Marathon overruns CSUB

By Marilu Cisneros
Assistant Multimedia Editor

The Bakersfield community gathered once again to participate in The Bakersfield Marathon on Nov. 12th, for its second year.

CSU Bakersfield served as both the start and finish line for the races.

The marathon showcased many of Bakersfield's more popular and notable parts.

"This is an event that highlights the community of Bakersfield. We invite hundreds of people from outside of our community. We have 16 states represented, 170-plus cities, someone from Japan is running our race today. What better way to show off our community, and the best parts of Bakersfield, than to bring folks here? We can direct the exact track they take through town, so we can show off Cal State, and BHS, and the bluffs, Westchester, and La Cresta all our beautiful neighborhoods," said David Milazzo, Bakersfield Marathon's executive director.

The marathon invited people from all over the world and more than 1,200 people participated in this year's marathon.

For many of them, like Ryan Carmody, this was their first year participating in this mar-

"I was well led throughout. I didn't get lost at all. I was confident on where I was going and everything like that. There was plenty of water to drink and everything. Lots of support from people on the sidelines so overall, I think it was a really good half marathon," said Ryan.

At the finish line, volunteers waited to greet runners with medals, pictures, and free massages.

"We are here giving out massages and stretches. So, when the runners come across the finish line, we are stretching them out, we are addressing any issues, cramping or muscle tightness. So, we are spending like five minutes with each runner," said Tim Gojich, owner of Fit For Life gym.

Adults, children, even dogs participated this year. Angela Bull walked the Runner 5k Run alongside her dog Samson.

"We walked it. He doesn't run... He doesn't get socialization as much anymore, so I come to these events it gets him out, he likes it and he is kind of an attention getter," said Angela.

After the races, participants and guests were able to enjoy live music, food, and drinks in the festival area.

"I mean what better event to be healthy, and then destroy that healthiness with some burgers, and pizza, and beer. I mean, awesome, right?" said David Milazzo.

Some of the amenities the marathon had for the participants included a breakfast, and short sleeved shirt.

For participants 21 years or older, one free beer was provided.

The marathon also had a course for those who rather walk.

The Bakersfield Marathon will be back next year, on Nov. 11.

One hundred percent of the donations made to the Bakersfield Marathon go to the CSU Bakersfield Roadrunner Scholarship Fund, for student athletes.

The Bakersfield Marathon is also a Boston Marathon qualifier.

Roadrunners win WAC for second time in four years

By Johnathan Wheatley
Reporter

For the second time in four seasons, the CSU volleyball team has won the Western Athletic Conference Tournament and clinched an automatic berth in the Division I Women's Volleyball Championship.

The Roadrunners defeated the University of Texas Rio Grande Valley 3-1 in the championship match.

The second-seeded Vaqueros were the defending WAC champions.

"I'm seriously out of words," said CSUB Director of Volleyball Giovana Melo to the WAC Digital Network. "The girls have fought so much throughout the whole year and it means everything. It means a lot to me because of them."

CSUB swept Seattle University on Thursday and upset top-seeded New Mexico State University 3-1 on Friday in the semifinals.

Senior outside hitter Aleksandra Djordjevic was voted the Tournament's Most Valuable Player.

Fellow seniors middle blocker Sydney Haynes and setter Fabiana Andrade were also named to the all-tournament team.

"I don't know if it's a dream or real life," said Djordjevic to the WAC Digital Network. "But we did it. Every athlete, the main goal is to win something like this. I am so proud."

CSUB went into the WAC tournament as the fourth seed after finishing conference play with a 9-5 record.

CSUB split the regular season series between Seattle U and lost both matches against New Mexico State.

CSUB split the regular season series with UTRGV. In the Roadrunners' previous match against the Vaqueros, the teams went five sets with the Roadrunners taking the victory.

The first set of the championship match began with both teams battling back and forth, with neither team able to separate.

A kill by Haynes gave CSUB the advantage they need and take the lead 8-6.

The Roadrunners would follow that by extending their lead to 11-6.

Haynes totaled 19 kills, a match high for both teams and a service ace. UTRGV battled back and tied the set at 12, and once again both teams would struggle to separate themselves. The set went into overtime as UTRGV took the first set, 27-25.

The second set saw the Vaqueros take an 8-3 lead over the Roadrunners.

CSUB stormed back and tied the game at 10 with a kill by Djordjevic.

FACULTY

Too much staff, not enough space

By Mario Hernandez
Reporter

CSU Bakersfield is in need of 41 new instructor positions for next year. However, there is no guarantee all positions will be filled.

Vice Provost David Schechter said the decision regarding the total number of professors being hired next year was part of a larger goal to increase the number of tenure-track faculty on campus. This is a goal of all 23 CSUs.

"This academic year we're [hiring] about 41 [faculty], and that is a mix of about 35 tenure-track and six lecturers," said Schechter.

Many programs are growing at a rapid pace and the campus is structurally expanding.

"Engineering would be one example where the number of majors is going up, and it's very important for us to have the number of faculty in place to support those majors," said Schechter.

The deans from each school at CSUB inform the Provost how many new faculty positions are needed. The Provost makes the final decisions.

A department may ask for a dozen new instructors, but the school might only be able to add 10 for this year.

Bianca Garibay, a senior kinesiology major, said it was important for professors to have their own office space.

"Professors and faculty, in general, need their office space in order to meet the needs of the students and fulfill their role as a professor. How can they do that without adequate office space? Why aren't we utilizing the old dorms for office space?" said Garibay. "I'm sure not every single room in the old dorms is being occupied."

The budget for the current faculty search is still unknown. There will be a budget forum on campus in December.

"There is a cost associated with the hiring, like we bring people in, we fly people in from around the country, around the world, we put them in hotels. Each of those hires is allowed $5,500 dollars," said Schechter.

In addition, the university also must budget for new hires' salaries and benefits.

Along with the search for more faculty comes the problem of where to put them. Schechter said the process takes a lot of planning.

"There is some truth to that concern, absolutely. We do the hiring process each year, where we start the hiring process a year in advance. We plan how many positions will be approved," said Schechter.

Part of the planning involves taking into consideration which faculty will be leaving and retiring.

Sandra Hernandez, a liberal arts major, felt that the lack of office space was only a part of a larger problem, the lack of space all over campus.

"Students as well as professors face the problem of available space on campus.

"Space is a problem for everyone right now, including students. Every location is over flooded. The Student Union is no longer fun to be at because you have nowhere to sit. The library has the same problem of needing a place to study. With this Bakersfield weather always being too cold or too hot to be outside we need more indoor places to study and hang out," said Hernandez.

Lack of space is an unavoidable conflict for any growing university. However, CSUB is doing its best to provide every individual on campus with adequate space.

"It doesn't always work out well enough where we have specific offices lined up for every new faculty. But we do our best and I would say 90 plus percent of the tenure-track faculty have space," said Schechter.

Lecturers are viewed differently in terms of office space due to their lack of time on campus and their constant travel from one campus to another.

"For lecturers it's a little different because some of the departments and schools do not have enough offices for each individual lecturer, and sometimes lecturers are teaching two classes here [at CSUB] and two classes at Bakersfield College or two classes at Taft," said Schechter.

Different measures are taken by different universities to accommodate the instructors as best as possible. Some of those measures may result in the sharing of an office.

"I love and value a higher education, and we need to supply our professors with the right resources," said Garibay.

Mario Hernandez

Part of the new Humanities Office Building was allocated for office space for new instructors.

The next building with additional office space will be the Natural Science, Math, & Engineering Building IV.

"NSME IV is the next building in line that has already been approved by the campus and the Chancellor's Office and they are now doing architectural plans and all that for that building," said Schechter.

An NSME IV structure will not be seen until two to three years from now.

Consent Project helps victims of sexual and domestic violence

By Alexis Redding
Reporter

The Consent Project is a national campaign that supports victims and families affected by sexual or domestic violence.

The Consent Project Club has been active on the CSU Bakersfield campus since October 2012.

Humboldt State University was the first college campus to implement the Consent Project in fall 2010. At CSUB, a Consent Project club was formed with the help of students, staff, and the organization Kern County's Alliance Against Family Violence and Sexual Assault (AAFVSA). The club's goal was to focus attention on what consent is and what it means for young adults.

Club members and AAFVSA established the Consent Project at CSUB to give victims and non-victims a safe environment to freely express their experiences.

The purpose for the Consent Project and their activities is to provide a safe space for all, including non-victims, to speak confidentially about domestic violence and sexual assault.

According to the organization, consent is defined as words or conduct that gives permission for a particular sex act. If a person is intoxicated, unconscious, physically or mentally incapacitated, or coerced into submission, consent cannot be granted.

Students at CSUB have participated in events, club meetings, and projects such as Denim Day, Mental Health Awareness Month, and Domestic Violence Awareness Month to help support the Consent Project.

Between Oct. 16 and Oct. 31, 2017, students, survivors, and AAFVSA have collaborated for Domestic Violence Awareness Month and held their first pop-up art show titled, "Unsilenced."

Ten original art pieces were on display in the Rohan Building at CSUB from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Those in attendance saw visual interpretations from survivors and had the opportunity to hear and share experiences of sexual assault.

The club's mission is to "educate students, staff, faculty, and administrators about sexual and domestic violence."

The last meeting for CSUB's Consent Project Club was held on Nov. 15. The upcoming meeting schedule is yet to be determined, but it will be posted on CSUB's events calendar.

For more information about CSUB's The Consent Project, contact Campus Advocate and Education Coordinator Vanessa Corona at 661-654-6210. Also, visit the Consent Project's university webpage at www.csub.edu.

COMMUNITY

CSUB inducts alumni into Hall of Fame

By Runa Lemmin
News Editor

The nominees for CSU Bakersfield's Alumni Hall of Fame had similar responses to making it onto this year's list.

Jeremy Adams, Bryan Burrow, Edward Paine, and Debbie Wood all said they felt extremely honored to be nominated.

The event announcing the nominees was held on Nov. 14. Carla Barrientos, President of the CSUB Alumni Association, opened the event.

Barrientos said the Alumni Hall of Fame was created 12 years ago to recognize and celebrate CSUB's most distinguished alumni.

The Board of Directors and President Dr. Horace Mitchell came together to create the Alumni Hall of Fame.

Barrientos said each year, university staff, alumni, faculty, and other community members nominate the individuals they feel are deserving of the award.

"These four inductees are a great example for nearly 15,000 alumni, not just locally, or nationwide, but worldwide," said Barrientos.

To be nominated, individuals must fulfill certain criteria, which include earning a degree or honorary degree from CSUB prior to five years before the year nominated, a track record of success, an emphasis and care for higher education, and community involvement with CSUB. A history of positive contributions to the community is also on the list.

Following the opening speech by Barrientos, CSU Board

Trustee John Nilon introduced Mitchell.

Mitchell said he tells each graduating class at commencement that he looks forward to seeing some of them as nominees in the future.

"At commencement, one of the things that I say to our students is that we look forward to the cumulative and collective contributions they will make through their professional achievements, civic engagement, and leadership in our global and diverse society," said Mitchell.

Business major Samuel Mata, an undergraduate student, realizes the value of the Alumni Hall of Fame. Mata said the award was a positive thing.

"Anybody who can make not only the campus, but the community, a better place should be recognized," said Mata.

This year's nominees each have an impressive list of achievements and contributions to the state and local community.

Some of nominee Adams' many achievements include earning a teaching credential from CSUB in 1999. He is a teacher at Bakersfield High School, and an adjunct professor at CSUB.

Adams said he didn't imagine he would ever actually win a nomination.

"This award gives me a sense of real humility," said Adams. "It's not just that you win it, it's that you want to be worthy of winning it. I feel like I need to keep working to be worthy of it."

Burrow, who earned an MBA from CSUB in 2000, is the CEO of Sierra School Equipment Co., and served as President and CEO of the Bakersfield Symphony Orchestra on the long list of positions held in the community.

"I shouldn't be here," said Burrow. "It's an honor to be a part of this group."

Burrow said it's about investing in people and the investments people have made in him over the years.

"It's about the collective investment that people have made in my life, and so it's my way of kind of giving back," said Burrow.

Paine, who earned his bachelor's in business administration in 1980, has been successful in real estate and insurance. He has been involved in many charitable causes locally. One of his accomplishments is saving the Mercy Child Development Center from closure.

"Like most people in my position, I feel that I am not overly deserving of the accolade," said Paine.

"You don't have to do anything spectacular. You can just be steady in your commitment and good things can happen."

Wood earned a bachelor's in nursing in 1982, and an MA in education in 2000. She is the school health coordinator for Bakersfield City School District, and she has taught in CSUB's nursing program for nearly 20 years.

Among other accomplishments, Wood established health centers to treat many of Bakersfield City School District's 30,000 students, a large percentage of whom are uninsured or underinsured.

"Without Cal State, I would never have been able to do what I've done," said Wood.

Mitchell said the CSUB Alumni Hall of Fame induction ceremony will take place on Friday, Feb. 16, at the Bakersfield Country Club.

"Proceeds from that event will support and benefit the alumni scholarship fund," said Mitchell.

Fraternity celebrates a holiday tradition

By Chantel Vargas

CSU Bakersfield's fraternity Delta Zeta Tau hosted the 18th annual La Gran Posada on Nov. 16 in the Student Union.

The event began with dinner and music by Mariachi Juvenil. The Student Union was decorated with papel picado and a donkey piñata on every table used as center pieces.

Three different types of tacos were served at the event with chips, salsa, Mexican sweet bread known as "pan dulce" in Spanish, and much more.

The vice president of DZT, Adalberto Valenzuela, and brother Francisco Torres introduced La Gran Posada's guest speaker Clarita Portillo and recited the fraternity's mission statement in both English and Spanish.

WALTER PRESENTS

Raising awareness of immigration reality on campus

By Veronica Morley
Features Editor

The U.S. immigrant community may have many concerns but CSU Bakersfield is expressing its fealty for the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA).

"I obtained my green card under Ronald Reagan's Amnesty Act. I don't recall living in fear that I would be deported until I met my children's father who was in the country illegally," said Heidi Forsythe.

Forsythe is an alumna of CSUB and adjunct professor here as well as Bakersfield College.

Forsythe was born in Mexico in 1977 and came to the U.S. when she was three years old. As a student at CSUB, she said she never had the same fears of deportation that others may experience today.

Although CSUB has continued to support a Dream Act and undocumented students, the recent repeal of the DACA by President Trump in September has left many in discord.

One DACA student, Ana Chavez, is working to help undocumented students receive the support they need. She and other students this year have attempted to reestablish the school club United Now for Immigrants Rights (UNIR). The group meets on Thursdays in DDH 103G at 3 p.m.

"We're preparing this coming break to plan activities and more workshops to help any students. We would like next semester to have more counseling and support groups," said Chavez.

Forsythe remembers when she was a young immigrant living in Lamont she never realized the struggles other immigrants may face. Even after receiving her green card at seven years old, she never thought about her status or how she differed from other students.

"I was also living in poverty but maybe I didn't look like I was poor. I remember telling my classmates that if they were going to call these Mexican students 'wetbacks' then they should call me one too, and I pulled out my green card. The teasing soon stopped," she said.

Chavez hopes that by reestablishing UNIR, immigrant students will feel this same sense of responsibility that Forsythe felt towards standing up for one another.

"I really advise them to check it out and to get into the community to express themselves. Especially with DACA being rescinded we want congressmen to act," she said.

The support for immigrant rights in Kern County extends further than just CSUB. Former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Julián Castro shared his hopes that the California congress will support to pass a Clean Dream bill.

"My advice to Dreamers wherever they are would be to continue to raise their voices, to get involved in advocacy, and to push back," he said. He also expressed his sympathies for the CSUB Dreamers who may feel unease in Kern County. "The majority of Americans understand that these young people are adding a lot of value to our country and that they're morally blameless for being here in the United States and that the United States is a place that they consider home," he said.

The library program "Walter Presents" has also shown their interest and support for undocumented students.

In October, the library invited Don Bartletti, of the Los Angeles Times, to share his experiences documenting immigration. Bartletti spent 32 years travelling through various areas of South America and photographing immigrants.

The following event was a public screening of the documentary "American Migrant Stories" which follows groups here in Kern County.

On Nov. 16, as part of the CA Writers Series, poet Vicki Vertiz performed a reading of her latest work in the December Reading Room. Her poems spoke especially to Latino culture and immigrant struggles.

UNIR hosted a workshop on Nov. 17 to help Dreamers understand the application process for the Dream Act and other scholarships.

The workshop was run by Stephanie Perez who works in the financial aid office with undocumented students. Perez says she has a special passion for her Dreamers.

"If there's any definition of dream, it's my AB545 students," said Perez. She herself is a sixth generation citizen.

Her family originally migrated to the U.S. from Holland and she feels strongly about the treatment of immigrants in the U.S. "No one really has claim to this land in my opinion, unless you're Native American," she said.

Perez also wants students, immigrant or not, to feel comfortable asking the financial aid office for help. She believes students, especially those living in student housing, have a false fear about aid and taking out loans. She wants students to understand that taking out loans is sometimes necessary, but does not mean the end of the world.

If there was any question of CSUB's support for immigrants, it should be put to rest.

Harmonious sounds fill the air

By Karin Patiño
Reporter

CSU Bakersfield's Chamber Orchestra and Symphonic Band performed at the Doré Theatre on Nov. 13.

Opening up the night was the Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Dr. Leo Sakomoto. The orchestra performed pieces by Jeff Manookian, Edward MacDowell, Johan Svendsen and Gustav Holst.

Although it was a petite orchestra with only 10 players, the combination of the violins, cellos, basses and viola filled the theater with their soft and superb sound. The arrangements of the evening varied from mellow, grandeur songs to later performing a downright jig. Holst's "Themes from St. Paul's Suite" part one is literally titled "Jig." Quite catchy, if you ask me.

The orchestra's members showcased skill and precision whilst working among such a bevy of strings with no frets on the instrument necks to add any guidance. Level of impressed: through the roof.

After four songs, though, the tune of the evening changed. While the orchestra exited stage right, the Symphonic Band entered to round off the evening. Grander in size and instrument variety, the symphonic band filled the stage from front to back. While the chamber orchestra blessed the audience's eardrums with peaceful and serene melodies, the band absolutely shattered it with mega hard pizazz, in an incredible way.

Gordon Jacob, the Symphonic Band kept a continuous raucous boom throughout the room. The flutes, the clarinets, the trumpets and everything beyond showered the room with big, boisterous sounds that absolutely filled my heart with joy. But maybe, most likely, I'm just being a biased band geek.

Halfway through the set, guest conductor Carlos Vasquez stepped out to guide the band during Grundman's "American Folk Rhapsody No. 2." Switching back with Sakomoto, Jacob's "An Original Suite" was the closing number on the repertoire.

Sakomoto was all gusto and zest when conducting the musicians, but none of this would be possible without the hard work of the players. Hours of practice was evident in their show.

STAFF EDITORIAL

Survivors should stand in solidarity

We congratulate each of the individuals who have been brave enough to share their experiences with sexual assault. Exposing those who, for far too long, have perpetrated these inhumane crimes is a brave feat that does not go unrecognized. Although we understand and respect everyone's decision on whether to speak out or not, we encourage more victims to share their stories.

We've recently witnessed how speaking out can bring awareness, debase assailants, and most importantly, assure victims they are not alone.

This modern wave of awareness and intolerance towards sexual harassment has brought forward a community of support for sexual assault survivors.

Social media has become a medium for the movement, "Me Too." This movement has resembled a snowball effect; the growing number of people that have shared their stories has encouraged more people to share theirs.

In light of these stories, we are very disappointed and disgusted by how many people have been accused.

It saddens the editorial board to see how many people have been affected. It also saddens us to see that people that were once considered heroes and leaders in their industry were being glorified by fans, all while preying on their victims behind closed doors.

Unfortunately, bringing attention to sexual assault was necessary in revealing that sexual harassment does not discriminate on any grounds.

One of the women who was assaulted by Harvey Weinstein was actress Lupita Nyong'o.

In an Op-ed written by Nyong'o in the New York Times, she writes "Harvey led me into a bedroom — his bedroom — and announced that he wanted to give me a massage. I thought he was joking at first. He was not. For the first time since I met him, I felt unsafe. I panicked a little and thought quickly to offer to give him one instead: It would allow me to be in control physically, to know exactly where his hands were at all times."

In a recent interview between Anna Wintour and Meryl Streep, the topic of sexual harassment was discussed.

"Do you feel the recent events regarding predatory work place behavior will advance the feminist agenda and opportunities for women, or set it back," said Wintour.

Streep said, "This moment is absolutely thrilling. This is a door that will not be closed. We got our foot in there now, and it will be difficult for people to conduct their lives like they have in the past. 'Oh that's just locker room talk.' 'Oh that's just the way men are.' No it's not. We are civilized people and we learn from our mistakes."

We agree with Streep's statement. "Locker room talk" can no longer be an excuse or a shield that people can hide behind.

We have a president that is guilty of this type of rhetoric.

How can a nation change its mind when the people in power refuse to do so?

"And when you're a star, they let you do it. You can do anything. Grab them by the p---y, you can do anything," said Donald Trump, president of the United States.

It is time everyone realize that rhetoric such as what President Trump demonstrated is not harmless.

It is noticed and has a consequential effect in people's actions and attitudes.

Politicians like former Alabama state judge Roy Moore have also been accused of sexually assaulting women.

Beverly Young Nelson was one of the women who has come forward to reveal how Moore sexually assaulted her in 1977, when she was only 16 years old.

One of the more striking details of Nelson's encounter with Moore was how he used his status to intimidate her, not unlike other powerful men who have been brought to light regarding their predatory behavior.

Although it has been decades since the assault against Beverly Nelson, it is nonetheless inspiring that she came forward.

Individuals such as Nyong'o and Nelson should be recognized as beacons of strength and inspiration for other survivors to come forward.

It is in our hopes that they, and all others, will be able to find closure with what happened to them.

The time is now when all survivors of sexual assault, rich and poor alike, are being heard and finally have the power to shape the future.

So much momentum has been built surrounding these issues and it's a provident time to continue the conversation and remain in arms against rape culture.

We as a society, we can change. We need to change.

HOLIDAY

Feel blessed, but keep in mind the oppressed

By Triandous Hobson
Reporter

It's only a couple days until Thanksgiving so you know what that means? It's Christmas time.

Just kidding, it means that it's that time of year to give thanks for each of the things that we are grateful for.

So in honor of this celebrated holiday, here's a list of things I'd like to share that I'm grateful for.

Let us all be grateful for Vine shutting down last year and hope that the same happens to Twitter, so that we finally won't have to endure the expense of Twitter happy fingers.

Let us be grateful for how often we hear about collusion by our current administration. Yet, every day, we get a new report of collusive behavior operated by people in our government with zero repercussions.

Let us not forget to be grateful for capitalist days of observance such as Black Friday, in which everyone gives in to the demand of big corporations in the hopes of saving on gifts, a month before Christmas.

Retailers took in $3.45 billion last year on Black Friday, according to the Adobe Digital Insights statistics.

That's a lot of money when you consider the trillions of dollars of debt our country is in, and rising, but we have only material things to show for it.

There are cities that lack clean water, have populations of homeless people that are much too high, and an indifferent attitude towards helping those in need.

Of course, we should feel grateful for the opportunity to spend our money and walk around, because the day before we'll have eaten so much that we'd feel guilty if we didn't!

In fact, we have people in our great country that want a wall to prevent people the opportunity of potentially bettering their lives.

According to the New York Times article, "Border Wall Could Cost 3 Times Estimates, Senate Democrats' Report Says," by Ron Nixon, "An internal report by the Department of Homeland Security said the wall could cost about $21.6 billion, not including maintenance."

Let us be grateful for football, which most of us watch as a pastime, to see men destroy their bodies and brains for our entertainment.

But no one listen to the issues they're trying to bring awareness to. That's not what people want to see.

Let us be grateful for entertainment and by that, I mean, thank you women and men that are speaking out against those who have harassed, harmed, or even threatened people.

It has been entertaining to see people get what they deserve.

I'm just sorry that so many people had to go through what they did to finally have one speak up.

Finally, let us be grateful for Thanksgiving itself. A day in which we celebrate a time in our country's history where people of different cultures came together and broke bread with one another.

Although, we all know what followed when natives' land was robbed, and their people experienced a genocide from a combination of infections and attacks by the Anglos.

It is almost comical how we turn a blind eye to Native Americans, when last year the government wanted to push the Keystone Pipeline through the Sioux land and was met with resistance.

Natalie Rosica/The Runner
ciety that promotes wealth over health, entertainment over free speech, and gluttony before the hungry.

Let us give thanks to having a day to celebrate an American holiday, that might actually be offensive to Native Americans.

The very concerns with the pipeline was the risk of hurting the environment, and just a couple of days ago, Keystone pipeline leaked over 210,000 gallons of oil in South Dakota, near a water reserve. Ogallala Aquifer, one of the worlds largest underground deposits of freshwater in the whole world.

But let us come together and remember that we live in a so-

ECONOMY

Arvin moves to attract businesses by legalizing marijuana cultivation

By Dane Kuntz
Reporter

Arvin is a small, almost unknown, town in Kern County that is taking the lead in improving its economic status with a booming industry.

Arvin voted in favor of moving towards passing regulatory cultivation of marijuana with a four to one vote.

The hope is that outside dispensaries will reach out to Arvin for supplies of cannabis.

Although Bakersfield has been the center of Kern County making innovations to become the major metropolis of the area, it is missing out on a substantial opportunity.

Adding new freeways and pushing for upgraded plans for a new public transportation system isn't going to benefit the city's economy the way that cultivating marijuana is going to benefit Arvin's.

On top of banning commercial marijuana from being sold within the city, Bakersfield still has a ban in place regarding growing marijuana outdoors.

Arvin on the other hand has made the choice to monitor, regulate, and of course, tax the indoor cultivation of recreational marijuana.

Just like the largest and wealthiest cities in California.

Melina Delkic reported in Newsweek in her article, "L.A. Approves Marijuana Rules for Recreational Dispensaries," that Los Angeles made $21 million in tax revenue from the sales of medical marijuana in 2016.

The city is expecting to gain $50 million by the end of 2017.

According to the article,

"Arvin Considers Allowing Indoor Cannabis Cultivation," posted on Bakersfield.com, Mayor Jose Gurrola said it will bring in money that he does not want to pass up on. He explained, "In light of our budgetary situation... we are moving forward with this... if we regulate it, we can take advantage of potential tax revenue."

Colorado sets the example with the recreational marijuana industry. Since January of 2014, it has accumulated $506 million from taxing marijuana.

This booming industry is not going anywhere.

Arvin residents will greatly benefit from the boost in their local economy, and the new jobs that will subsequently be available. But, financial benefits are not the only reasons for regulation.

Regulation can keep the public safe and healthy. The use of marijuana seems inevitable, and is comparable to consuming alcohol.

Providing cannabis for a dispensary, with regulations, ensures safe handling practices and takes away the risk of it being laced with other drugs.

Regulation simply allows individuals to grow the plant with government measures in place.

The entire west coast of the nation has legalized recreational marijuana, and the number will continue to rise until it is federal law.

The City of Arvin is adjoining with California's stance as a state, and has made a step in the right direction to secure its economic future.

Williams, Nickell win titles as Roadrunners finish second

By Vincent Perez
Assistant Sports Editor

The CSU Bakersfield wrestling team (2-4) finished second of 22 teams in their own Roadrunner Open on Sunday, Nov. 19. Three Roadrunners reached weight-class championship matches, winning two.

Senior Matt Williams remained undefeated this season and won the 197-pound weight class championship against Stanford's Nathan Traxler, by decision, 12-8.

"I like competing. It was a close one," said Williams. "That's the joy of wrestling, is battling."

In Palo Alto, during their Nov. 11 dual, Williams beat Traxler 5-4, by decision.

"This time, I wanted to widen the gap," said Williams.

Williams is ranked No. 10 in the country. But, he said that rankings don't matter.

However, he added, "If they put me at No. 1, they got it right. If they don't, that's their bad."

Sean Nickell, a redshirt-junior, won the 133-pound weight championship and second weight championship for CSUB.

Nickell beat Dylan Duncan of Illinois by a 10-4 decision.

After the clock ran out, Duncan gave Nickell a shove in the face. Nickell said he was a better wrestler than Duncan and it showed.

Redshirt-senior Sergio Mendez (125) reached his weight championship, but lost to Wisconsin's Travis Piotrowski, via decision 11-4. Redshirt-sophomore Lorenzo De La Riva (165) lost his championship match against Evan Wick of Wisconsin.

Wisconsin won five weight championships at the Roadrunner Open, leading the team to a first-place finish as a team.

Head Coach Manny Rivera said that the two championship wins was good for the team.

"It's nice to get a bigger portion of our season done," Rivera added that Nickell wrestled his best wrestling of his career in his championship victory.

Redshirt-sophomore Russell Rohlffing (141) and redshirt-freshman Dominic Ducharme (184) both won their 3rd place matches.

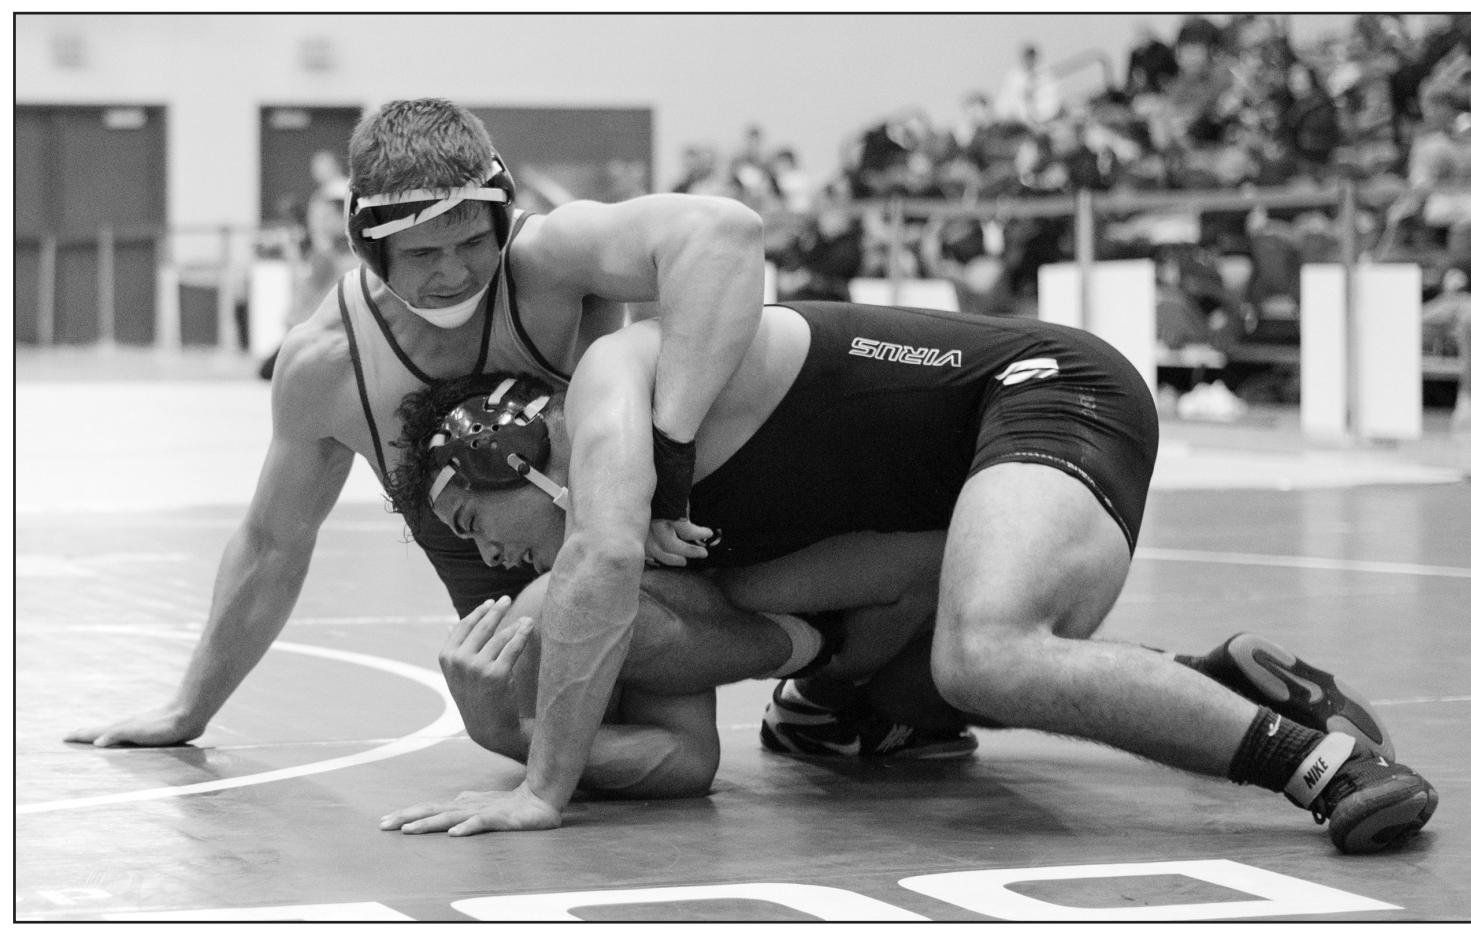

On Nov. 17, CSUB hosted No. 18 Wisconsin and No. 25 Pittsburgh.

CSUB lost to Pittsburgh 21-18 and Wisconsin, 22-18, despite leading 11-0 to Pittsburgh and 9-0 to Wisconsin to start each dual.

Rivera said, "We wrestled poorly against Pittsburgh. We threw that one away." He added, "We put ourselves in position, won our first few matches and had some letdowns."

Mendez (125) had two victories on the day against Brendan Price of Pittsburgh by decision (9-5) and he pinned Wisconsin's Ethan Rotondo.

Williams (197) defeated Pittsburgh's Kellan Stout by major decision (11-3) and earned a 4-1 decision over Wisconsin's 16th-ranked Hunter Ritter.

Williams said, "It's just having fun. The goal is to dominate, and you got to love what you do. Let the results take care of themselves."

He added he wants to win as a team.

"If you look back, the mistakes we made, they're just silly mistakes. We got to go back and work the fundamentals of wrestling," said Williams.

In his first match of the season, redshirt-sophomore Matt Penyacek (285) pinned Wisconsin's Ben Stone early in the second period, which inched CSUB closer to Wisconsin. Penyacek said he wanted to get the pin for the team win.

"I just hope to make a good contribution," said Penyacek.

On Nov. 11, the Roadrunners lost another close match, 18-16 to No. 18-ranked Stanford. Sophomore De La Riva (165) won by decision over Stanford's Dallavia 5-4. No. 19-ranked redshirt-sophomore, Rohlffing earned a major decision (14-3) over Stanford's Isaiah Locsin.

Both teams exchanged wins and team scores came down to the last match of the night.

The final team score came down to the heavyweights. At 285, No. 12 Nathan Butler, of Stanford, pinned CSUB freshman Jarrod Snyder with 32 seconds left in the first period.

Next, CSUB hits the road for the two-day Cliff Keen Las Vegas Invitational Dec. 1-2.

Following that, the Roadrunners travel to Fresno State Dec. 8 and face Northwestern Dec. 18 in San Luis Obispo, California.

Rivera said that the wrestling team will be ready for the invitational.

"We got a nice break and time to get ready."

Briggs powers CSUB past Lamar to snap losing skid

By Peter Castillo
Sports Editor

In the first ever matchup between the two schools, the CSU Bakersfield men's basketball team handed Lamar University its first loss of the season with an 85-73 win on Sunday, Nov. 19 in Beaumont, Texas.

Senior forward Shon Briggs led the way for the Roadrunners as he finished with 22 points, seven rebounds and four assists.

With the win, CSUB improves to 2-2 on the season and snaps a two-game skid.

"Always good to get a win on the road and Lamar is a good team," said CSUB Head Coach Rod Barnes to gorunners.com. "It wasn't a perfect game, but our team figured out a way to get the win on the road. I thought we did a great job of getting to the line and making the free throws and I thought that was the difference in the game."

Freshman guard Jarkel Joiner added 18 points and six rebounds. He also shot a perfect 12-for-12 from the free throw line.

Redshirt-junior guard and Texas native Damiyne Durham chipped in with 17 points off the bench. He knocked down five three-pointers on the afternoon.

CSUB outrebounded Lamar 35-26 and limited the Cardinals to only 25 percent shooting from deep.

"I am really pleased with how we played defense and how we rebounded the ball tonight," said Barnes to gorunners.com.

The win followed a pair of road losses to Georgia Southern University on Monday, Nov. 13 and the University of Arizona on Thursday, Nov. 16. The

Wildcats were ranked third in the nation in the AP Poll.

In the two losses, CSUB was outscored 168-112.

Despite losing to Arizona 91-59, CSUB outscored the Wildcats 36-30 in the paint.

Poor free throw shooting hampered the Roadrunners in the first two games of the road trip as they shot only 17-for-43 from the charity stripe.

However, CSUB recovered Sunday and shot 27-for-33 from the line.

Senior guard Brent Wrapp fouled out with just under eight minutes remaining. He was a nonfactor in the win as he only scored two points in 17 minutes.

The two teams combined to commit 59 fouls on Sunday.

Up next, the Roadrunners will travel to Anchorage, Alaska to play in the final installment of the GCI Great Alaska Shootout. CSUB will play three games over Thanksgiving weekend, beginning with a matchup against Alaska-Anchorage University on Wednesday, Nov. 22 at 9 p.m.

The Roadrunners will play either the University of Idaho or Santa Clara University on Thursday, Nov. 23.

Roadrunners drop both in Northern California road trip

By Taylor Long
Reporter

The CSU Bakersfield's women's basketball team dropped both games of its two-game Northern California road trip over the weekend.

The Roadrunners (1-3) faced the San Jose State Spartans on Friday, Nov. 17.

The Roadrunners fell behind early to the Spartans but made a late comeback.

They eventually fell 67-57.

San Jose State (2-2) jumped on the Roadrunners right out of the gate, leading after the first quarter 26-10.

The Roadrunners caught up in the second quarter, outscoring the Spartans 16-6 in the frame.

Junior forward Malaysia McHenry led the Roadrunners with seven points and three boards in the quarter. She finished with 12 points and four steals.

San Jose State made eight-of-ten free throws while CSUB made only one-of-four.

Senior redshirt-center Jazmyne Bartee and junior guard Alexxus Gilbert helped cut the 16-point deficit with six points each in the frame for the Roadrunners.

Bartee ended the night with 13 points and eight rebounds, while Gilbert finished with eight points and three assists.

"We battled all the way back to be in the game at the end," said Head Coach Greg McCall to gorunners.com. "We had a lot of mental errors, a lot of fundamental errors down the stretch, but I'm very proud of how hard we battled to get ourselves back into position to win it. Now we just have to learn how to go out and win it with this young group."

Yet again, the Spartans came

A service ace by Andrade won the set for the Roadrunners 25-18 and tied the match at one set apiece.

CSUB came out after halftime firing on all cylinders and took a commanding 17-8 lead over UTRGV. The Vaqueros did not give up, going on a 13-3 run of their own to take a 21-20 lead. It was their first lead since the opening set.

The set went into overtime with the two teams swapping leads.

The Roadrunners prevailed 30-28 with two straight kills by Haynes and Djordjevic.

In the fourth set, both teams once again went back and forth with neither team being able to separate themselves by more than a point.

CSUB finally extended its lead by two, 13-11 forcing a UTRGV timeout.

The Roadrunners continued to stretch the lead and would force another Vaqueros timeout after a kill by junior outside hitter Briannah Mariner made the lead 17-12.

Mariner added six kills and four blocks to the Roadrunners total.

UTRGV tried to stage a come-reached double-doubles in the championship match. Sukhov totaled 10 kills and 11 digs along with four service aces, while Wicks added 28 assists and 10 digs along with three service aces.

"I have to give it to the coaches," said Haynes to The Bakersfield Californian. "They told us, 'We believe in it. No matter what, no matter how our season's gone, we believe in it.' We just went along with it and we started believing. We wrote it on our wrists every day and we looked at it. We believed in each other, we believed in this program and we knew we could do it."

The Roadrunners will have to wait until Sunday, Nov. 26 to know their opponent in the first round of the NCAA tournament. It will be aired on ESPNU at 6 p.m.
