CAL STATE BAKERSFIELD

SURVIVING AT CSB

Although some people may think of this publication as a typical annual, actually it is designed as a survival manual. Its purpose is to help you, the student at CSB survive this institution of higher learning. You may merely be interested in surviving, but hopefully, you will want to make your years at CSB enriching ones - personally as well as academically. The following pages are designed as a record of how 1972-73 Cal State students survived, as well as to instruct you in using this college to your fullest advantage.

... of the people who are ready to serve you in Student Services. It's a good place to go when you have a problem, or need some money or a job, or want to find out how to get things done on campus. The services include Activities, Housing, Health, Financial Aids, Counseling and Placement, Admissions and Records, and the Learning Center.

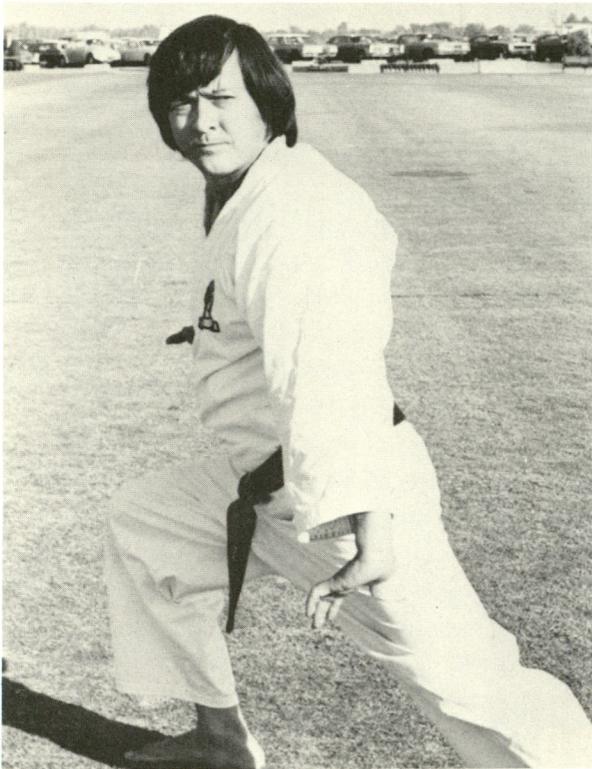

These are some of the people on campus who can help you in your struggle for survival.

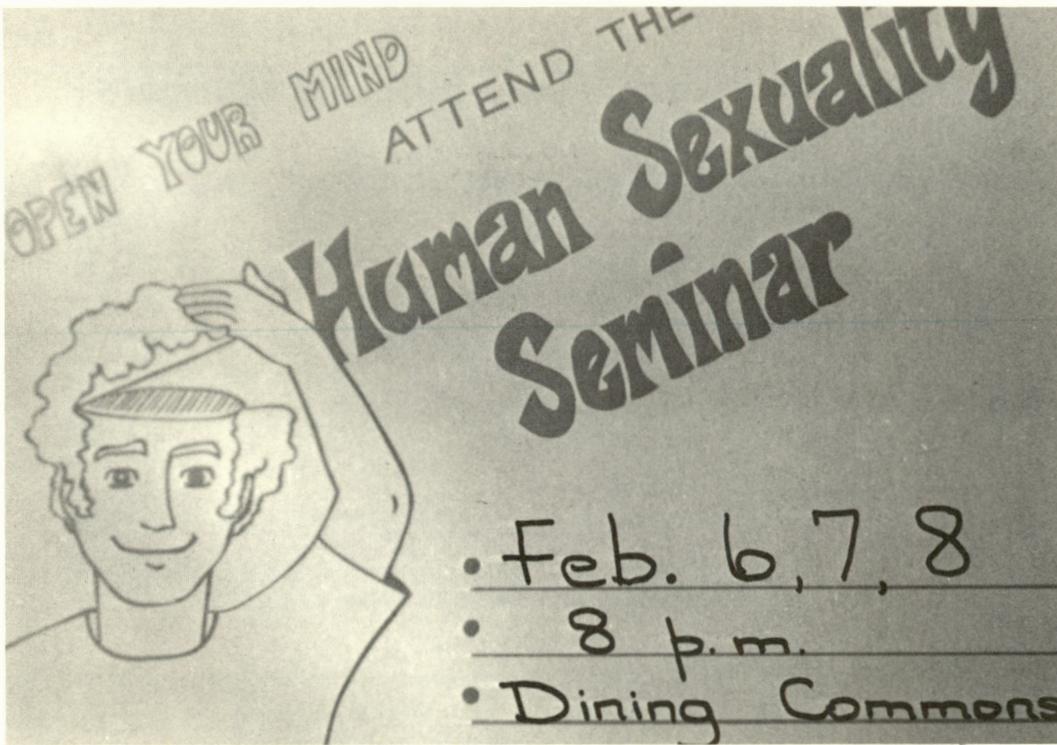

There are a lot of people at CSB who make a big difference in each of our daily lives on campus. Faculty, the support and administrative staffs, directly and indirectly affect the college and each student's existence here.

We don't often stop and say thanks -
THANKS!

The Human Sexuality Seminar presented to all interested students information concerning sexual responsibility and attitudes, contraception and physiological information, and the relationship between sex and the need for emotional nourishment.

The three evening seminar, which featured speakers, a panel and rap sessions, was well received by the many students who attended.

"The Statesman is a new concept at CSB. Formed in mid-July 1972, with a staff of 7 as part of a new class at CSB - Journalism, The Statesman is now an independent, COMPLETELY student-run newspaper with a 60+ membership, giving The Statesman Club the distinction of being the No. 2 ranking club on campus. The first issue appeared on Fall Registration Day, September 19, 1972; with subsequent issues appearing every third week. The Statesman had as its guiding goal a desire to provide the college community with news, editorials, features, and sports as they pertained to CSB. The Statesman has been, since its inauguration, a totally self-supporting paper through the sale of local and national advertising, and copies of the paper for 5¢ a copy. The mast head now holds 4 page editors, 3 page assistant editors, 6 contributing editors, a Production Editor, Managing Editor, Business Manager, and Editor-In-Chief.

In its short existence, The Statesman has become a vital part of CSB collegiate life. That was and remains the way it was intended by the Editors, staff, and various contributors to The Statesman. It is our supreme hope that The Statesman will continue to expand as CSB does, providing better coverage and service to the CSB college community."

HOW TO SURVIVE
LIFE IN THE DORMS

ACADEMIC VILLAGE

"In Fall 1971, the full Village plan was put into operation. Residents moved into rooms in the Houses and faculty members moved into offices in the Houses. Houses A, B, and C were designated as Lower Division Houses. The House Fellows assigned to these Houses advised the students, played ping-pong, chatted informally, and occasionally watched the soap operas on TV. They also taught special courses in the Village. Commuters, roughly equal in number to the residents, were assigned to each House. They enjoyed almost all of the privileges that the resident students enjoyed, such as the Coffee House, dances, House lounges, film series, seminars, study rooms and Dining Commons cuisine. This Village program is unique in the United States. Unlike other programs, the Village is restricted to Lower Division students, it includes both resident and commuter students. The Village has not permanently assigned faculty, and it has varied courses. Instead, the faculty may have their offices in the Village, they may teach courses there, and they may advise students there, but they have an academic home elsewhere. Like the faculty, many of the courses taught in the Village are borrowed from other academic areas. This allows the Village program and personnel to be changed according to what is needed by the students. This also provides continuity for students when they leave the Village. The close association afforded residents and commuters by having House Fellows immediately available to them in formal and informal situations develops the confidence and academic skills necessary to survive at CSB."

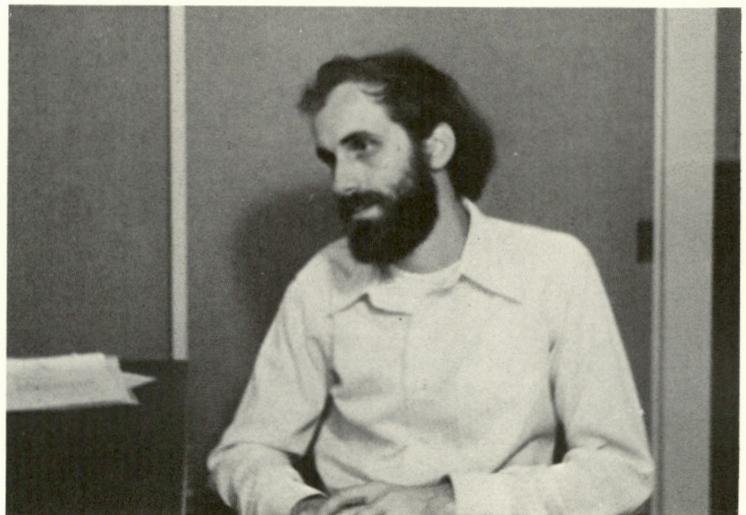

Dr. Jim Horton
Academic Village Dean

HOUSE FELLOWS

"I am a village fellow. You may not know what that means and I'm not always sure that I do. To some of you, I am one of 15 faculty members who sign your advising slips each quarter. To others, the one who occupies the office across the hall and keeps yelling, "hey, turn down that music!" To a few, a friend, Damned few, though, and that's too bad . . .

Sincerely,
Village Fellow "

HOUSING OFFICE

"When I found out that the theme of the annual was to be 'Survival at CSB' it seemed apropos to our situation here in the Living-Learning Center. The first year of any operation is a struggle for survival - getting on your feet, establishing relationships within the larger campus community, working out policies and procedures, etc.

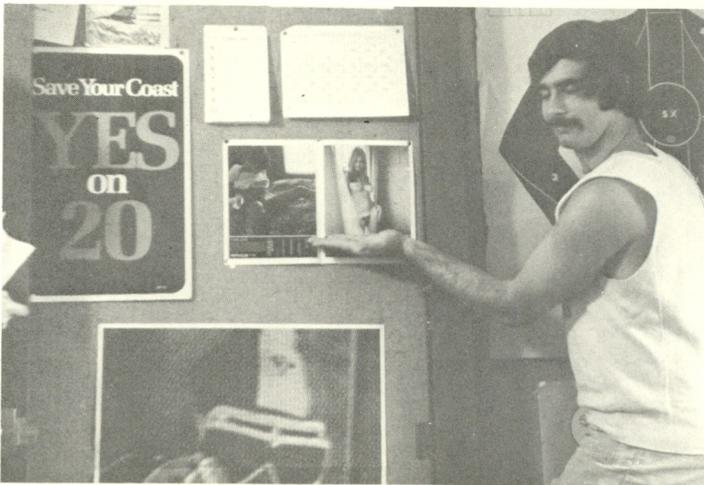

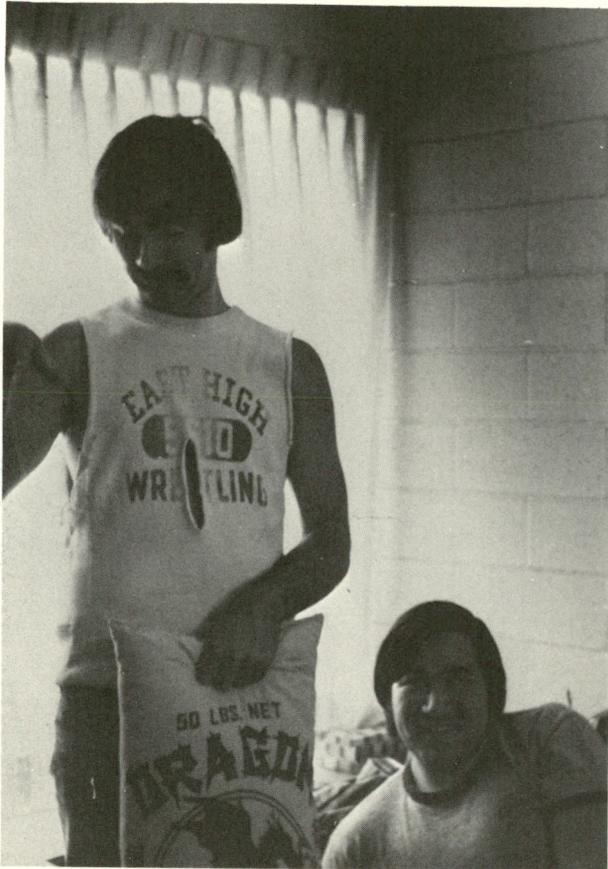

It's been an interesting, stimulating year for me. I think the newness is half the fun. It's exciting to watch something as new as we are grow, to be a part of it, to know that what you do now will have an effect on the college for some time to come. So it becomes challenging, the biggest challenge being - how to humanize the educational institution."

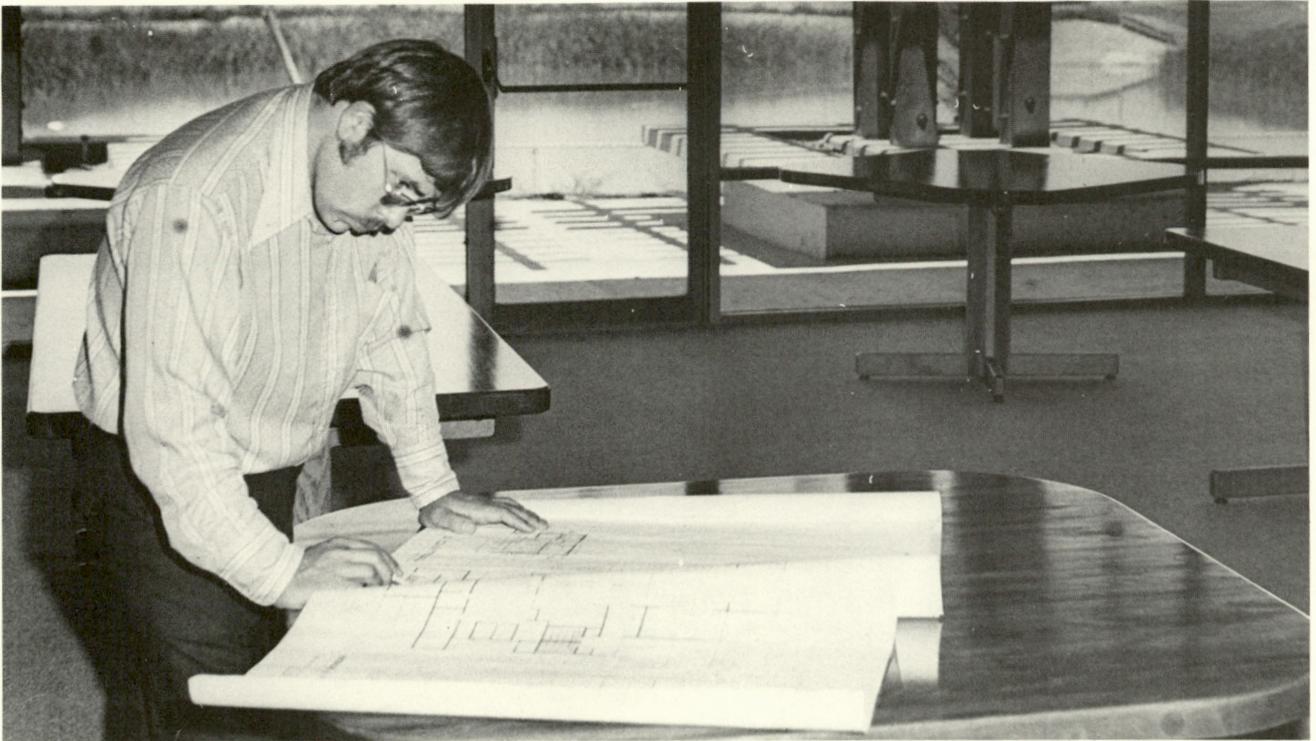

John Beckman
Housing Advisor

One of the most important factors in surviving any educational institution is people - people who help and care about each other. There are seven students on campus this year, the Resident Assistants, whose job it is to help other students in the Houses. As any of them will tell you, it's been a year of personal growth, excitement, and frustration. There have been moments when they themselves wondered if they would survive, but they've all made it - much to the benefit of the resident students in their Houses.

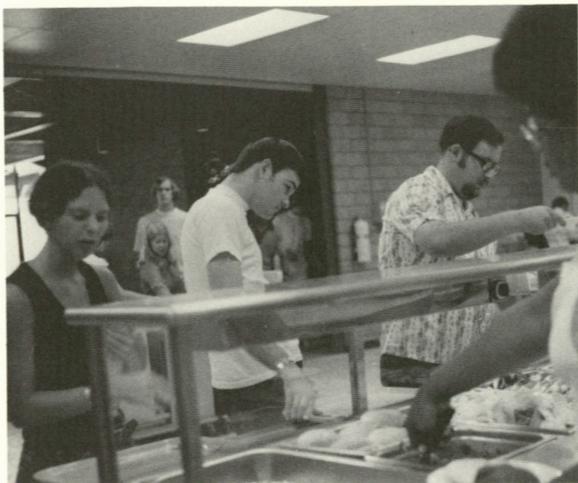

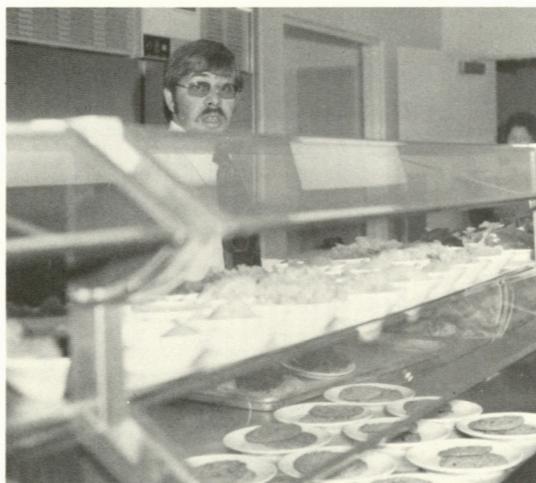

Rollie studies his plans to see if the builders left out any doors or windows.

Whistle while you work!

"Oh no, casserole again?"

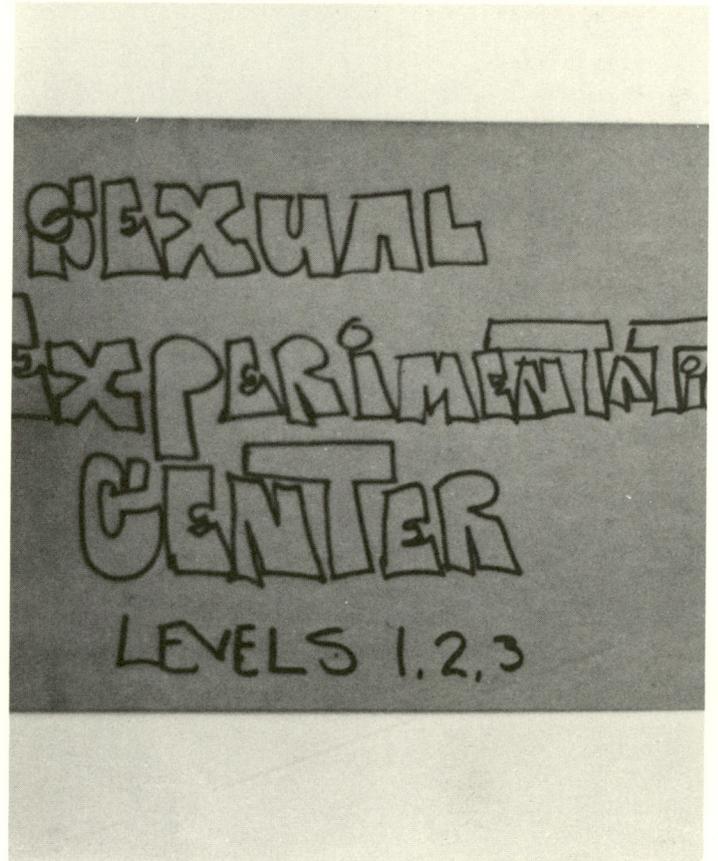

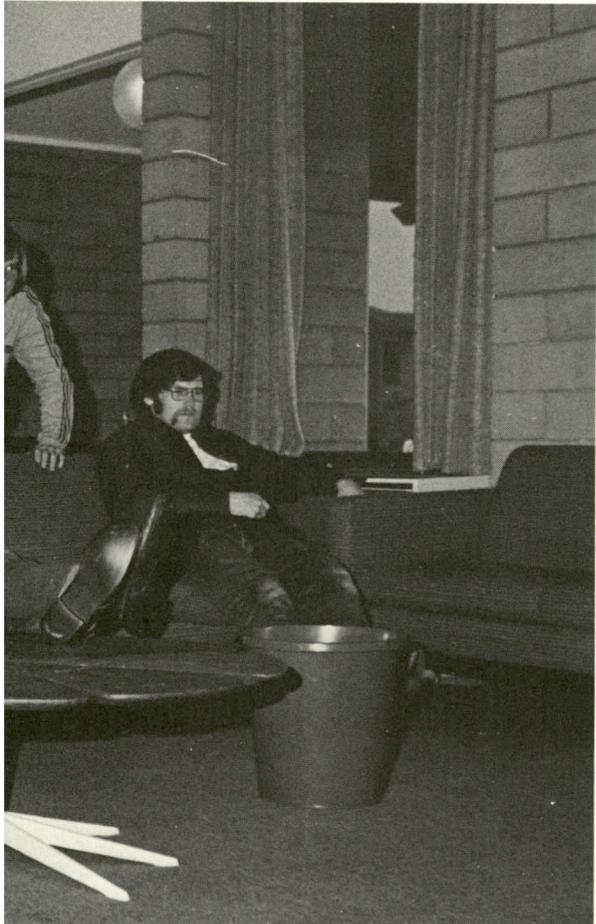

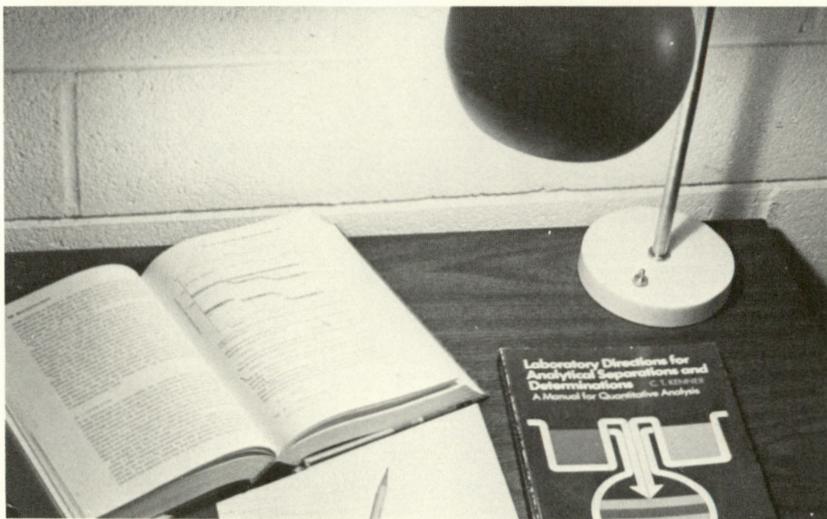

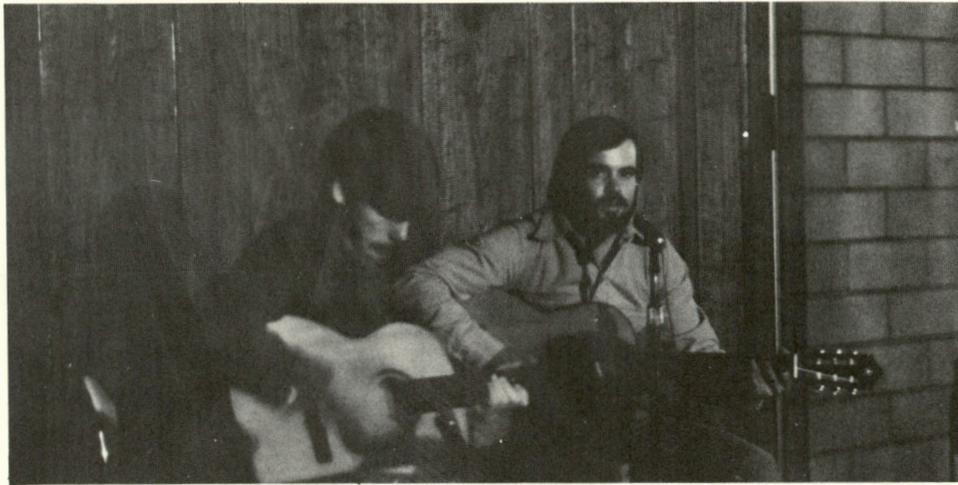

"What! President Romberg is here for dinner?"

"Tee hee, if they only knew what was really in these cookies!"

November	4	CCAA Conference Championships
	11	NCAA National Championships
	18	USTFF Regional Championships

Under the direction of Coach Charles Craig, the Cal State Cross Country team began its first season this fall. It was a new experience for all since neither the team nor the coach had had cross country experience prior to this year. We are in a tough conference, and Coach Craig was not displeased with the team's showing. The first and last meets were run over the same course, and our team showed an average improvement of 6 minutes in time.

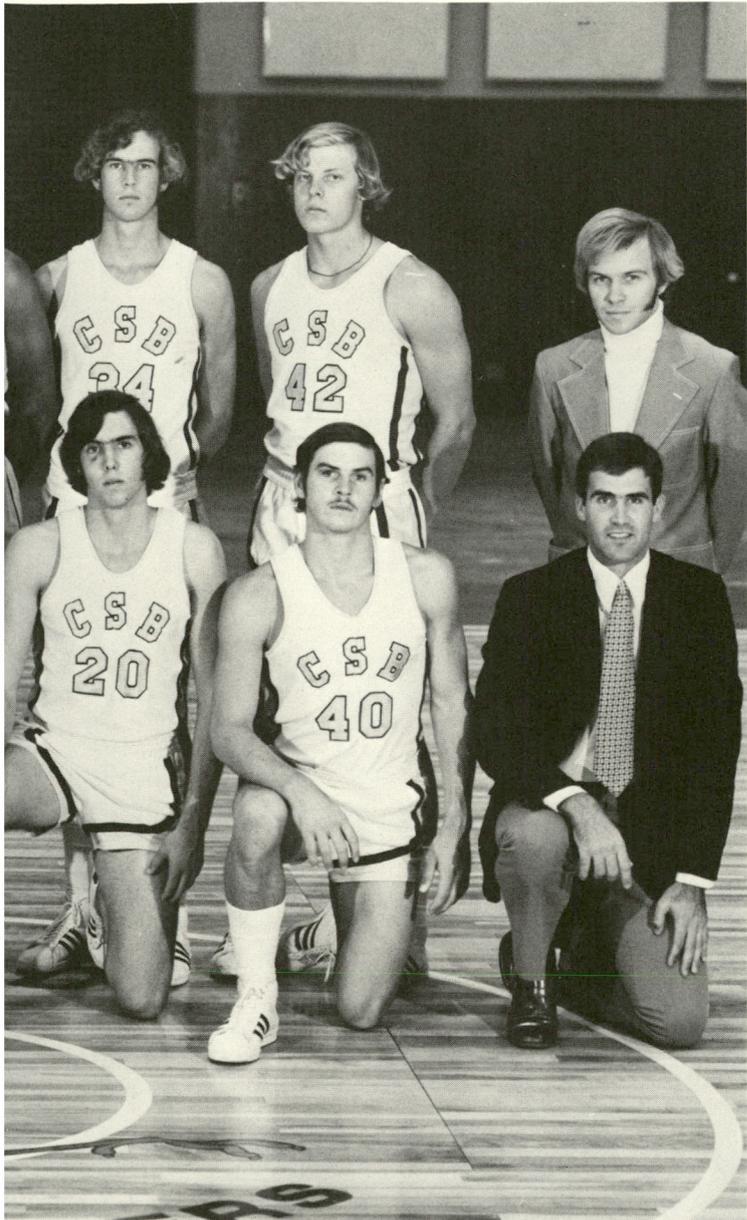

This year's cross country athletes were: Evan Carlos, Charles Everly, Robert Fish, Cliff Ford, James Hinkston, and Bob Williams. Prospects for next season look good, with the addition of new team members to the seasoned six.

In their first year of CCAA league play, the Cal State Roadrunners have made an outstanding showing. Half-way through league play, the Runners had an impressive 5-0 record, which placed them first in the conference. At that point the team had been ranked 18th in the nation among small colleges.

The Runners is a strong, well disciplined team which has consistently played a good ball game resulting in their victory of 10 straight games over schools many times the size of CSB. The team has been strengthened this year by the addition of several new players, among whom are three freshmen. Head Coach Jim Larson and Assistant Coach Dallas Plater have again demonstrated their ability by guiding the Runners in their second year of highly successful college basketball.

Cal State's first year of varsity wrestling was a difficult one for our small team. The team had the advantage, however, of the direction of Coach Joe Seay, who has an excellent wrestling background. Next year should prove to be more successful since the team will have grown both in size and experience.

THANKS TO THOSE WHO CAME

AND HELPED TO CONQUER

Here's Liz and Brenda!

At long last I reach the end of this book! This being the last page I get to air my parting complaints! Make that comments. First of all I would like to thank Brenda, Michael, Mairead, Sam, John, Tom, those assorted people who gave up their Saturdays to get this to the publishers, and everyone who contributed pictures for this annual. Thanks for your time and effort, and also for being patient with me. I would also like to say thanks to the staff I almost had.

As I think back I remember all the headaches resulting from these pages and all I can say is . . . never mind! The dedication of an annual usually comes at the front of the book, but since this is no ordinary annual, the dedication shall be here. I would like to dedicate this book to all the people whose faces appear between these pages, cover to cover. For without you where would we be? Last of all I would like to convey a message to next year's editor, whoever you may be, GOOD LUCK, YOU WILL NEED IT!

Editor

The college years are ones of personal growth and expansion, new experiences in and out of the classroom. They are years of learning how to survive — through registration and classes, through finals and papers, through fog and dust, through weekends in the dorm. Learning how to survive — creatively and intelligently — is part of the college experience.

This year's Trellage has sought to capture some of the many aspects of survival at OSB during the 1972-73 academic year.
