

President's Scholars

About the President's Scholars Program

California State University Channel Islands is a special learning community that welcomes students as active partners in a distinctive educational experience. CSUCI seeks students who enjoy a campus environment where their voices and beliefs are embraced, valued, and respected. CSUCI students learn to think critically from professors who become mentors and sources of inspiration.

The CSUCI President's Scholars Program provides scholarships that include financial assistance to entering students whose outstanding academic achievement and character will be enhanced and enriched in a nurturing environment that emphasizes commitment, success, and service.

From left to right: President Richard R. Rush; President's Scholars: (Danika Lindsay, Jacob Jones, Lamoura Aguilar, Brad Jashinsky, Kimberly Tacke, Brandon Dowling, Ryane Cox and Jennifer Bonsangue); Interim Assoc. Provost Dennis Muraoka, advisor to the President's Scholars

CSUCI President's Scholars are encouraged to explore their talents, achieve their aspirations, and to strive to make a difference in society. They learn about the world and they learn about themselves. On campus, they become part of a diverse and close-knit community of students, faculty, and staff. CSUCI President's Scholars are given the tools to prepare for lives of scholarship, leadership, and service.

High school students who have distinguished themselves academically are encouraged to become a CSUCI President's Scholar by applying for this scholarship established through a generous endowment from the Pierre Claeysens family. The scholarship includes full California state resident fees, a $600 per semester credit at the University bookstore, and use of a laptop computer. The scholarship is renewable for 4 years. In addition, on-campus room and board will be included for a student who is also a National Merit finalist or semifinalist.