THE PAST

THIS year and throughout the year of 1980, we celebrate the Golden Anniversary of the California Maritime Academy. California Maritime Academy was established fifty years ago by an Act signed into law by California Governor Young. This legislation was called the California Nautical School Act of 1929 and made possible the formation of a state owned school to train Engineering and Deck officers for the U.S. Merchant Marine. In 1931, after two years of preparations, the first group of midshipmen were enrolled at the California Nautical School's temporary campus at the U.S. Navy Coaling station near Tiburon. Fifty-six young men composed the first class, taking their engineering, navigation, and seamanship classes in the buildings at the coaling station and aboard the school's first training ship, The California State.

The training ship, a converted 251 foot Great Lakes freighter, was built in 1919 and had originally been named the SS Henry County. The Navy overhauled the ship in 1930 at the Mare Island shipyard and then loaned her to the California Nautical School. The deck students manned the helm and practiced their navigation and seamanship skills while the engineering students maintained and operated the ship's engineering systems, which includes a triple expansion reciprocating main engines.

THE first opportunity for the "middies" to try their skills at sailing the ship came in January of 1931 when they went on a five month cruise to South America. The superintendent of the school, Cpt. Emile Topp, was also the commanding officer of the training ship.

The next cruise, in 1933, has proven to be the school's only worldwide voyage. The nine month cruise took the new sailors to many different countries, including France, Spain, Italy and Egypt and some other non-European countries.

BUT the fledgling California Nautical School soon faced serious financial and political problems and was in danger of being shut down. This period of uncertainty and hardship for the school started in 1933 and lasted for about six years. There were several attempts to close the California Nautical School due to an ailing national economy and an apparent drain on desperately needed government resources. Only through the efforts of many dedicated supporters were these attempts successfully circumvented and minimal funding was continued by the state.

When news came in 1939 of a possible war with Germany, the Navy needed the Tiburon coaling station and the California Nautical School had to look for another location. After more than a year of searching and after the consideration of many sites for a campus, the Board of Governors of the school decided on Morrow Cove in Vallejo. The people of Vallejo were very much in favor of the proposition and gave the school some greatly needed support. During the interim, however, the school was first moved to Pier 54 in San Francisco, and then to the Ferry Building on Pier 2 a year later.

HE future of the California Nautical School began to look much better with the growing demand for Merchant seamen in the early 1940's. It was during this period, 1940 to be exact, that the California Nautical School was renamed the California Maritime Academy. However, there were many delays and problems in trying to secure the expected $2.5 million estimated to develop the Morrow Cove site. In fact, after Pearl Harbor was attacked, the plans for construction of the new campus were almost completely dropped.

In 1942, the Wartime Shipping Administration took over the Academy and through this agency, the original construction plans for Morrow Cove were revived.

IN 1943 the Training Ship Cal State, midshipmen and staff relocated to the academy's present location and continued business as usual in a half dozen temporary buildings, some of which have been replaced only recently. The Superintendent of the Academy at the time of the move was Cpt. Claude B. Mayo, who contributed much to insure the completion of the campus.

THEN acquired by the Academy, Morrow Cove consisted of a beach that extended inland to where the present Administration building is today.

Also at the original site was an old ferry dock and a breakwater of several sunken vessels at the entrance to the cove. After an extensive landfill project, the half sunken ferry, (Contra Costa), was part of the sea wall. The vessel was later blown up and only a few ribs of her hull now remain as a reminder of its existence.

In September 1945, construction began on the first permanent buildings, including the gymnasium, seamanship building and officers quarters. One year later the gymnasium was completed and dedicated to Cpt. Mayo.

MEANWHILE, after sixteen years of faithful service to the Academy, the Cal State (The Training Ship Golden State previously known as Cal State) was retired. The Mellena, a 426 foot ship, which had been retrieved from the reserve fleet became the new training ship. The Mellena was built in 1945, and, after a short service during the war, was loaned to California Maritime Academy, where she was re-christened, The Golden Bear in 1946.

It was smooth sailing for the Academy in the late 1940's and California Maritime Academy graduates had no problem finding good jobs in the industry. But starting in the early 1950's, there occurred renewed political and economic pressures directed at closing the school. Once again friends of the Academy, including many of the people of Vallejo, managed to keep the school afloat. Although granted a second reprieve, the Academy still had its problems. Regardless of these uncertainties, the Board of Governors and the Superintendents struggled successfully to keep an appropriate stability throughout the 1950's and 1960's.

THEN in 1972 new administrators for the Academy began to bring about a revitalization of the Academy. Cpt. Joseph P. Rizza (USN Ret.) was appointed as the new Superintendent (Admiral USMS), and through his efforts with the state legislature and local officials, the future of California Maritime Academy has become more secure than it has ever been in the past. Finally, to the credit of many in the new administration, California Maritime Academy received full academic accreditation in 1977. Obviously, the Academy is beginning its second fifty year period under extra-ordinarily positive circumstances, and there is every reason to believe that it will prosper on an even greater degree than experienced during its first fifty years of growth.

IN the past 34 years the three different training ships of the California Maritime Academy have taken Middies to a myriad of interesting ports around the world. The only world cruise, in 1933, included an audience with Mussolini, and a camel trip to the pyramids of Egypt.

No matter where the cruises may take them, middies always manage to keep themselves amused when on liberty. Whenever checking out the sights of foreign ports, the middies in their conspicuous uniforms are checked out by curious natives. Friendship often overcomes the differences in cultures, attitudes and languages.

As the ship's visit to any one port comes to an end the routine of sea continues until the next port. Confidence from experience is the reward of sea time on a training ship. Watch and day work periods are means of teaching seamanship and engineering, meanwhile spare time is often spent talking with friends, or perhaps just sitting on the fantail watching a sunset — a good place to relax after watch.

Working, playing, and kicking back on cruise make it one of the most memorable times during our stretch at C.M.A.

NLY the names change; the game remains the same: weekly inspections and standing in nice even rows; demos for hair; extra duty for sleeping through the fun. One day we might look back and laugh, but for now, the normal social life is compromised. "The Merchant Marine? Is that part of the Navy or the Marine Corps?" 0745 formation seems too early to be standing on that blacktop, especially after a kegger the night before.

THE academy has seen the service of three different ships under four different names. The Cal State came into service in 1932 and later had the name changed to the Golden State. In 1948, the first of two Golden Bears graced the academy dock. This ship was replaced in 1971 by the present Training Ship Golden Bear.

IT was once considered taboo to even have a woman aboard a ship! That idea may be held by old-timers but today women can be found on the bridge and in the engine spaces of merchant ships. Eleven young women have graduated from CMA since 1976. Pictured are a few of those who braved the journey through CMA.

Admiral's Message

To the Graduates of the Class of 1979, I offer my congratulations upon your successful completion of the academic program at the Academy. You have proven yourselves capable of assuming the great responsibilities before you and are ready to face the challenges ahead of you as officers of the technological developments taking place in the modern U.S. Merchant Marines demand a well-educated, trained and competent Merchant Mariner. You are the fourth full class to graduate from the new modernized four-year accredited program of instruction and you have had the benefit of the finest Maritime education and training available.

A recent study released by the U.S. Maritime Administration forecast that by the year 2000, the volume of U.S. trade will be up by 130% from 1975. This will result in an increase of 60% in numbers of U.S. flagships. You are entering the Industry at a time when the opportunity for advancement have never been better for those of you who will accept the challenges and risks of responsibility. Some of you will be true high flyers who will advance rapidly. Among you will be top leaders who will be needed ashore and afloat in the Maritime Industry at the advent of the 21st century.

You must from now on continue your personal development through continuing education, intensive study and upgrading. I challenge you to continue growing and to become leaders in the Maritime Industry. I extend to each of you Good Wishes as you go forth to the next stage of your career. GOD BE WITH YOU.

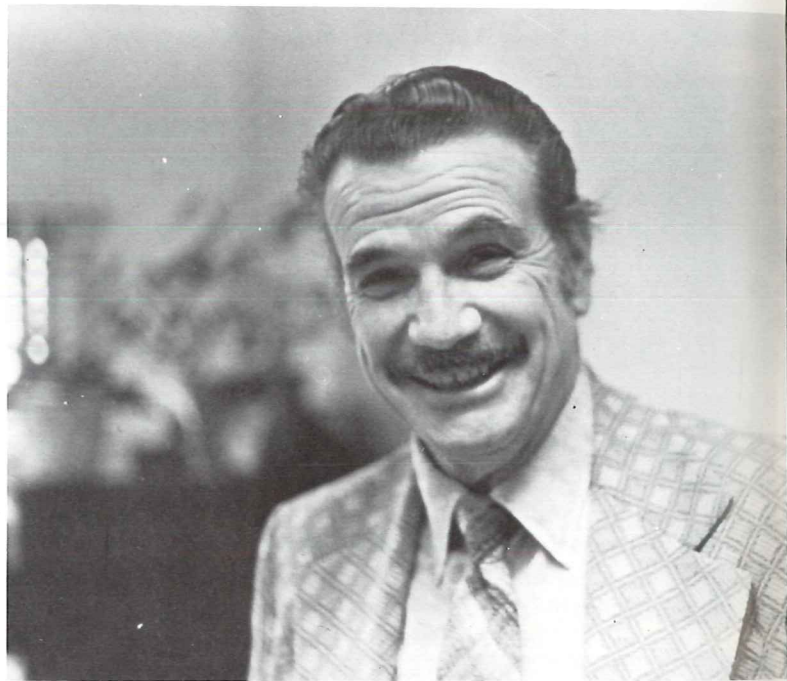

Admiral Joseph P. Rizza

The Amazing Crew

Though only in its third year of inter-collegiate competition, the Cal Maritime Crewmen left a good number of major schools in their wakes this year. The schools we beat, and made believers out of, were U.C. San Diego, U. Santa Barbara, USC, Humboldt State U., U. British Columbia, SAF, Santa Clara, U. of Oregon, St. Marys and U.C. Davis.

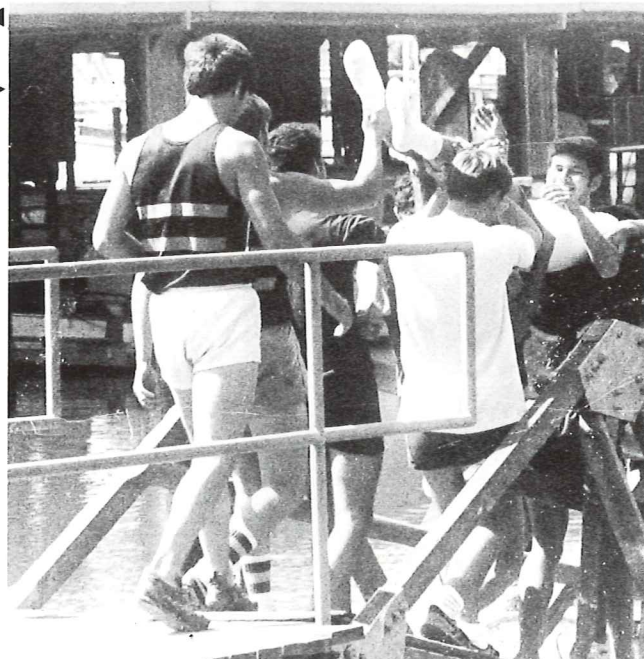

Coach Phil Holmes, has brought the young Cal Maritime oarsmen a long way. But members of the Varsity Heavyweight and Lightweight crew believe the west coast crew community hasn't seen anything yet!

1979 Drill Team State "Field" Champs

DRILL TEAM

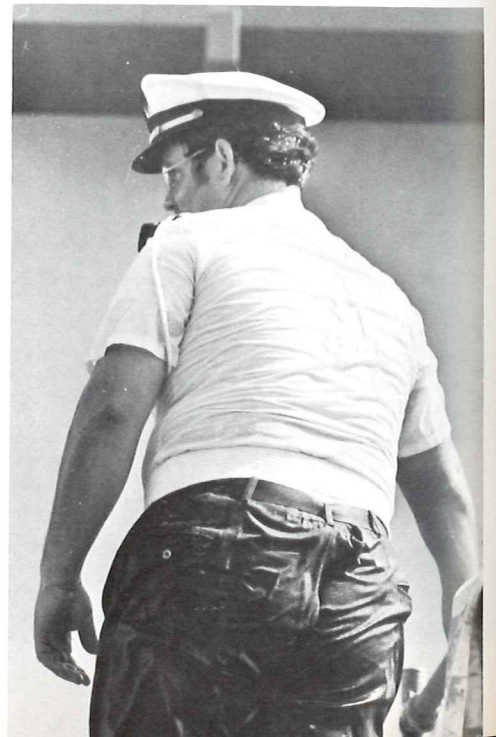

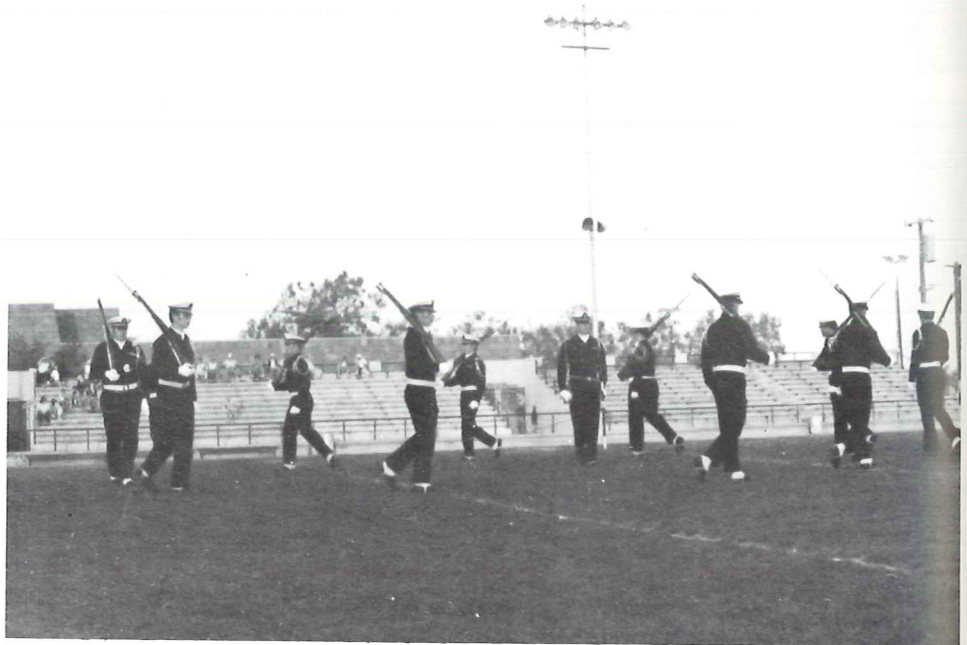

Several years of hard work paid off for the Drill Team last September when they went through the month undefeated and won the 1978 State Field Championship in military drill. During that golden month the team also placed first in the Crockett and Sonoma parades. The winning streak was snapped on the first day of October during a parade in Santa Clara when they only managed to take second place the day after the championship field competition.

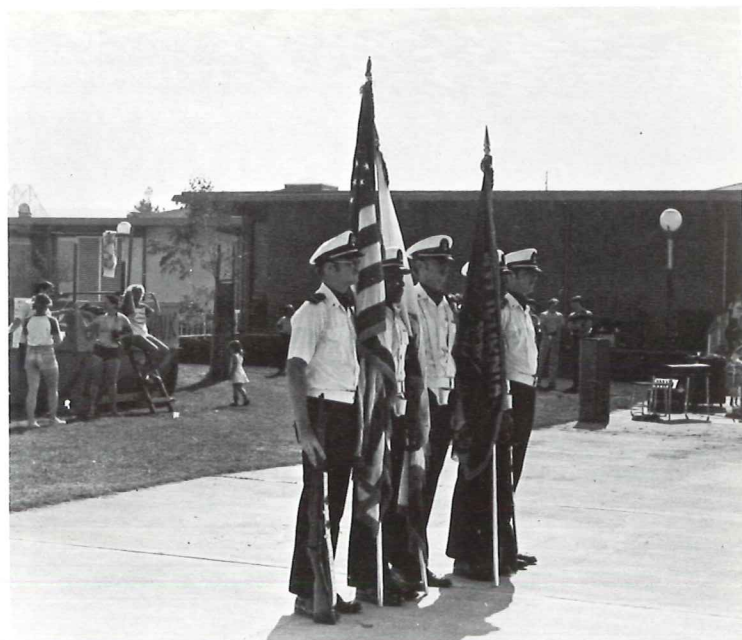

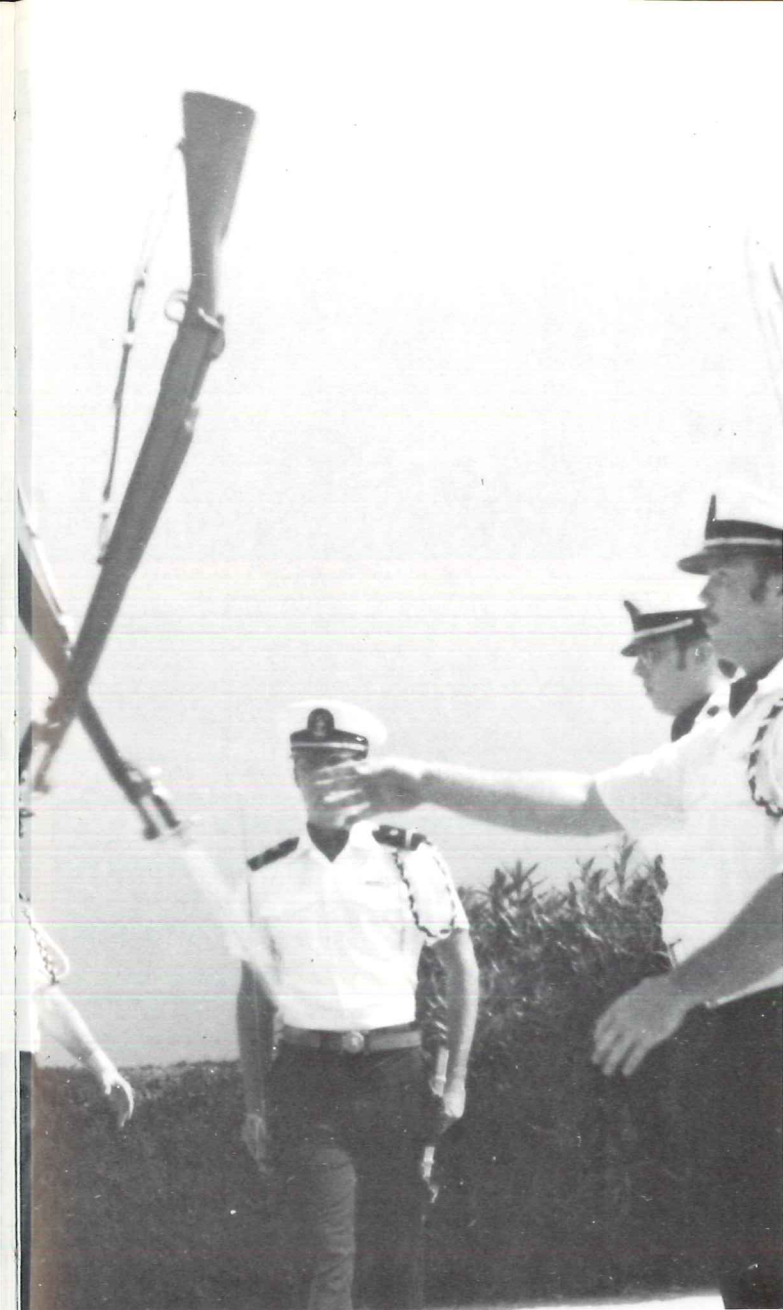

Paul Hoban both led and coached the drill team to its best season ever. The fact that all but two team members were veterans of previous years of competition was an important factor in their fast start.

COLOR GUARD

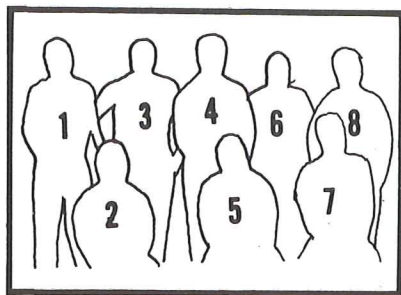

The Color Guard was beginning to feel like Avis after several second place finishes early in the year, but continued to improve as time passed. In addition to their competitive endeavours, the Color Guard once again was a visible representative of the Academy throughout the Bay Area. Finally, at the same time as the Class of 1979 was receiving their diplomas, the color guard marched away with first place in the Boots and Beauty Parade held in Las Vegas during the annual Helderado celebration.

John Donne wrote, "Any man's death diminishes me, for I am part of mankind." In the context of the maritime profession we could echo the words of Donne with: "Any sailor's death diminishes me, for I am a part of the sea."

Just so is it with the tragic death of our shipmate, Rich Sedgwick. A life so young, so filled with possibility, so alive with all the senses, diminishes us with death. We are reminded of all those whose life faces the peril of the sea, or the peril of life ashore. We remember with honor those whose lives have been lost while serving at sea.

On 15 February 1979, a memorial service was held for Rick in the CMA auditorium. During the service the "Mariner's 23rd Psalm" was read in his honor. We repeat it as a final tribute to Rick Sedgwick.

The Lord is my Pilot I shall not go adrift.
He lighteth my passage across dark channels;
He steereth me through the deep waters
He keepeth my log.

He guideth me by the evening star for my safety's sake.
Yes, though I sail mid the thunders and tempests
of life
I fear no peril, for Thou art with me,
Thy stars and heavens they comfort me.
The vastness of the sea upholds me.

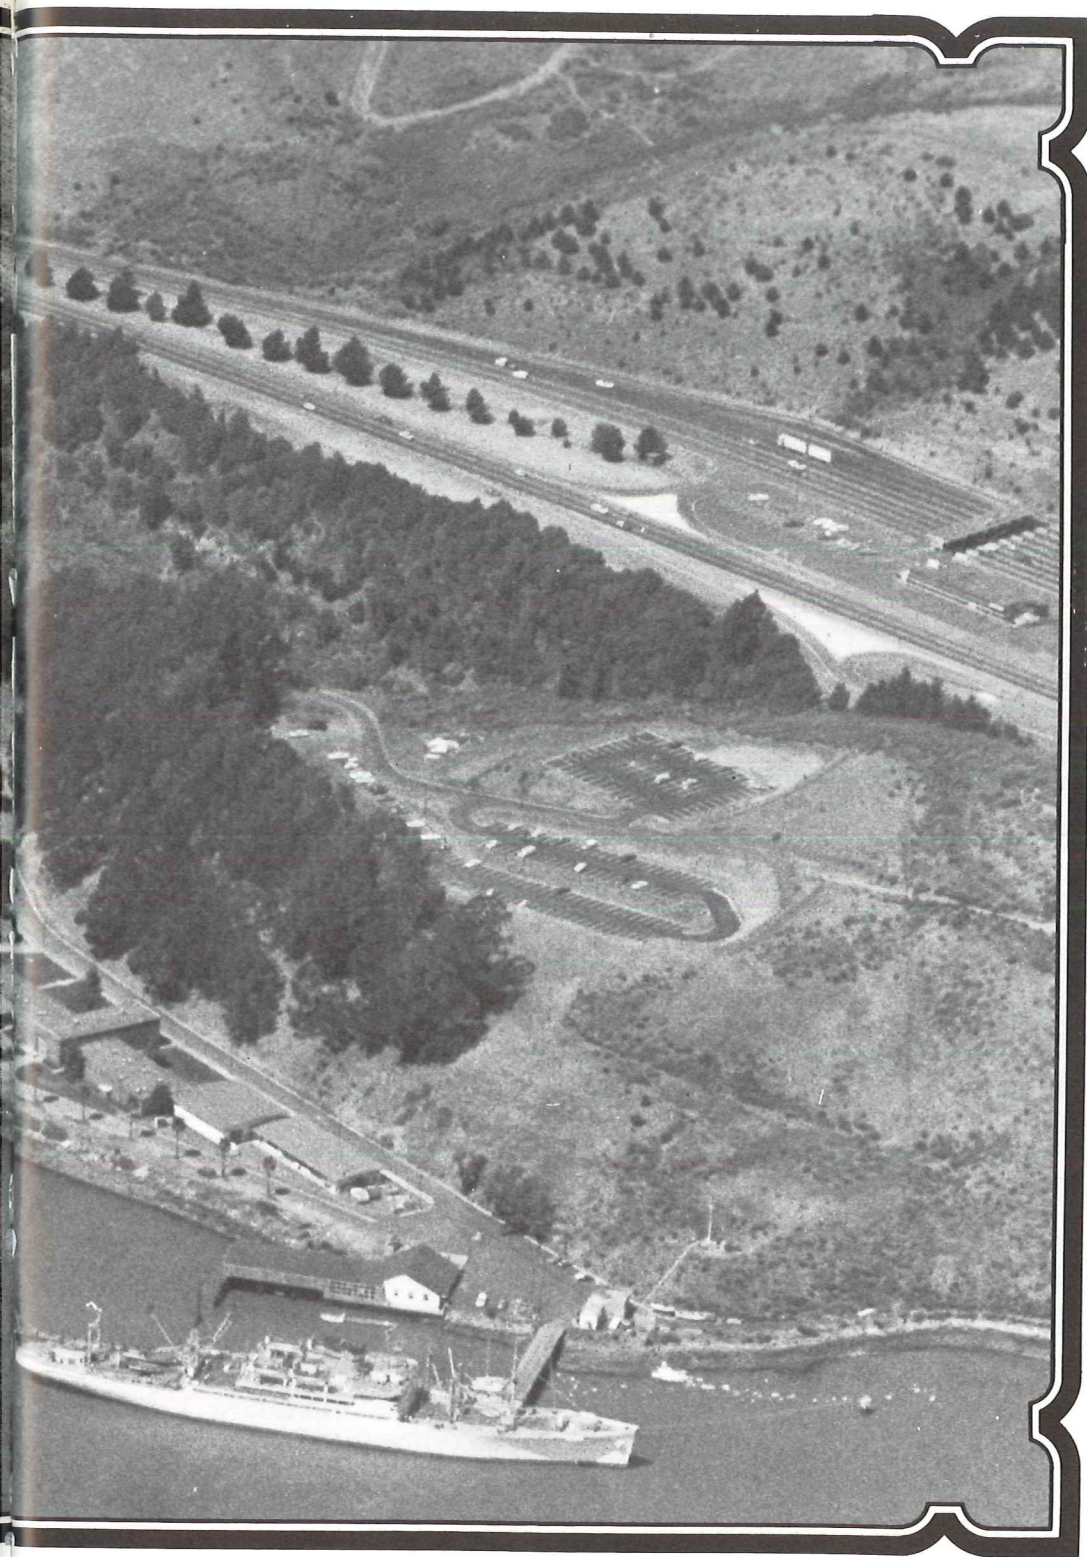

Surely fair winds and safe harbors shall be found
All the days of my life;
And I shall dock secure, forever. AMEN.

NOW TAKE A LOOK AT THE POST-GRADUATE CURRICULUM.

Congratulations and welcome to a new and exciting career.

You'll be more sophisticated seamen than your graduating counterparts just ten years ago. And the Chevron Oregon is one reason why.

The Oregon was the first gas turbine-powered tanker in the American Merchant Marine. Its turbine system drives an electric generator which produces the power to propel the vessel.

And the Oregon is just one of five such turbine tankers now in service for Chevron.

Engineering breakthroughs like the Chevron Oregon will be a constant challenge to you throughout your career in the Merchant Marine. We at Chevron are proud to be a part of it all.

Welcome aboard.

Rigging Did It

RIGGING DOES IT AROUND THE WORLD ... ERECTS, MODIFIES, MAINTAINS, RELOCATES

Rigging International is a specialist in container cranes. It erects them, modifies them, maintains them, and sometimes relocates them. Rigging International does it around the world. Major projects have been completed in Honduras, Hong Kong, Manila, Liverpool, Oakland, Cadiz, Honolulu, New Orleans, Port of Newark, Seattle, Houston, Mobile, Portsmouth, Portland and Seattle.

A staff of specialists is available to help you achieve your objective—from preliminary planning through successful completion. Write world headquarters in Oakland, California for more facts. You might also ask about "Hong Kong Ro-Ro," the new 10 minute film about a unique crane relocation project recently completed in the Far East.

Shown above is a barge traveling up the Pacific Coast out of Long Beach, California, with two container cranes. It was headed for the Ports of Oakland and Seattle—where major additions to port facilities were achieved almost overnight.

Rigging did it.

For fast facts about this or other Rigging International projects, write or phone headquarters offices in Oakland, California (415-465-9300) or London, England (01-947-7131). Motion pictures, extensive photographic files and special reports are available.

The task of compiling a yearbook was never meant to be a bed of roses, and this one was no exception. Perhaps there have been some extra thorns! However, there are many rewards to being an editor. The sense of humor and general creativity generated by participating students throughout the year to see, for these talents are rarely encouraged. Therefore, Hawsepipe has a very special place at CMA, and I feel, in turn, this Hawsepipe is a very special edition.

Having now concluded our task, I would like to extend my final appreciation for the efforts of my staff and for the support of the following special people: Captain Bill Aguilar, "Howie" Thor, Diane Christle, Nanci Williams, Annette Taylor, Paul O'Bannon, Nate Plotkin, Betty Weldon, The Chief, Mrs. Mary Olson, Dorothy Brosseau, John Kanaley, Mike Walsh, Dennis Naumann, Isabel Cruz, John Stephenson, Lou Henderson & the Galley Crew, and Paul, for all the beers.

Neil Thibodaux,
Editor
