

Spartans Speak on COVID-19

May 18th, 2020

With graduation around the corner I have come to realize how different life would be right now if the pandemic was not happening. The coronavirus has affected the entire world in ways I would have never imagined. I am thankful that my loved ones and myself are healthy and stable. The transition has been tough but slowly I have become accustomed. At first, I was a bit lost trying to adapt to online classes since I learn better in person. San Jose State University and the faculty have been very comforting in the aspect of all the resources they offer to its students. I am very content the way SJSU has handled the situation. I pray for the world to get better and to return back to normal. Life has been a roller coaster these past weeks financially and emotionally.
