

Essie quits queen contest

Essie is no more.

In a surprise move yesterday, Essie Harrison withdrew from the Homecoming Queen Contest. Her current whereabouts are unknown.

She was sponsored by Garter, the campus humor magazine.

Garter editor Scott C. Harrison said that he was in full agreement with Essie's decision to withdraw.

"We had hoped to bring some humor, admittedly satirical, to bear on a tradition which has been out of date for the past 20 years," he said, "but it didn't work.

"The bad thing about Homecoming," he said, "is that it is a traditional event, and traditional events are intrinsically bad. They're bad because they're perpetuated simply because they're traditions rather than because they have any real value or because they are relevant to what's going on.

"Through humor," he said, "we had hopes that we might bring the campus community to take a long hard look at Homecoming, and maybe start them moving toward re-structuring it into something really worthwhile.

"Every year," he said, "we see the same plastic smiles, the candidates say the same banal things, we see the Homecoming Committee put on the same trite and commonplace events and the participants kidding themselves into thinking that what they're doing is relevant to the real world.

"It just doesn't make sense," he said.

"We had hoped that the students would accept Essie's candidacy for what it was, an attempt at constructive criticism through humor," he said, "but too many of them didn't."

He said that Essie had been threatened with bodily harm, and that she was "disappointed in the juvenile response of much of the student body.

"This campus is supposed to be a haven for love, tolerance, and non-violence," Editor Harrison said, "but apparently it isn't."

Harrison said that he would appear in Essie's place for the presentation of the Queen candidates at the Gallery Lounge today at 12:15 p.m. and issue a formal statement for her.

A similar withdrawal occurred last year by another candidate who poked fun at the Homecoming Establishment.

'Earth Mother' Jane Dornacker withdrew after winning a write-in campaign which gained her more votes than all the rest of the candidates combined.

Campaigning on top of a garbage can, waving her magic wand, and clutching a bird cage, 'Earth Mother' based her campaign on nature.

"Remember," she had said, "that when you go to the polls the EARTH is under you."

She withdrew after everyone tried to jump on the bandwagon and took advantage of her popularity for their causes.

"I never thought that when I got up on my garbage can with my magic wand that this would happen . . . why don't we just forget the whole thing," she said.

Harrison agreed.

"Homecoming just isn't worth it," he said.

Death vigil at car stop as Reaper stands watch

by Dave Richmond

It was almost death in the afternoon at 19th and Holloway yesterday.

At least death sent a representative to the dangerous intersection.

The Grim Reaper appeared at the corner at the invitation of the Deathwatch Vigil Committee (DVC), a newly formed campus organization devoted to bringing safety to the "death-trap" corner.

Complete in black shroud, cowl and clutching his bloody sickle in a fleshless hand, the Reaper stood on the corner for an hour displaying two tombstones he said were soon to be engraved with the names of those killed or maimed at the intersection.

During the rush hour from 3 to 4 p.m. this image of death incarnate attempted to board a crowded "M" car but decided against it because he didn't want to stand.

The DVC has plans for a rally at either the end of next week or the beginning of the following week on the Speakers' Platform.

According to chairman Lisal deSchweinitz the committee would like to mobilize at least 200 irate students to line the tracks on 19th and Holloway and harass the "M" cars as they pass by during the rush hour.

"It is the only way we can make the city understand that people out here are getting killed," Miss deSchweinitz said.

The Grim Reaper has agreed to appear again today at 19th and Holloway at 2:30 p.m.

The Grim Reaper stalked the 'deathtrap' intersection of 19th and Holloway Ave. yesterday with two tombstones for "those about to die."

AS operation unconstitutional?

by Marty Meller

A high member of the college administration has commented that the AS operation bears very little resemblance to what is called for in the AS constitution—and a close reading confirms his judgment.

What makes this serious is that the AS is a non-profit corporation under California law, and as such is subject to very specific and stringently enforced laws.

The AS constitution legally is a set of bylaws for the corporation and must therefore be followed to the letter.

This is not being done in several important instances.

The AS Board of Directors is meeting today at 10 a.m. in Library G12 at the request of three of the losing candidates in the recent AS Legislature race who claim gross irregularities in the conduct of the election.

"Consideration of suspension of the newly elected legislators from voting until the validity of the recent election is determined" is the ostensible reason for the special meeting, but almost assuredly the Board will be forced to consider all of the alleged violations of law before it is through.

Even the announcement of the meeting raises legal questions.

AS business manager Harold Harroun is listed as secretary of the corporation, but in fact the AS does not have a student-elected secretary as called for in the bylaws (constitution).

The Chief Justice of the Judicial Court is also listed as a member of the Board in the bylaws. For the last two years the AS president has refused to appoint a court at all, let alone a chief justice.

This is a direct violation of the constitution.

Another confusing factor is that AS President Jim Nixon is in New York and will not attend the meeting which he is supposed to chair.

Before he left he filed a memo stating that "Tom Linney (AS treasurer) will be acting president of the AS until my return on November 7, 1966."

This, too, is a direct violation of the constitution which says that the vice-president "shall succeed the office, duties and powers in the absence or incapacity of the President."

Author to talk on '84

A British author, Christopher Hollis, will discuss George Orwell, author of 1984, today in the Main Auditorium at 12:30 p.m.

Hollis, an Orwell expert, is a graduate of Eton and Balliol College, Oxford. He served on the faculty of the University of Notre Dame from 1935 to 1939 prior to war service with the Royal Air Force.

Besides his studies on Orwell, Hollis has also written on Erasmus, Dr. Sam Johnson and Elizabethan history.

Director claims efficiency

SF State Placement Director Vernon Wallace denied the charges of "inefficiency" by student Genevieve Lim in placing jobs for students.

"We are concerned with our service to the students. Our work is very efficient and we have no backlogs," Wallace claimed.

"Available jobs are posted," he added, "in the bulletin the same day the placement office hears from the employer."

SUPPORT

Corroborating with him were Gladys Heinle, business placement supervisor and Noele Winans, in charge of part time employments.

"There must have been error in communications between the employer and Miss Lim," Wallace said. "Miss Lim doesn't give a single fact to go on her charges."

Wallace was referring to three things: who the employer was, date application was listed in the office and the manner it was listed, either by telephone, mail or in person.

PUBLIC RECORD

Further, Wallace welcomes student inspection of the placement office's traffic and flow records. These are statistics of incoming job orders and number of students registering for work and actually placed.

Miss Lim had complained that "the placement center is slow in processing applications."

Her diatribe was not a personal gripe, she said. It came after her former employer, Pacific Plan in Stonestown, announced an immediate job opening. "It took two weeks for the center to get some action," Miss Lim said.

She claimed further procrastination when there was another job offer and another call was made to the center. "I think this unnecessary red tape can be eliminated," she said.

The placement office was moved to BSS 125 two months ago because of the new location's proximity to student traffic. More space also has been afforded for administrative offices.

The only other complaint the office has received came four years ago, according to Wallace.

"But compare that with the many compliments we have," Wallace said, proudly showing his files of letters, like a new father.

Neglected statues

Student stirs delayed action

by Mike Barber
A long festering sore in the side of SF State is again showing signs of a flare-up. This semester's agitation for the replacement of the college's Benny Bufano sculptures began this week.

The sculptures, which belong to the City of San Francisco, are a granite bust of St. Francis and a male figure, carved by Bufano, and an additional bug-like metal sculpture done by Karen Dervich.

They have been lying around in storage on campus since 1964, when they were brought there through the efforts of Mrs. Paul Dodd, when her husband was president of the college. The sculptures' value was estimated at that time at $3300.

Due to legal problems regarding responsibility for the art works and an alleged lack of enthusiasm on the part of college administrators other than the President and Mrs. Dodd, the sculptures have been collecting dust ever since.

Donna Mickleson, the thorn who is pricking the side of the administration, began demanding action on the sculpture issue in 1965, as a representative of the Associated Students.

She is now a coordinator in the Experimental College, and still concerned with bugging the administration on the issue.

Last semester she again spear-headed the drive to get the sculptures set up. By last May, when the matter of financial liability had at last been settled with the city attorneys, she was under the impression that the only thing left to do was pour the cement for the bases of the heavy pieces. She then turned the matter over to Orrin F. Deland, the college's business manager.

Miss Mickleson said, "I don't know why anything hasn't happened since then. I guess I should have followed it up. But now I want to see some action. Like, not one thing has been done for five months. It's really a drag."

When questioned, Deland put part of the blame for the delay on the fact that Plant Operations has been busy with moving administrators into new offices, and the rest on the legal affairs that have complicated the matter.

Deland said, "It does seem that we took an extraordinarily long amount of time to get this matter settled. But we are acting on it now, and I'm confident that we will have the statues up in a short while."

He also said that the administration might be able to use its budget to supplant the $1300 from the AS.

"We might be able to help them out if labor or certain other costs push the price higher than that of the allocation," he said.

Miss Mickleson plans to make a final recommendation to Deland about the display sites for the art works after consulting with art professor Ralph W. Putzker, Jr. Letters will be mailed to concerned offices after she and Putzker tour the campus early this morning.

However, she said, no change in the previously stipulated sites is expected. The bust of St. Francis will be placed in the court yard between the BSS and HLL buildings, the male figure near the trees on the quad, and the metal sculpture will hang inside the library.

"After that, there will be no excuse for any delay. I want those things up by December 1," Miss Mickleson said.

Miss Mickleson hopes that this will be the last she has to do with the project, and the final time the administration will have to be prodded.

"The money's getting moldy. The statues are getting moldy. This whole business is getting moldy. What a drag," she said.

Czar uses back door policy in soccer 'handball' protest

by Leonard Neft

The recent protest by Chico State coach Wayne McDuffy over the interpretation of the "handball rule" in a 3-1 Gator soccer win has been resolved, according to West Coast Intercollegiate Soccer Association (WCISA) president Steven Negoesco.

"If the two coaches, Art Bridgman and McDuffy, want to get together and replay the game they certainly may and it will count in the league standings," Negoesco said.

But he said that if they decide not to replay the game, the Gators' 3-1 victory will go into the official WCISA records.

"I have consulted with Referee Commissioner Derek Liecty," Negoesco said, "and he feels that the referee at the Chico game did make an error in judgment in that he interpreted the handball rule too strictly."

OFFENSE

"Liecty believes that since an offensive player, center full Jim Pergoy was involved, a free kick should have been awarded, but no grounds existed for putting him out of the game."

But Negoesco explained that if a defensive player had touched the ball, unsportsmanlike conduct could have been called, because defensive men work close to the goal cage and can directly stop a goal from being scored.

Offensive men, however, can only delay the game by handling the ball as they are usually around midfield and not in a position to directly stop a goal.

The referee who made the call, William Oveary, has stated in an official letter of interpretation to Negoesco that he believes the handball was intentionally committed.

"Chico coach Wayne McDuffy says his boy couldn't possibly have done it intentionally," said Negoesco, "but nevertheless he doesn't favor a replay of the game because of the travel distances involved. He simply wants a uniform interpretation of the handball rule throughout the league."

OFFICIAL LETTER

Negoesco said he will send official letters of interpretation from both the referee commissioner and the referee at the game to all the coaches in the league.

Regardless of whether the game is replayed or not, the referee commissioner's interpretation of the handball rule (that handling of the ball by offensive players shall not be considered unsportsmanlike conduct) will apply to such situations which may arise in subsequent games.

Water polo team wins wild tilt from Humboldt

by Phil Reilly

The SF State water polo team defeated Humboldt State 17-15, Saturday, in a wide open, free swinging game at Arcata.

The contest generated into a splashing farce as the result of inexperienced officials. They failed to call obvious and necessary fouls on both teams, causing the game and the score to get out of hand.

The Lumberjacks opened fast, scoring heavily in the first quarter, as the bewildered Gators waited for fouls to be called. At the end of the first period the locals were down three goals.

STYLE

Once the Gators "got with" the local style of play, they moved ahead and stayed there for the balance of the game.

While the offensive guns defensive game was far below par. They allowed Humboldt to score more points than have been scored against the local mermen in their last three contests.

SCORING

Rusty Mills and Jim Dunn pulled away from their teammates in the seasonal scoring race by each running up five tallies against the Lumberjacks. Mills leads the team with 20 goals, while Dunn is close behind at 17.

Other scores Saturday were made by Larry Rogers (3), Fred Kennelly (2) and A Stanbridge (2).

The Humboldt game marked the end of the Far Western Conference season for the Gators. Their 3-1 record, combined with Chico State's defeat of UC Davis assures SF State of second seeding in the FWC tournament at Davis November 12.

Frosh gridders win

The Gator frosh gridders on the heels of their first victory of the season meet an up and down San Jose State team tomorrow on the Gator diamond at 3 p.m.

Coach George Benkie's squad picked up a default win last Friday when its opponents, Moffett Field, didn't show up.

The Flyers claimed that the game was scheduled for Saturday, however, the Gator slate showed the game set for Friday. Efforts for rescheduling the game met defeat as Moffett Field declined the Gator offer to make up the contest at a later date.

The Spartans, tomorrow's foes, come bouncing off a 62-6 loss to a strong Taft JC team last week. Last year the San Jose team shutout the Gators, 13-0, and Benkie would like nothing better than to win this one.

The Gators bring a 1-4 record into the game. They have given up 78 points and scored 33 (including the default win over Moffett Field).

Tennis time

The second round of the intramural tennis tournament in progress this week, must be completed by 5 p.m. tomorrow. All those concerned should check the match schedule on the intramural board.
