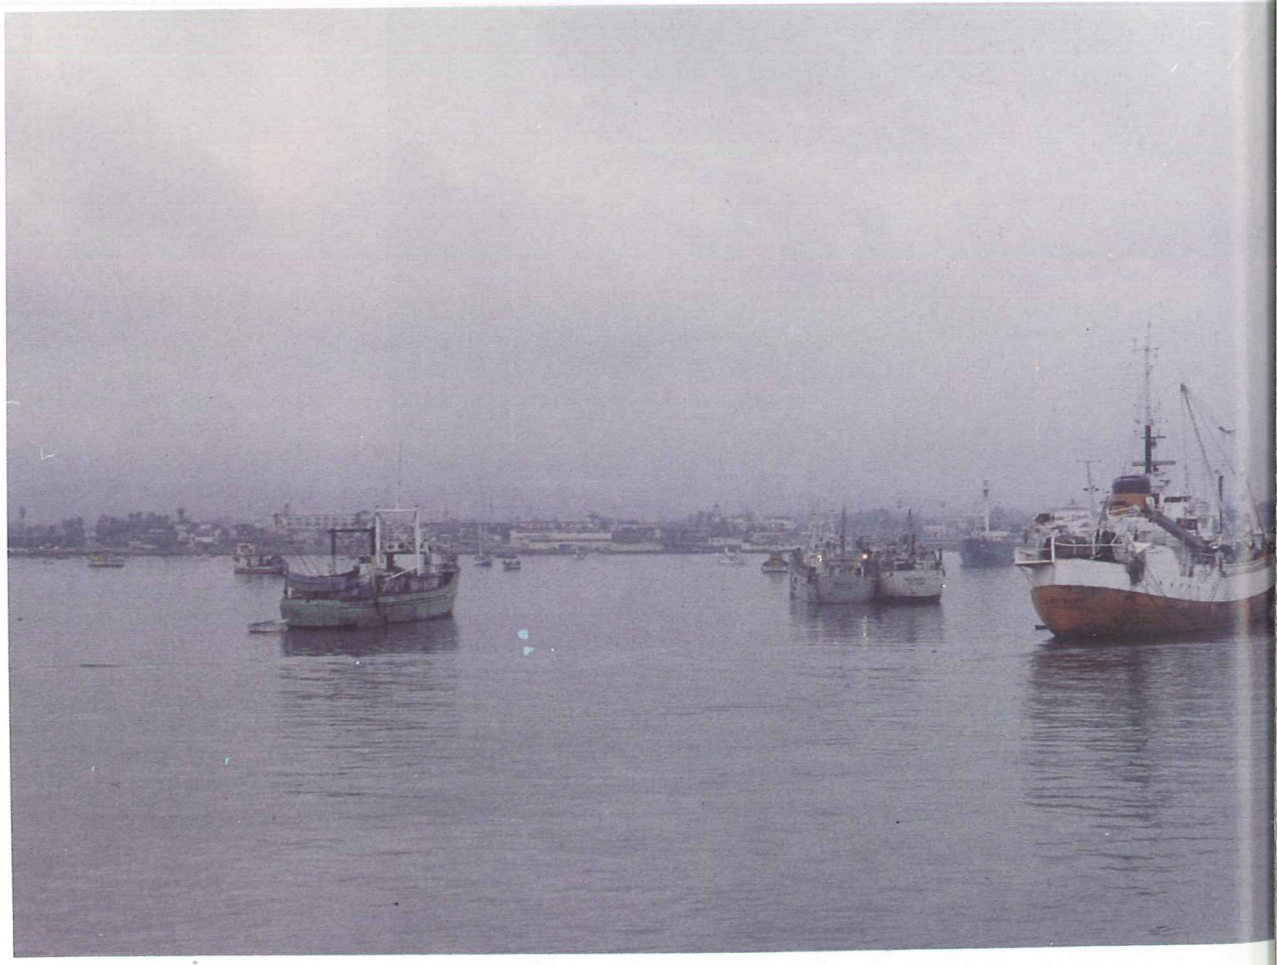

What is a cruise without adventure, and what is transferring fuel oil without spilling some. As good as a breakfast without our Captain "Crunch".

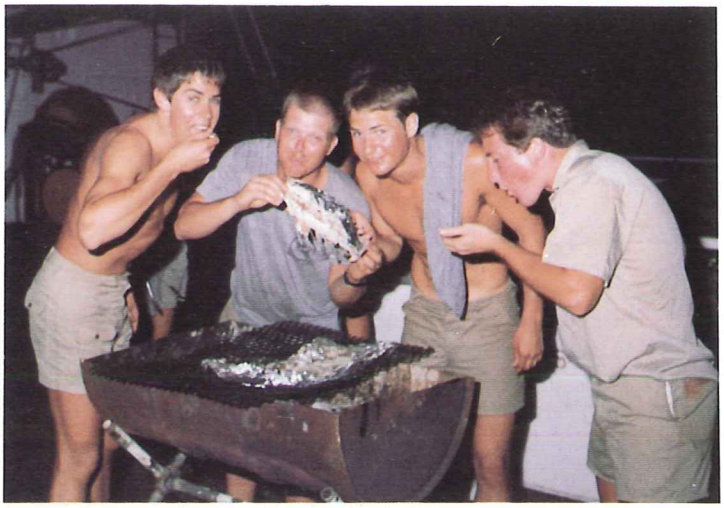

There were many sights to see along our course, from Panama to Seattle. Each port different from the last, but whoever heard of a paint locker watch? No worry though, he's probably watching the Gars pour more thinner.

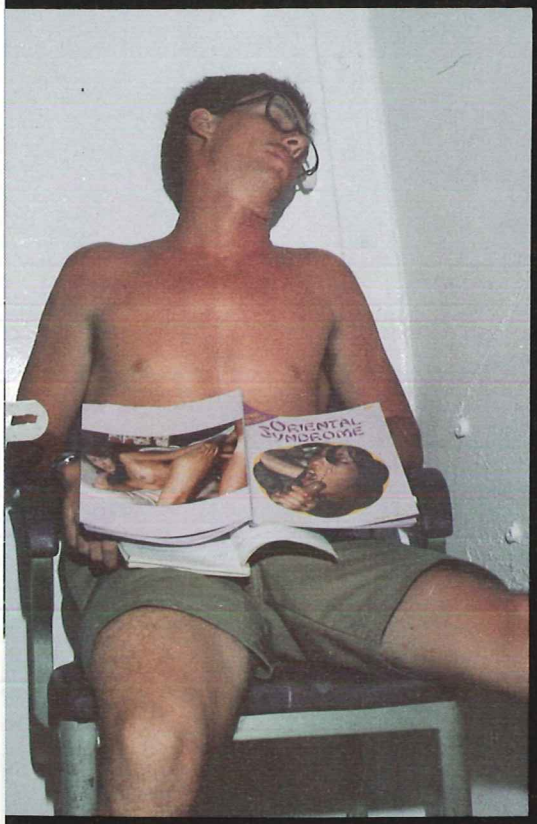

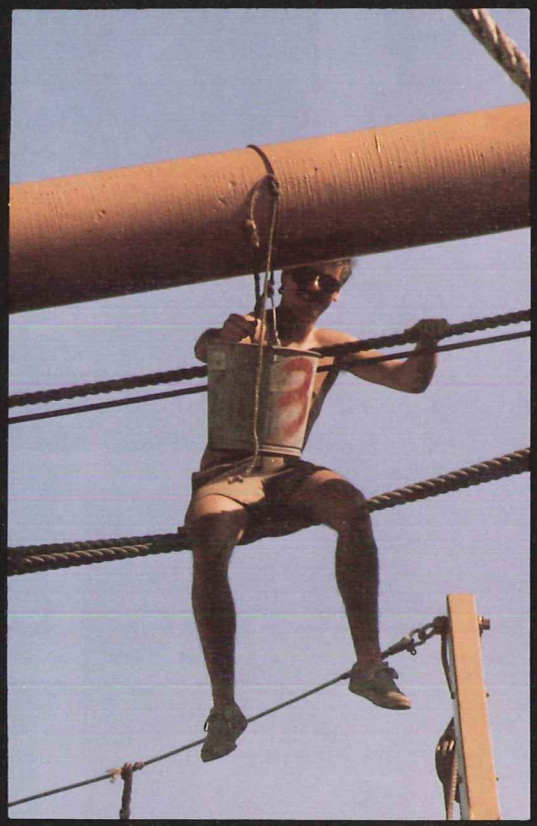

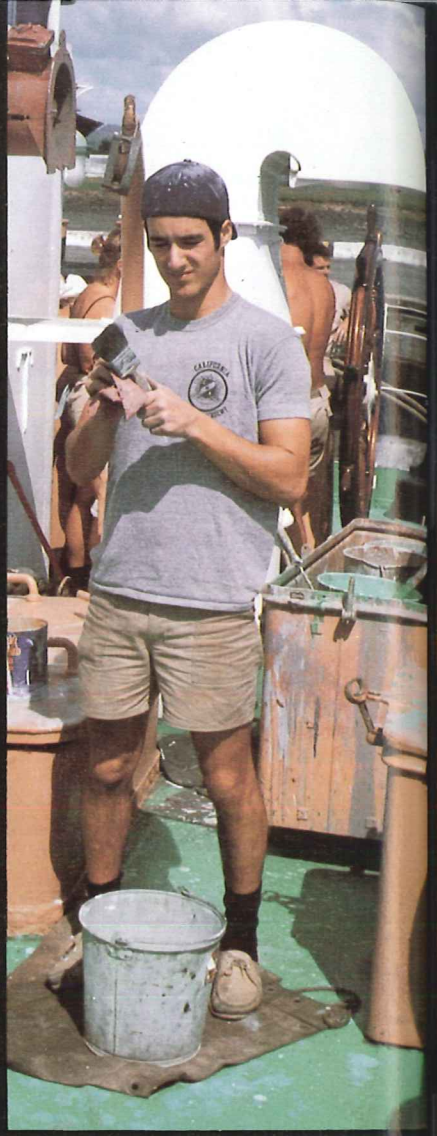

The entertainment wasn't like it use to be, though how did we get the new chef?

CMA rocking and rolling

Life at sea teaches us that we must work hard together. What we gain from this is very special indeed. Not only do we learn to have trust and confidence in our shipmates . . .

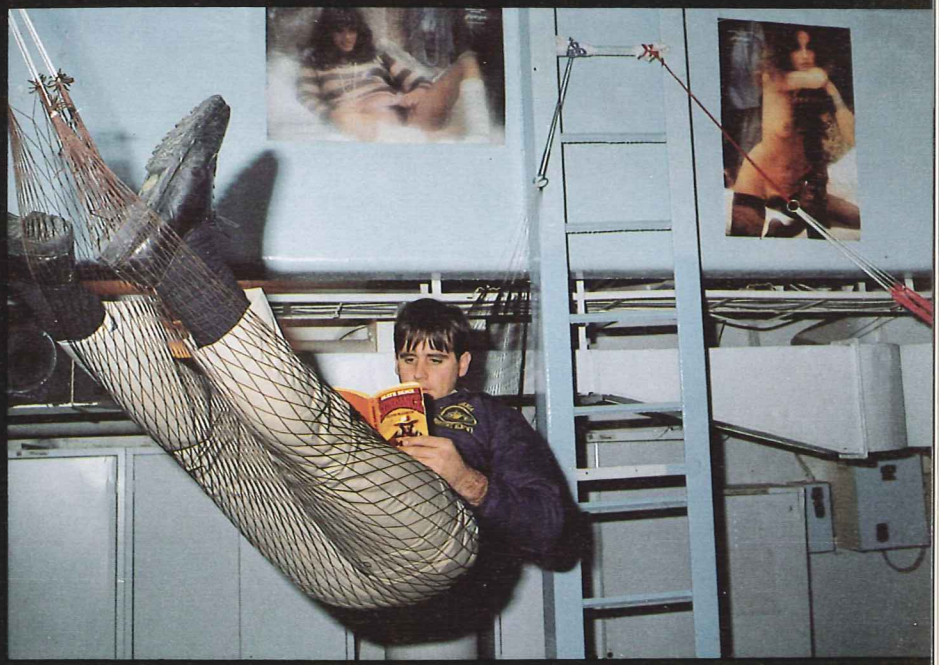

But that life is much too short not to be able to play and laugh.

With the brakeman poised on the windlass we arrived in Panama. But we were not the only thirsty wanders to happen by this little port. The United States Marines showed up straight from out of the jungle. Glasses were raised in friendship and stories swapped. Who will ever forget that Sunday football game.

Cruise gives us memories which we will carry for all our lives. Some of these memories we cannot control, others are controlled by who we are. Still there are memories made from what we ourselves can make. We must learn to make these memories, life at sea shows us how.

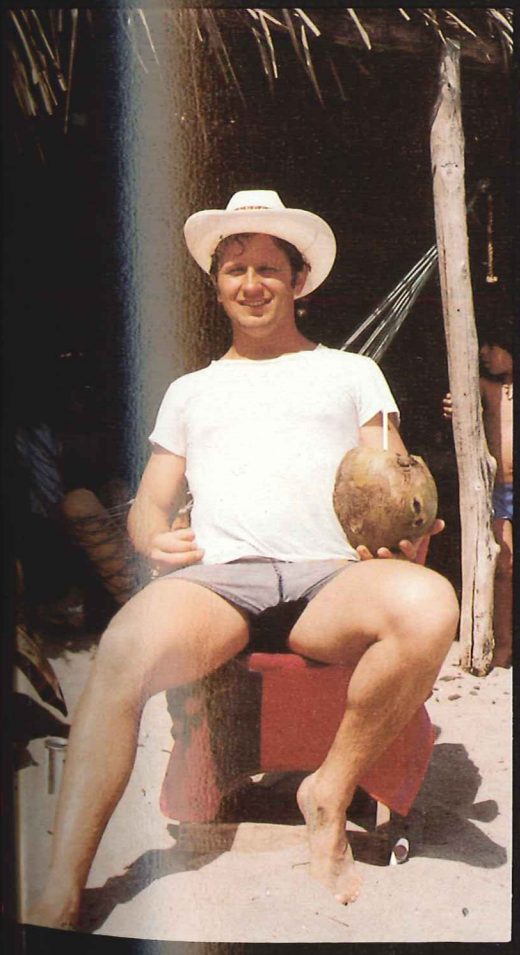

"I don't wanna see the fertilizer factory, which way is it to the playa?"

Cruise picked up a bit at Lazaro Cardenas, except that instead of getting to watch female dancers, we got to watch some old men dance. But what the heck, the price of the food and beer was right.

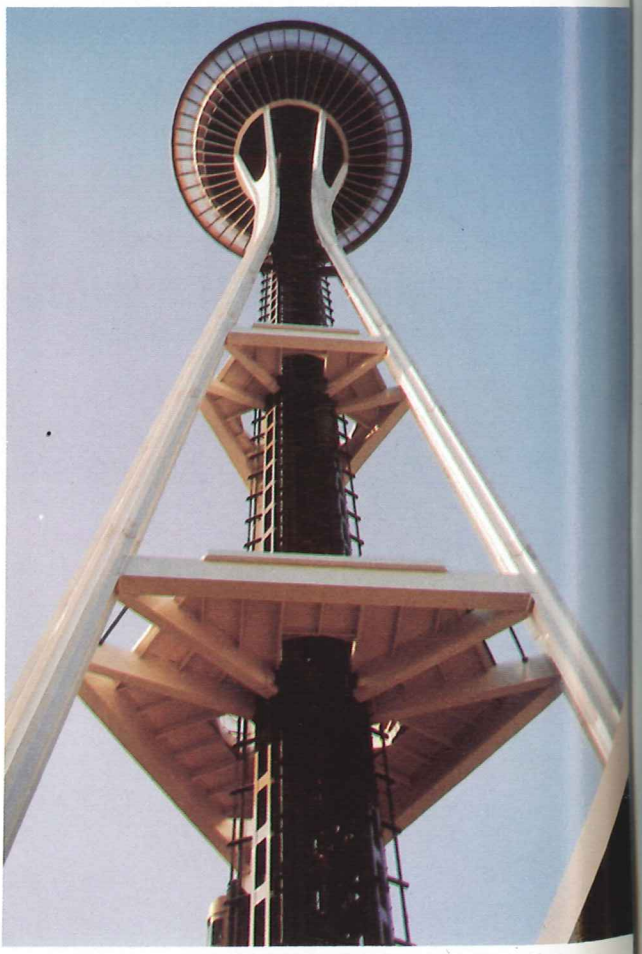

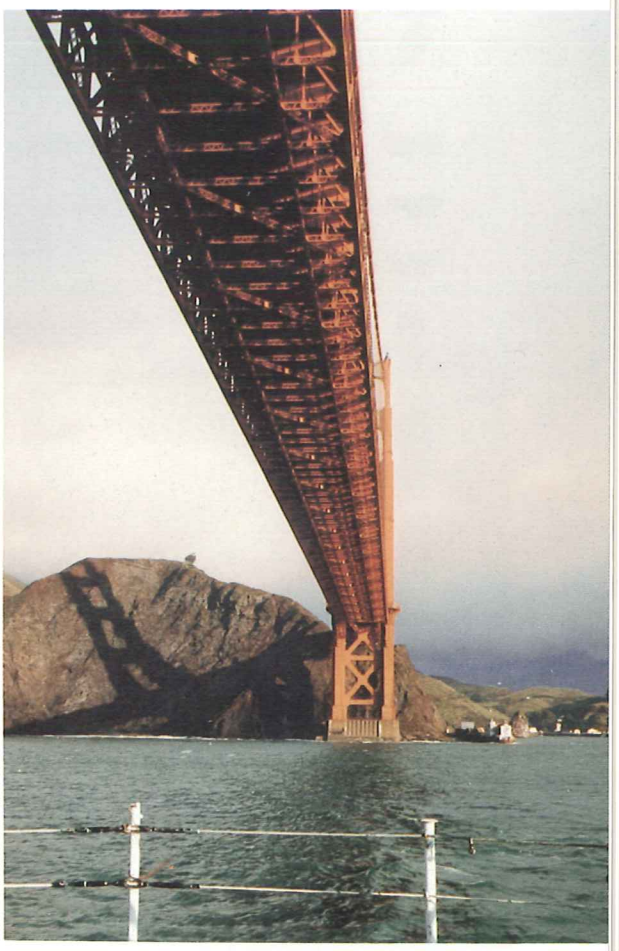

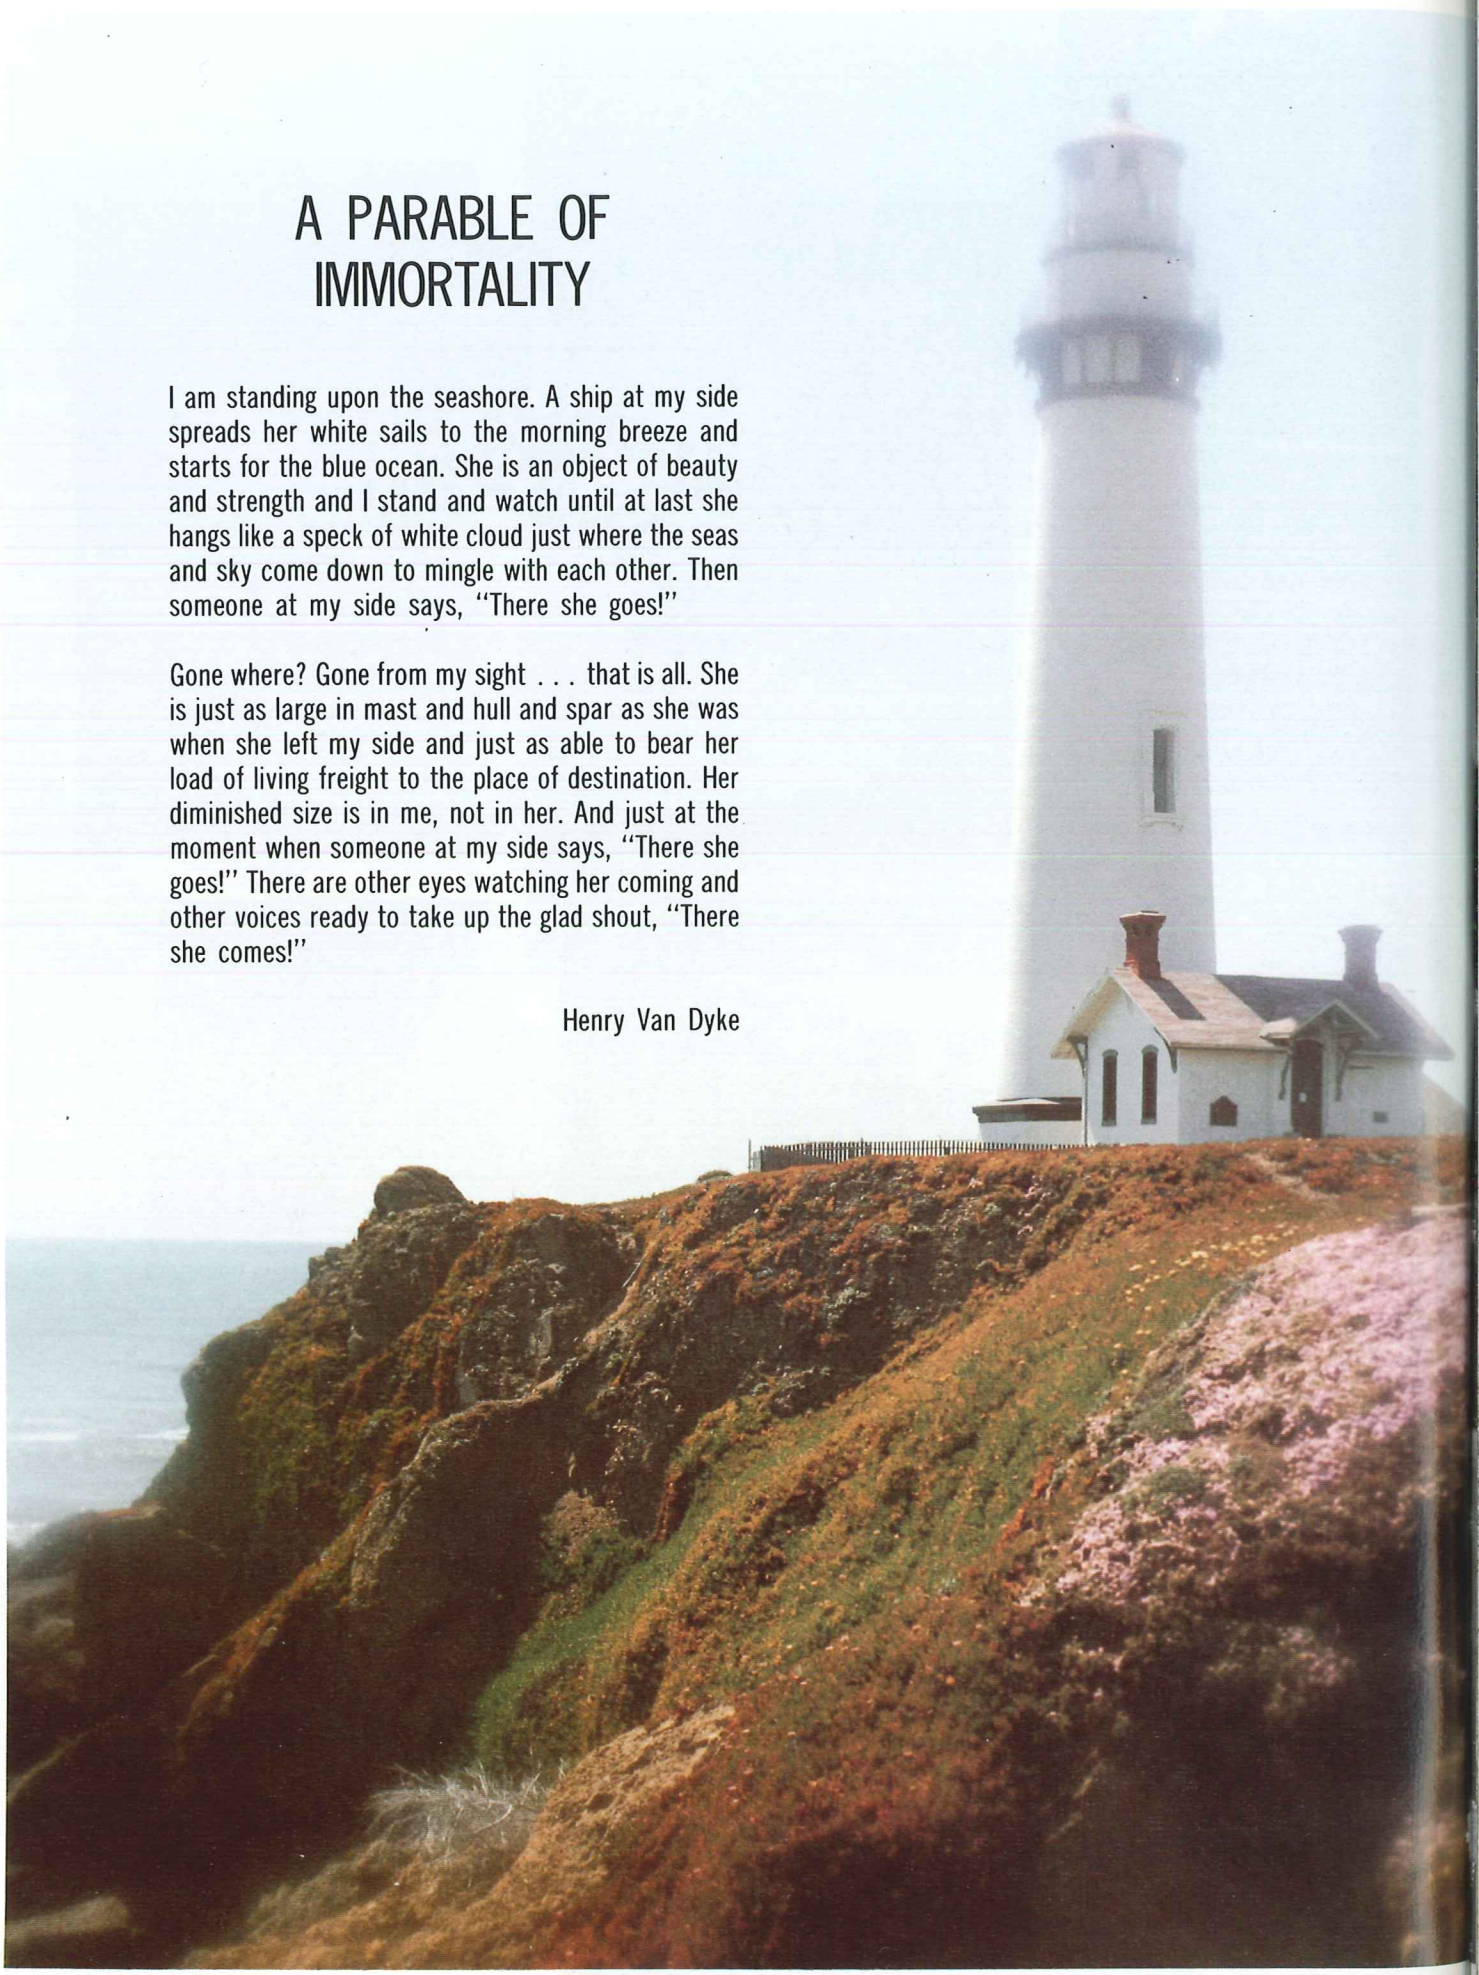

A PARABLE OF IMMORTALITY

I am standing upon the seashore. A ship at my side spreads her white sails to the morning breeze and starts for the blue ocean. She is an object of beauty and strength and I stand and watch until at last she hangs like a speck of white cloud just where the seas and sky come down to mingle with each other. Then someone at my side says, "There she goes!"

Gone where? Gone from my sight . . . that is all. She is just as large in mast and hull and spar as she was when she left my side and just as able to bear her load of living freight to the place of destination. Her diminished size is in me, not in her. And just at the moment when someone at my side says, "There she goes!" There are other eyes watching her coming and other voices ready to take up the glad shout, "There she comes!"

Introduction:

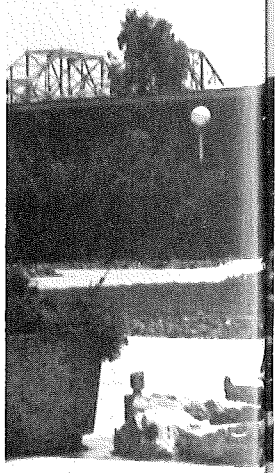

If someone came to the California Maritime Academy without any prior briefing as to what it is all about, they would think we are all somewhat touched. We cut our hair, wear uniforms, put up with a somewhat outdated discipline code, to prepare us for a job market that no longer exists. At best, the jobs now available on large ocean going ships are scarce. Many of us will find ourselves shoreside in marine related business, power plants, consulting firms and a myriad of other positions. The question that arises is why?

California Maritime Academy not only prepares us for sea but in a more real sense, prepares us for life. With what we learn here, we are much better equipped to handle the many hardships encountered in everyday living.

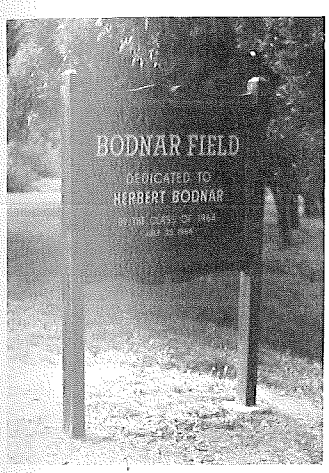

We learn to appreciate authority and to get the most out of things. The friendships we have gained here are not the usual transient college type, they will last a lifetime. More than an other institution of higher education, we learn to rely on ourselves and each other. Most colleges are four years of partying, studying and a total avoidance of reality. We are constantly looking ahead to what we will do after graduation and how we will accomplish goals we have set. It seems that we take a more realistic outlook on what life has to offer us.

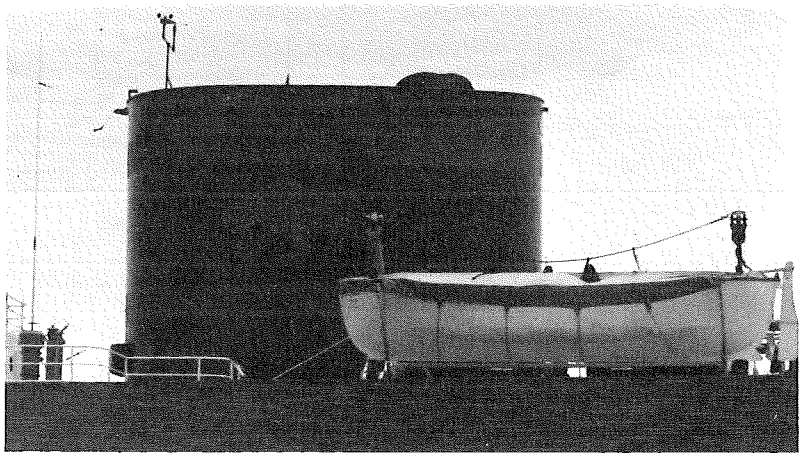

Our ability to muddle through not matter how bleak the week, is also a result of our sense of humor. We are able to laugh at ourselves and each other. We learn to realize that no matter how big the disappointment or how devastating the defeat, we will live. This is the way to survival at CMA, keep a sober outlook but also be able to deal with catastrophes.

To bring this all into perspective let me say: We are professionals of the highest degree. Our education is priceless. Some of the other things we endure are superfluous and are treated as such. We have learned to take the bad with the good and to separate the useful from the worthless.

BODNAR FIELD
DEDICATED TO
HERBERT BODNAR

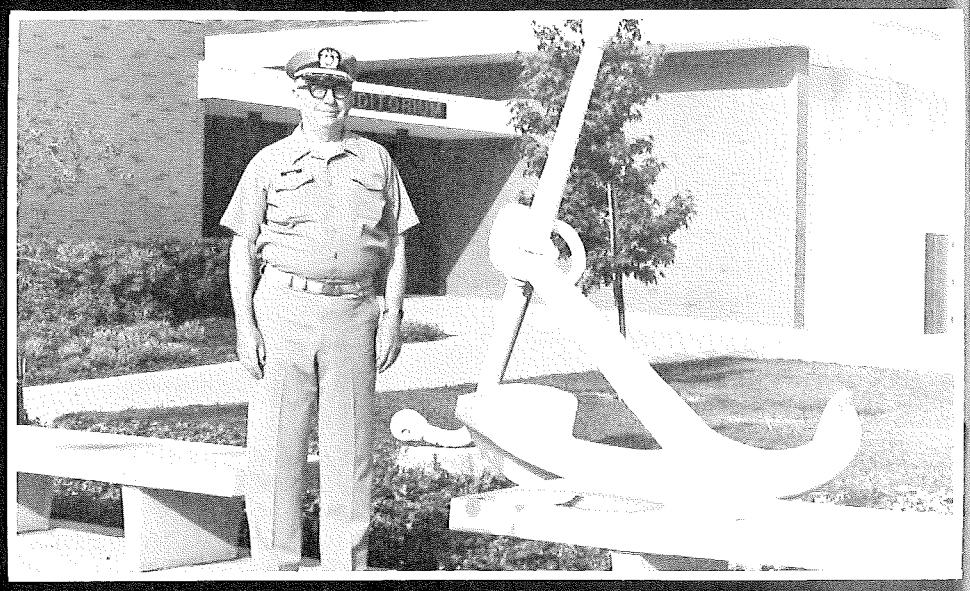

TO: Mr. Fred B. Newton

The reputation of any school rests upon the faculty. At the California Maritime Academy we have been fortunate in having as our Navigation Instructor a true professional who has given us confidence that we can use the High Seas to find any port and arrive on time. We are embarking on our careers as Fred B. Newton packs his seabag after twenty-three years on this faculty and twenty-six years in the Navy. We wish him a happy and successful retirement, and dedicate this Hawsepipe to him with respect and affection.

TO THE GRADUATING CLASS OF 1982:

Having completed the recently modernized, four year, accredited program, you have had the benefit of the finest maritime education and training in the history of the Academy. Even more valuable than the professional skills and knowledge that you have acquired, your training has stressed leadership, self-reliance, and acceptance careers. You now face the challenges ahead of you as officers in the most technologically advanced Merchant Marine in the world. You have talents already tested. You will have ample opportunities to use them; a computer revolution now taking place in the maritime industry, desperately needs innovative ideas in the area of cost-effective management. As you progress, the opportunities and challenges will multiply.

The complexities and sophistication of the modern U.S. Maritime Industry demand well educated, trained, and highly competent Merchant Marine officers. Some of you will be true high flyers who will advance rapidly through the industry. I believe that the majority of you will be adaptive, innovative, high performers who will accept the risks of responsibility and will rise to the top. Among you will be the leaders of the maritime industry at the advent of the twenty-first century.

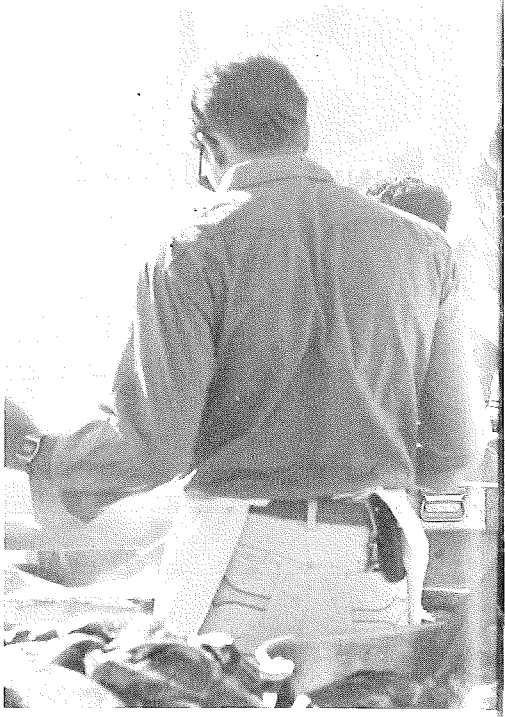

I am confident that each of you will measure up to your tasks. I challenge you to continue growing and developing and to become the leaders in tomorrow's maritime industry.

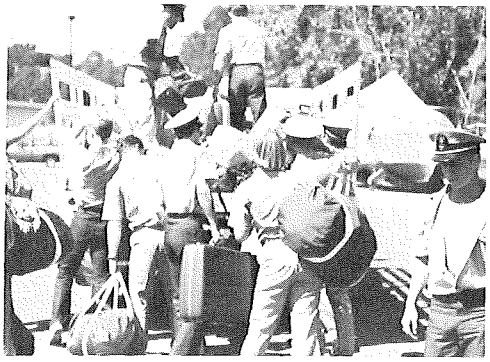

Sincerely,

J. P. RIZZA
Rear Admiral, USMS

Desolation (CMA)
Within my room, within my soul
I lie here tonight
Enveloped by a whispering glow of candle light.
My heart is weighted
My brain gropes blindly
As it struggles to draw the essence of my grief.
Hidden with the depths
of dissipated space,
It must be brought to rest
upon the surface clear.
Watching the golden flame
I must transpress beyond, fusing mind and will
'til light and I are one.
Gradually reaching out though, waning now and then,
still, I'll keep on burning,
and so must other men

If I had to do it over over again, I wouldn't. There is a lot of opportunity to learn at this school, but that opportunity is wasted because the students spend too much time trying to survive to learn anything. The repressive tactics of the administration, instead of building maturity, demotivates the students and gives them a warped view of authority. The only good thing to come out of this school is the friends I have made. They were the only reason I was able to make it through. When I look back at this school I laugh, for it is truly a joke.

I find the present state existing at the Academy to be strikingly analogous to the present world situation. The masses stand idly by while the few in power exploit them to no end. In quenching their own selfish lusts, the incompetent power possessing beings crush all opposition and then justify the whole ordeal by impressing upon everyone around them that they alone are invariably correct in their decisions. I find it impossible to believe that these suppressive individuals will ever cease this madness by their own accord. What is needed is unified understanding and unified action. Without this, we will be the victimes of our own APATHY, and truly deserve every unfairness that we will surely be subjected to.

These aren't actually my last words because I've still got 240 days to go until May 22, 1982. But you couldn't print what I'll say that day anyway. It has been said that nothing ever comes easy. — At CMA nothing ever comes. My advice to the following classes is don't get mad, just GET EVEN. And then forget this place, but remember your friends. To the Class of '82, I'd like to say it for some reason (like your visiting Russia) CMA enters your thoughts. Last Words:

CMA does not need to be an ordeal. There is no need to perpetuate the archaic and repressive system it has become. It could be a place of higher education with high morale and happy alumni that are proud of their school.

I want to thank all the engineering instructors particularly the Chief, Mr. Behm, Mr. Dean, Mr. Ludwig and all the rest for their genuine concern and dedication. Also, Gail Cooney for her cheerfulness and consideration; you see, CMA isn't all bad. I also want to thank MA and DA, Michael, Lydia, Andrew, and Bob & Alice Pursell for their undieing support.

Lastly, to all of you still here, keep with it and don't let the system beat you. What you are getting is worth it and demands all your attention and guts.

I have changed in my five years here, some changes have been good other's not. CMA has affected me forever.

To all the lifelong friends I have made here, thanks. And all I can say is I wish Rick was graduating with me.

MATSON
A CENTURY OF SERVICE
1882-1982

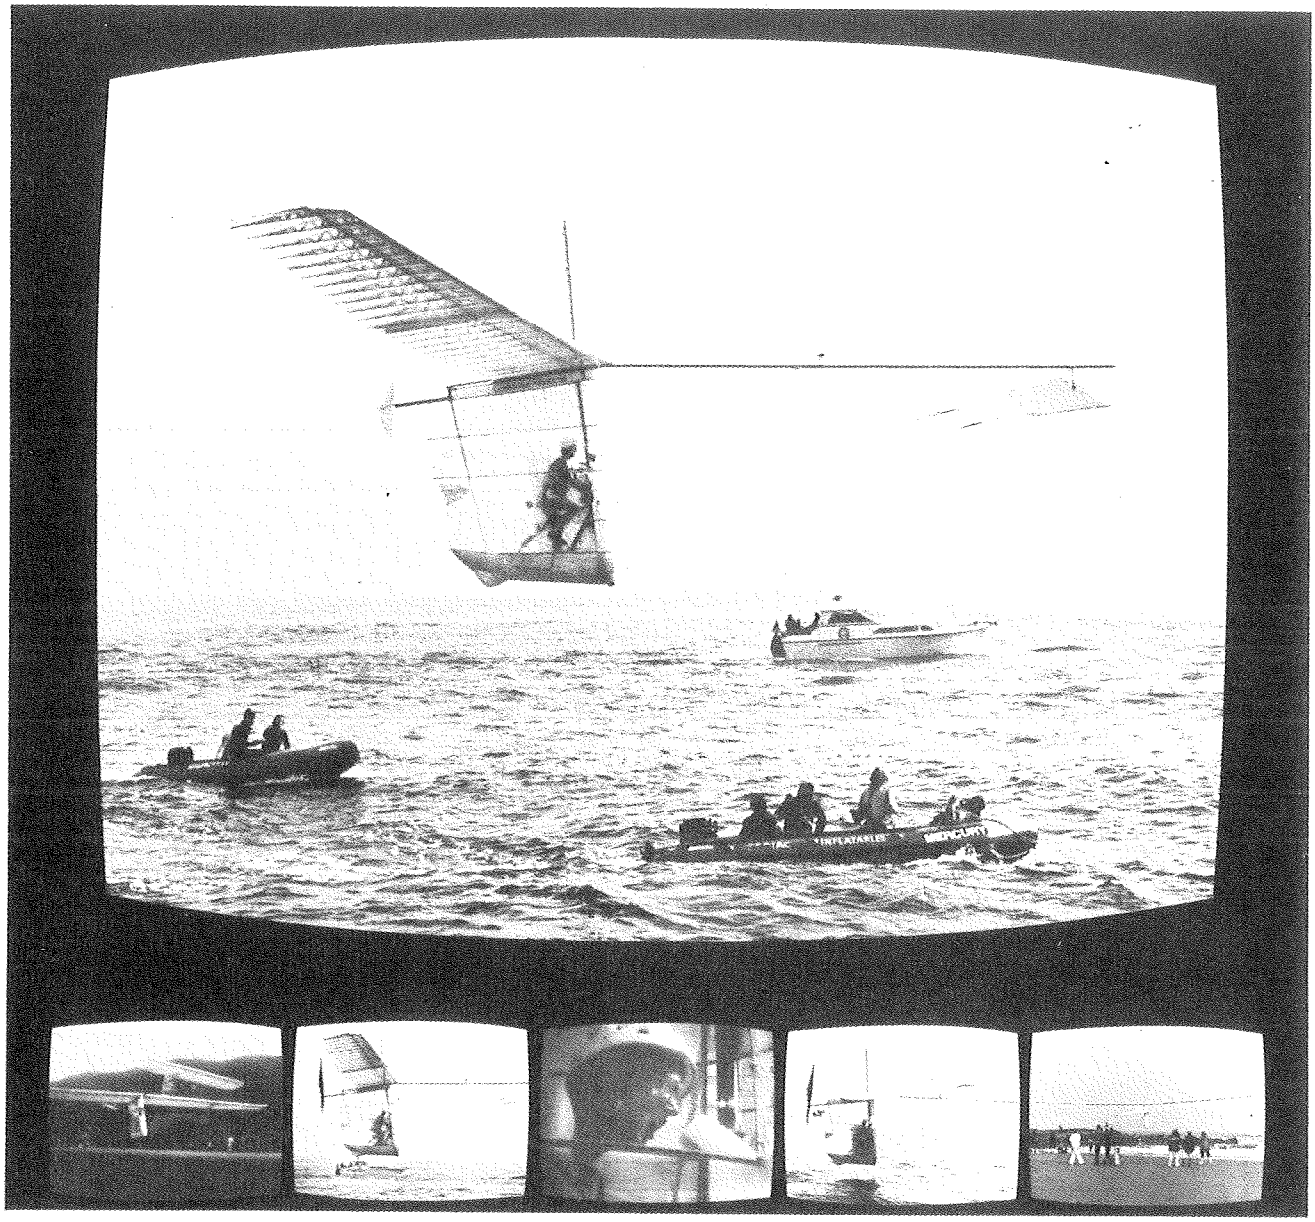

Emma Claudina

As Matson Navigation Company closes the log on our first century of service between the Mainland and Hawaii, we look astern on a fond wake of memories and look forward to ever brighter horizons. ❁ We sail into this second century of progress with a deep sense of appreciation and gratitude — gratitude to all our shippers/customers from around the world for your continued patronage and support through the years. ❁ You may rest assured that the commitment Captain William Matson set in 1882 will hold unchanged — to provide the best shipping service to and from the Hawaiian Islands.

Something To Think About.

One brisk June morning at the break of dawn, Bryan Allen attempted to become the first man to fly under his own power across the English Channel.

After two years of intensive training, he was able to pedal with enough strength to keep the plane aloft. But against the Channel's unpredictable wind currents, sheer willpower would often be the only thing between him and disaster.

The flight took longer than expected. Yet even with cramps in both his legs and a severe case of exhaustion, he never gave in. And when he finally touched down on French soil, he'd not only won his own personal victory, but he'd paved the way for future experiments in manpowered flight.

Bryan Allen's accomplishment illustrates our belief that America gains most when individuals have great freedom to pursue personal goals without undue government interference. And although few of us would care to try what Bryan did, we nonetheless expect to pursue our own goals with equal freedom.

There are times, however, when neither you nor we can expect such freedom in our daily lives. Not when someone decides the government should protect us from it.

Actual inscription that appears on each step

After meetings and consultations with pilots and regulatory bodies from several countries, including the U.S.A. and Australia, the COMAR / MARK / I Pilot Ladder has been designed and constructed to specifications in accordance with the 1974 SOLAS (Safety of Life at Sea) Convention, Chapter V, Regulation 17.

On September 3, 1980 a Presidential Document implementing the enforcement of the 1974 International SOLAS Convention requirements was signed by President Carter. The unique design and materials used in construction of the COMAR / MARK / I Pilot Ladder has resulted in a ladder which actually far exceeds the requirements for

Partial List of International Acceptance and Pending Approvals

* A letter dated March 11, 1981 the Panama Canal Commission took the following. "ACTION. The Panama Canal Commission has approved the use of the new COMAR pilot ladder at the canal based on its acceptance by the U. S. Coast Guard."
* Australia, Dept. of Trade Navigation Act Certificate of Acceptance.
* Belgian Maritime Inspection
* Netherlands Ships' Order 1965 — Reg. 87
* New Zealand Ministry of Transportation Marine Div. Ref. 16675/IMCO/LSA.

Steamship and tanker companies who are presently using the COMAR / MARK / I Pilot Ladder have been unanimous in their comments praising its use.

We acknowledge the contribution of Captain Mark Delesdenier, Jr. and other members of the American Pilots' Association and the United States Coast Guard in helping to develop the world's finest and safest pilot ladder — the COMAR / MARK / I.

EDITOR'S NOTE:

As editor of this year's Hawespipe I have come to realize that most endeavors are successful because of the support and assistance of other people. I feel fortunate that this year I received the support from a number of people who assisted me in making this the finest Hawespipe at C.M.A.

I would like to take this opportunity to express my sincere appreciation to the many individuals who contributed their time and energies to the successful completion of the 1982 Hawespipe.

To the typists:
Diane Christle, Joyce Daley, Virginia Temple and Gail Cooney No words would have been printed in this book without you.
To the people who helped with the copy and layouts:
Peter Brabant, Mark Castleman, John Coleman, Jim Corbett, Tom Devine, Fred Ford, Garth Kirk, Paul Merril, Doug Miller, Margaret Modrich, Mickey Morgan, Tara Nyborg, Mark Pease, Vince Raynaud, John Seckanger, John Wanamaker, and those I may have forgotten to mention. Courtesy of Mills College: Laura Grimshaw. Special copy done by Venus Grace. Mail handled by Dorothy!
I'd still be trying to get things ready to send into the plant if it weren't for your help.
To the photographers:
Mark Jones, Doug Miller, Larry Muszynski, Fred Bockmiller, Peter Brabant, Todd Erickson, Gary Moore, Mickey Morgan, Tara Nyborg, Erik Stark.
What's a yearbook without photos?
To Larry Muszynski who headed the most successful ad campaign a Hawespipe staff has ever seen.
To the advertisers and patrons, a special thanks for the financial support which helped make this book affordable.
And last, but not least, to Brian Malmendier, our Josten's representative, who made life easier for me this past year and saw to it that this venture was completed on time; and Rod Capps, our plant consultant who aided us greatly once things arrived at the plant.

Thank you all!

Mark Jones
