

CSUCI's Renovated Dining Commons Recognized in National Publication

Camarillo, Calif., Oct. 3, 2008-The Dining Commons at California State University Channel Islands was recently recognized as an Outstanding Design award winner by the American School & University magazine. The announcement was made in the magazine's August issue.

This issue of the magazine is an annual design awards issue that includes all school projects from Pre-K through Post Secondary institutions. CSU Channel Islands earned the design award in the cafeterias/food-service areas category. American School & University magazine focuses on issues pertinent to school administrators responsible for the design, construction and facilities management of campuses.

The 11,300-square foot Dining Commons renovation project at CSU Channel Islands was completed in August 2007. The renovated dining area features a blending of the California Mission-style architecture with a contemporary twist of bold and vibrant colors that appeal to students.
