University Construction Management among best in West

Construction Management Journal ranked the Lyles College of Engineering's Construction Management program third among schools in the far west region. The ranking is based on the performance of students in a national competition in April hosted by the Associated Schools of Construction. Fresno State's Construction Management program placed third after California State University, Sacramento (first) and Washington State University (second). University of Southern California and University of Washington placed fourth and fifth respectively. "We owe this to our dedicated, caring faculty and hard-working, passionate students," said Dr. Manoochehr Zoghi, program chair and Lyles College associate dean. Fresno State was ranked against schools in California, Hawaii, Oregon and Washington. INFO: Dr. Zoghi at 559.278.2500 or mzoghi@csufresno.edu.
