Convention Phone Service

The main switchboard number for the 1976 Democratic National Convention Committee is 397-1976. This directory lists most of the key convention numbers. Groups or individuals not listed can be reached by dialing 397-1976.

In addition, New York Telephone has designed and installed a special communications system for the convention floor. Each delegation chairperson has one red phone and one white phone attached to his or her chair. Red phones provide direct communication with the podium. White phones provide communication with other delegations and groups of alternates by dialing the four-digit extensions listed. Conference calling and the transferring of calls are features of the system.

The convention floor telephone system is a closed system and is not designed to handle incoming or outgoing calls, which may be placed through the hundreds of coin telephones installed in walkways throughout Madison Square Garden.

Notes

The following notes are taken from a lecture given by Professor [Name] on the topic of [Topic]. The lecture was held on [Date] at [Location].

The first point discussed was the importance of [Point 1]. It was noted that [Detail 1.1] and [Detail 1.2] are key factors in understanding this concept. The speaker emphasized that [Point 1] is not just a theoretical idea but has practical implications in [Field].

Next, the lecture moved on to [Point 2]. This section explored the relationship between [Concept A] and [Concept B]. The speaker argued that [Point 2] is a complex issue that requires a multidisciplinary approach. Several examples were provided to illustrate how [Point 2] manifests in different contexts.

The third part of the lecture focused on [Point 3]. This section discussed the challenges associated with [Point 3] and the strategies used to overcome them. The speaker highlighted the role of [Factor X] in addressing these challenges and the importance of [Factor Y] in the overall process.

Finally, the lecture concluded with a summary of the key points discussed. The speaker stressed the need for continued research and collaboration in the field of [Topic]. The audience was encouraged to explore the topics further and apply the concepts discussed in their own work.
