"Southern & Saalea"

THOUGH EQUIPPED WITH BRILLIANT ESCAPE TACTICS, THE GUY ON THE CLIFF BAR PROVES NO MATCH FOR THE GIANT. LATE IN THE 5TH ROUND, THE GIANT POURS ON SOME EXTRA "JOLLY" GIVING THE CLIFF BAR GUY A FALSE SENSE OF SECURITY. THE GIANT THEN PROVES NOT TO BE SO JOLLY AS HE SUFFOCATES THE "GUY" WITH HIS VEGETABLE COVERED TOGA. THE GIANT LATER STATED, "ANYONE NOT IN THE FOUR FOOD GROUPS DESERVES TO DIE!"

WINNER: GREEN GIANT

ROCKSON GRACIE

FLYING ARM BAR RHP

On February 11, 2001 Rockson Gracie died in a motorcycle accident in New York.

He was the son of the greatest fighter in the world, Rickson Gracie.

Standing at 5'6" and probably weighing a trim 135, his technique was flawless. In warm-ups he could walk down the mats on his hands easily. In a class, he would explain the moves of the day in a boyish way. He was 17, when he began teaching white belt beginners.

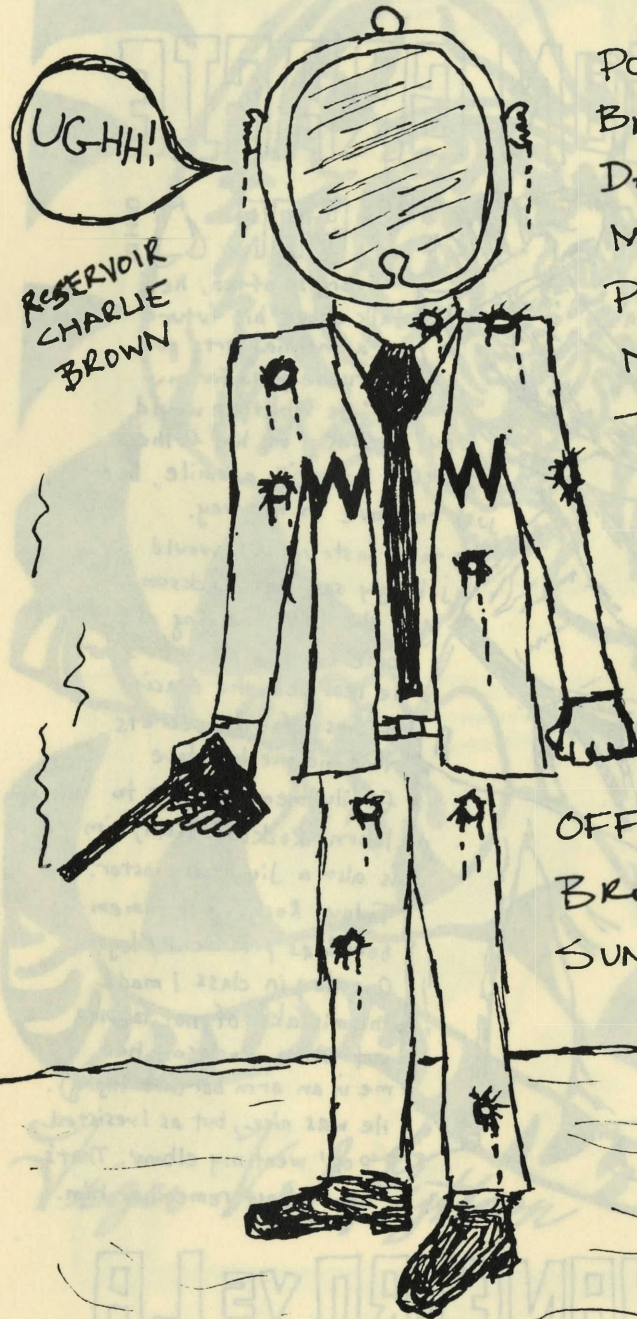

Every so often, he'd talk about his future as a martial arts guy. "Everyone goes for my neck," is what he would say, because of his father's prowess. But with a smile, he'd just continue on his way.

Other instructors would jokingly say that Rockson got the best training at home from his father, that he learned the Gracie Jiu Jitsu family secrets that no one but close family members got to learn. Rockson's mom, Kim is also a Jiu Jitsu master. Today, Rockson is remembered as practically legend. One day in class I made the mistake of not tapping out when Rockson had me in an arm bar (not flying). He was nice, but as I resisted, 'pop' went my elbow. That's how I best remember him.
