CAL STATE PAST PRESENT FUTURE

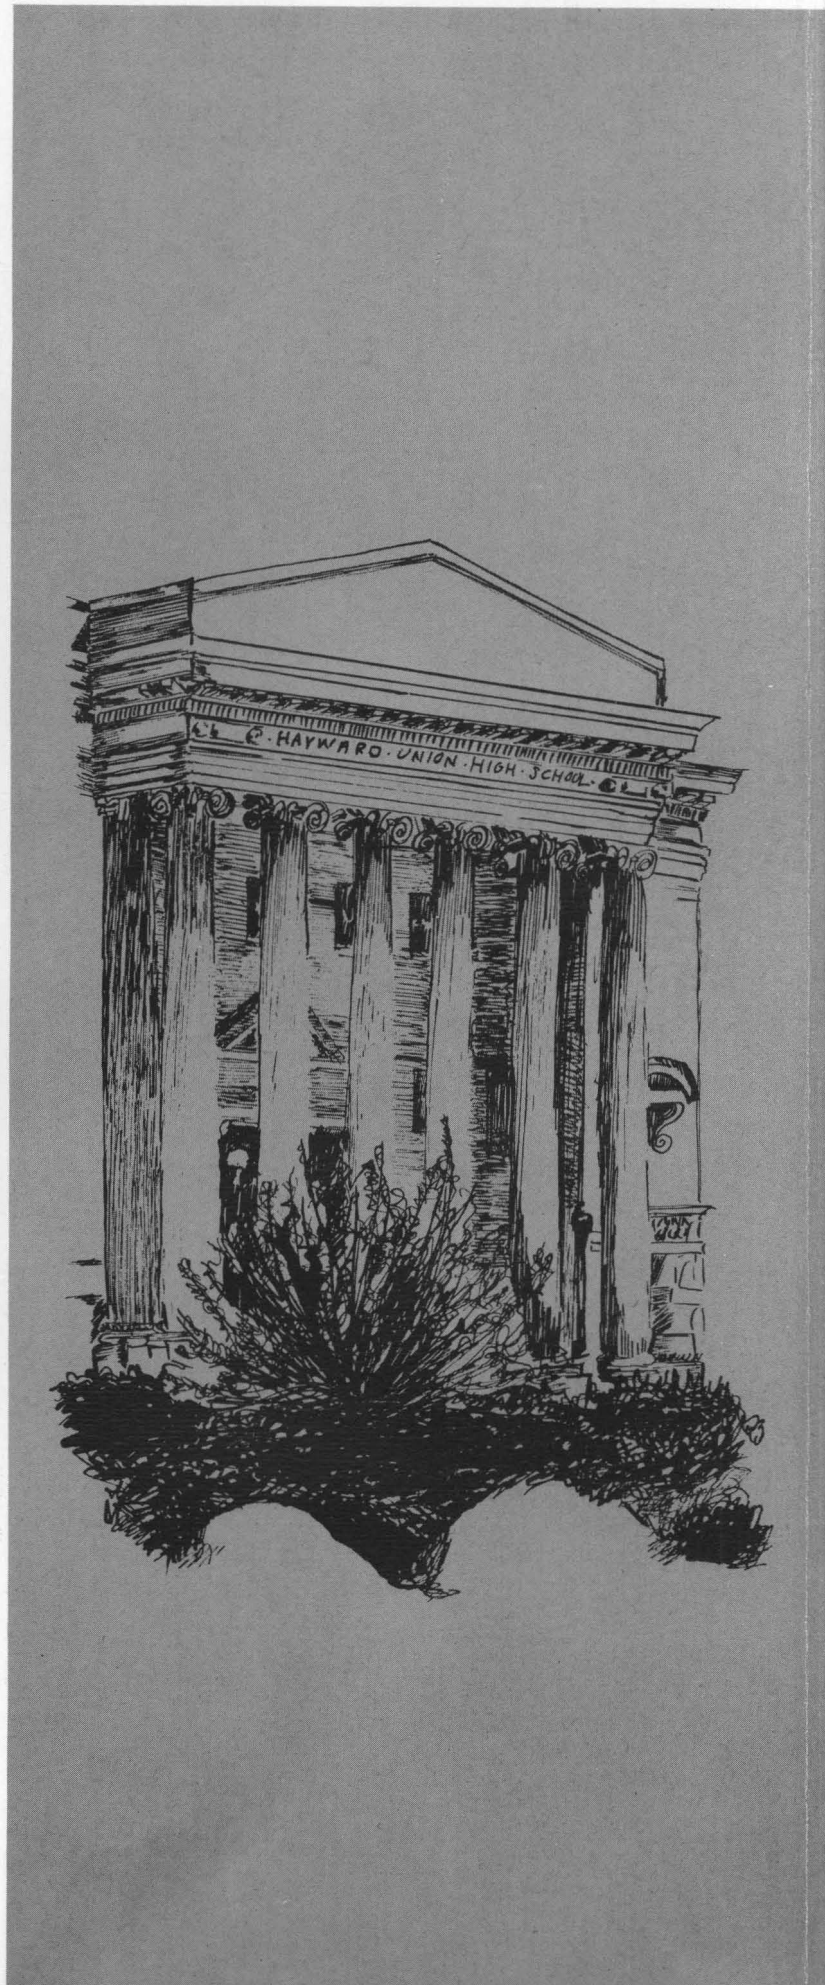

THE PAST--A NEW COLLEGE IS BORN

Pioneering Years

California State College at Hayward was established in 1957 by the State Legislature to meet the tremendous population explosion in the East Bay Area and the increased emphasis placed on higher education. It first opened its doors to students in September of 1959, occupying a temporary campus on Foothill High School in downtown Hayward. During the years at Foothill High School, student and faculty members alike faced a number of difficulties, due to the extremely inferior facilities available on this campus.

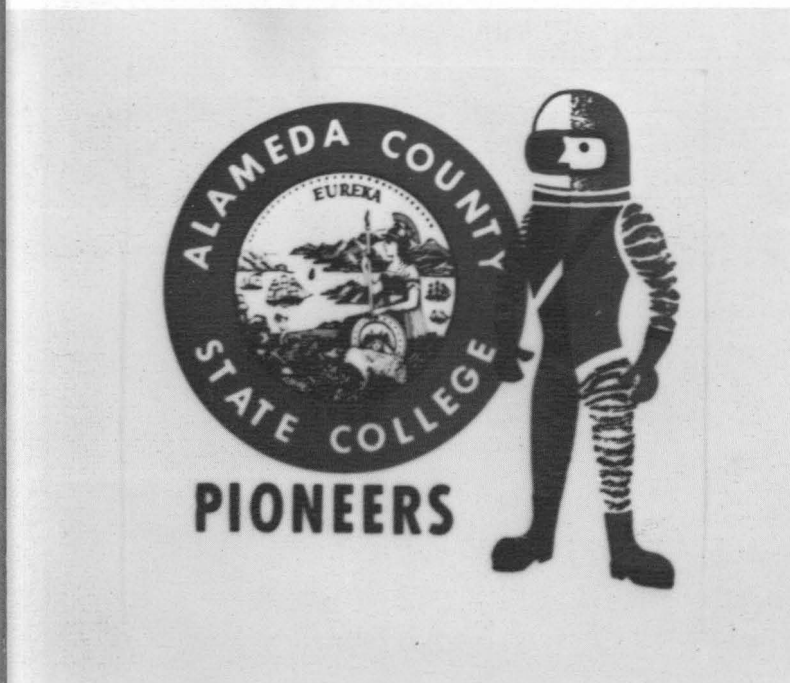

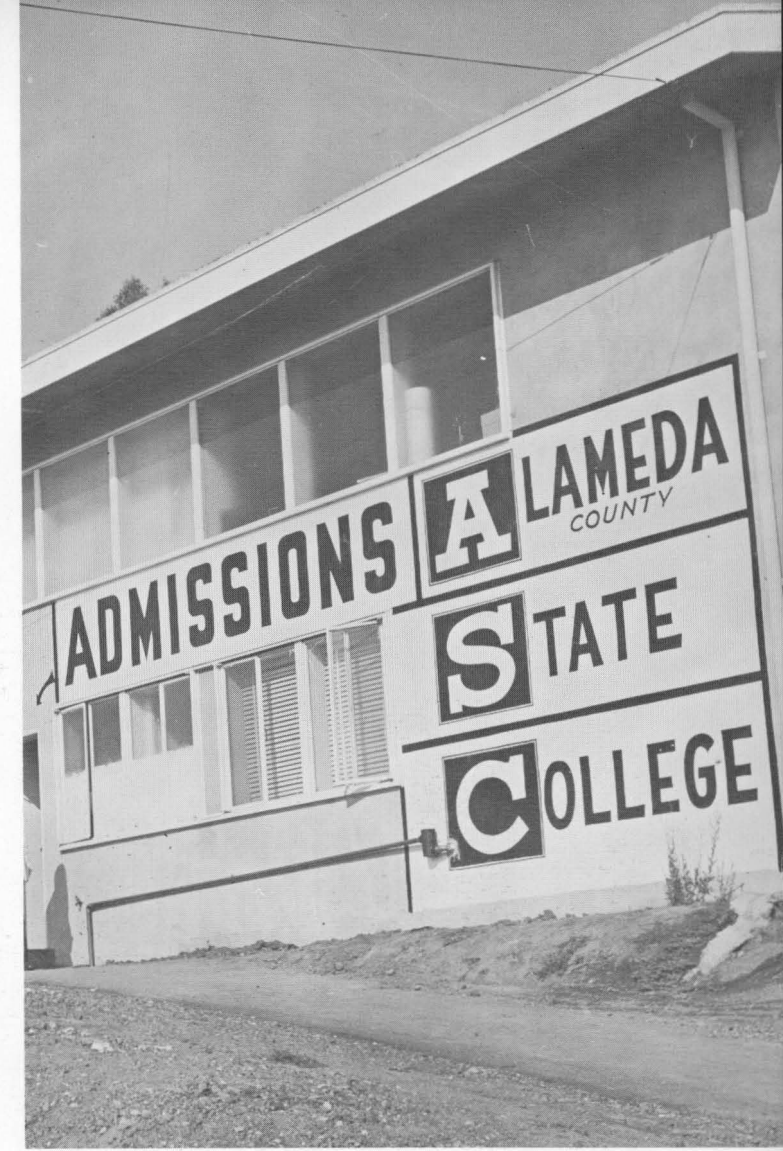

Despite these many difficulties, the College accomplished a phenomenal amount in these first years such as gaining full accreditation by the Western College Association and comprising a library of over 75,000 volumes. Also during this time the campus was surrounded by a grave, intense attitude and spirit. This attitude and spirit was common to both the staff and the student body and can best be expressed in a statement by Dr. Charles Merrifield, Professor of Social Science: "Leaky roofs, morning shivers, and a Candlestick Park noise-level were our daily lot on the Foothill campus, but these were surmounted or forgotten as issues were earnestly debated, new vistas opened and great ideas introduced. We were all pioneers in a new and exciting enterprise — the literal construction of a new and hopeful era."

In its short duration, California State College at Hayward has built for itself an extensive aggregation of tradition surrounded by a sociable, cultural, and scholarly atmosphere. These outstanding resources are due to the sound, staunch body of students who have set a firm foundation on which those to follow may appreciate, enlarge and expand.

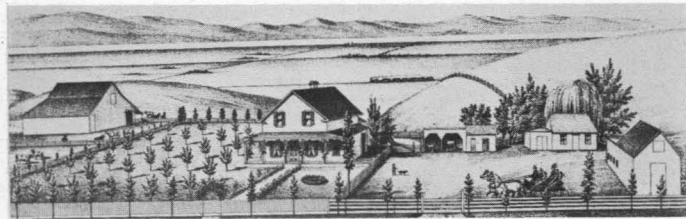

Upon the opening of the college in the Fall of 1959, the students sought some form of organization for its exceedingly small student body, consisting of a trifle over 175. In May of 1960, a special committee established a prospective Student Association Constitution. On October 18, 1960, a constitutional convention was held and the proposed Constitution was adopted. Thus the Associated Students of Alameda County State College (as the college was then named) came into being. At an all-college election the first officers of the Association were chosen, Mr. Kenneth Ernst becoming the first President. The first act of the Association was the formation of the Student Council consisting of a President, Vice-President, Secretary and one representative from each of the academic divisions of the college. Through another all-college election in 1961, the students selected the Pioneer, represented by an astronaut, as the College insignia and red, black, and white as the College colors. During the next two years the Student Association greatly expanded along with the college enrollment, which increased on an average of approximately 700 a year. Many clubs and organizations emerged, such as the Political Affairs Club and the Women's Service Organization; also, a wide range of concerts, art exhibits and speakers were sponsored by the Association. The academic divisions also sponsored a number of cultural and intellectual activities, such as the publication of Amaranth, the first literary quarterly, by the Humanities Division. The present college newspaper, The Pioneer, was begun during the academic year of 1961-62. Also, during that year the first intercollegiate varsity basketball team emerged to place second in the Far Western Conference league play.

LAND CLEARING AND GROUND BREAKING

These cultural, social, and athletic activities, which originated during the first four years of the college were united with something even more outstanding. This was the creation of extremely high academic standards; thus offering the student, in addition to a wholesome atmosphere of fellowship and loyalty, an education of the highest quality and merit. This superior academic and intellectual environment was due to the illustrious and diverse faculty, of which Alameda State then (and still) boasts highly. The faculty in the Spring of 1963 represented over 235 institutions, and 88% of the members held the doctoral degree. A very sizable percentage of this faculty were both nationally and internationally recognized! This attribute converted the college from purely provincial to eminently cosmopolitan and envied by many institutions of comparable size and duration. Also, a number of publications were produced by the faculty, both before and after becoming affiliated with the College. The high quality of the staff was attested to by the continued attraction of outside funds to support research and training despite the inadequacy of space and equipment. The faculty, along with the student population, increased greatly during those first four years — from a meager 12 in the Fall of 1959 to 115 in the Spring of 1963. Each new member brought with him a wealth of personal experiences and many non-measurable gifts in fields of scholarship, research, and respect for education.

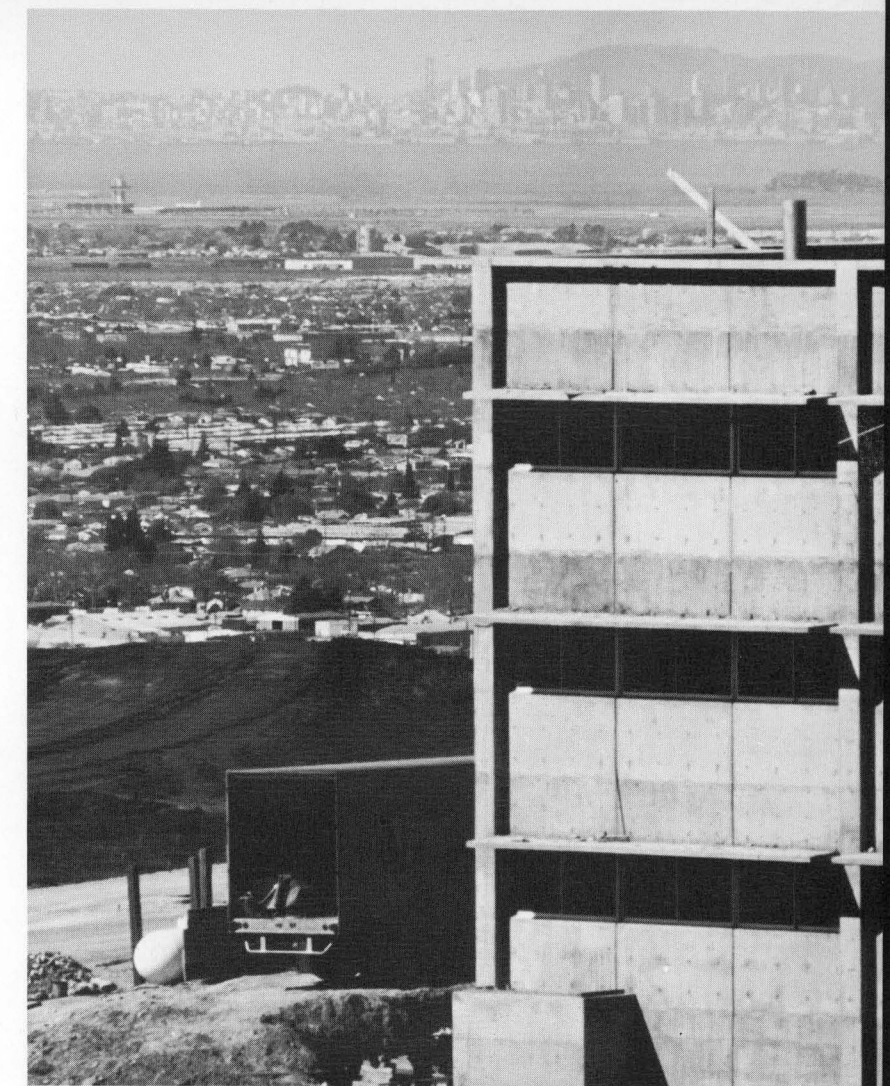

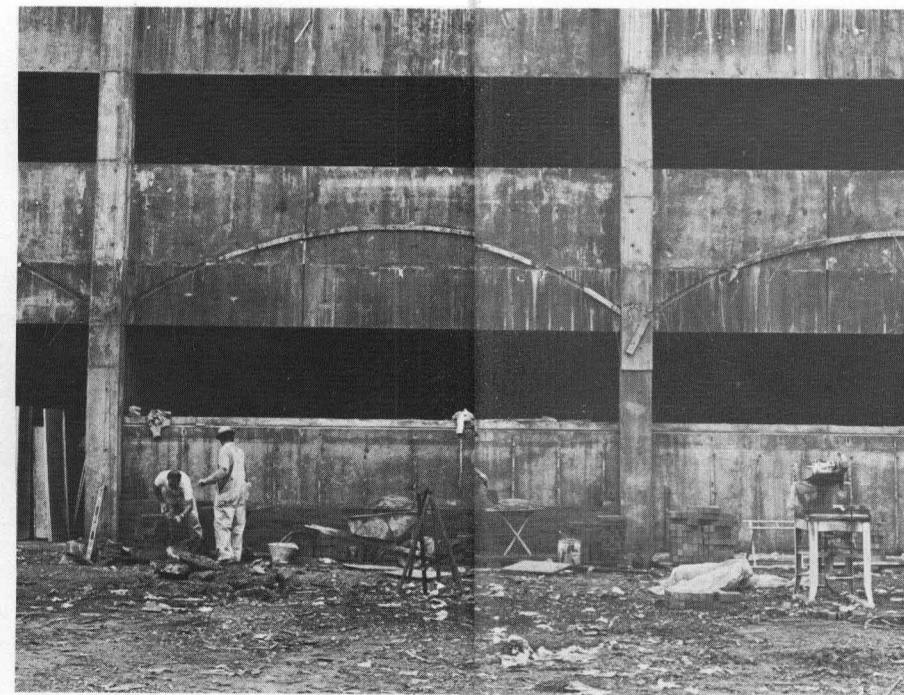

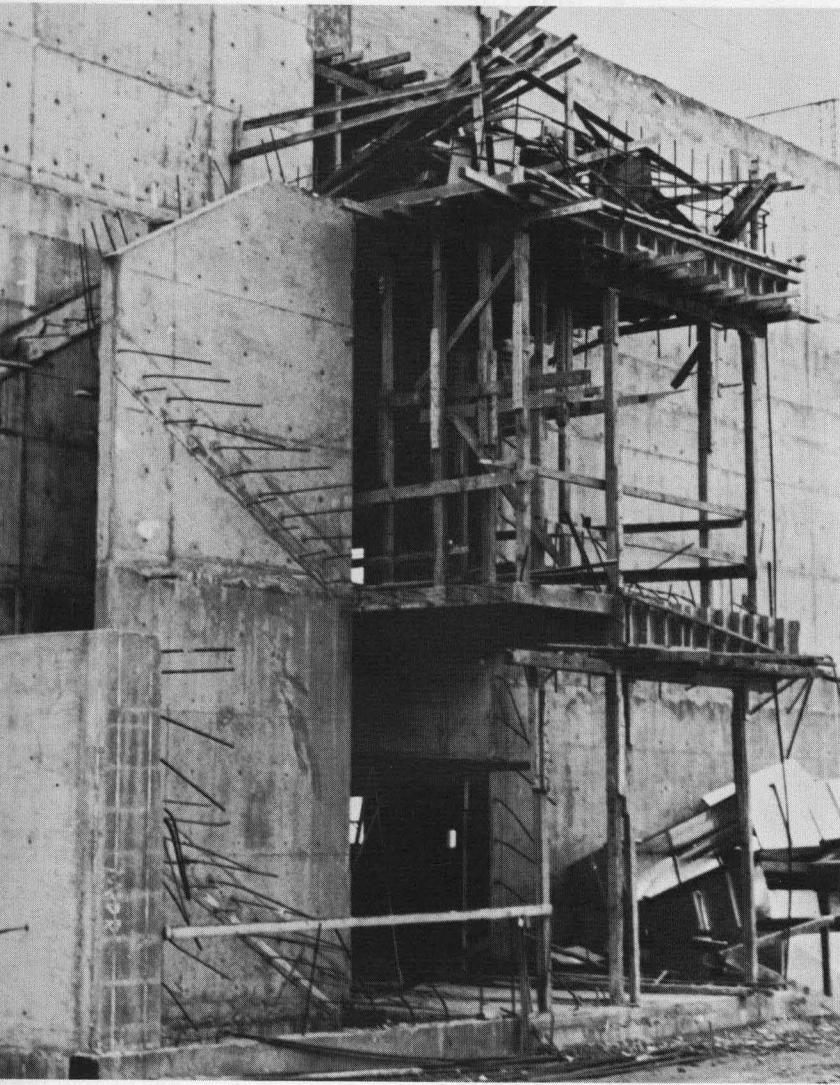

In June of 1961, Alameda County State College held its first annual Commencement. That day 24 men and women received baccalaureate degrees. Mrs. Beth Gourley, the very first student to enroll at the College in Fall of 1959, was among those receiving degrees. She, along with her fellow graduates, realized what those few years at Alameda State had meant to her and what a lasting impression they will make on the duration of her life. Every one of these first graduates has become a productive and successful citizen in his chosen field (in most cases the teaching profession). Their strong desire to contribute to the continuation of the College's outstanding educational goals was attested by their active participation in the Alameda County State College Alumni Association, formed in 1961. The primary contribution of the Association to the College was the establishment of the annual $50 cash award given to the student who displays the highest standards of moral character, scholarship and outstanding service to the College. The first 24 graduates were aware that a degree was not all they received from Alameda State College. They received from a distinguished and commendable faculty, an education surpassed by few institutions; which widened their intellectual horizons at great length. From an organized and heterogeneous Student Association, they received an opportunity to engage in a wide range of social and cultural activities; which contributed to their becoming widely diversified, both in traits and abilities. Because of the short duration of the College, they received the unique opportunity of making a lasting contribution to the molding of its spirit, ideals, and traditions; thus becoming "Pioneers" in the true sense of the word.

CONSTRUCTION BEGINS

For the first year in its six year history Cal-State now occupies a permanent campus of its own — a landmark in the physical development of the College. However, it is not only a physical landmark, but also an academic landmark. For just as new buildings and new facilities became available for use; new opportunities arose for the social, cultural, and intellectual development of any who wished to indulge in this great educational opportunity.

The campus is situated on 365 acres of land in the foothills one mile south of the city of Hayward. Students and faculty like to think the educational vistas of the College are commensurate with the physical one — wide, lofty, and unobstructed. For from this hilltop locality, the College commands a sweeping and scenic panorama. From the campus on a clear day one can see as far south as San Jose and as far north as Tiberon.

The land on which the campus is situated was originally homesteaded by Timmothy Hau-schildt in the late 1850's. Hauschildt built a prosperous wheat and cattle ranch from this land, the function it was to serve until purchased by the State of California in 1960. The Hauschildt Ranch was one of a number of proposed sites selected for the College; others located also in the Hayward area, Pleasanton, and Livermore. The Hauschildt site was chosen for its beneficial location and land topography.

The site was officially dedicated on February 22, 1961 at groundbreaking ceremonies held on it. At the dedication the first spade of earth was turned over on the site marking the beginning of development of the campus. Over 700 onlookers witnessed these ceremonies; which were attended by a number of state and local dignitaries, including Governor Edmund G. Brown. At a dinner given on the evening of the celebration, the Governor expressed the attitude toward the College of all those affiliated with it in a statement he made: "The College is one in which all California may take pride."

FINISHING TOUCHES

Site development was officially commenced on April 3, 1961. At this time excavators began the tremendous earth-moving task of literally "carving a campus out of a hill." Men and equipment toiled around the clock for three months. Finally, on September 1, 1961, site development was completed and construction began on the first two permanent buildings of the campus, the Science Building and the Fine Arts Building. Construction proceeded at a steady pace for the next two years.

The year 1963 was a memorable year in the growth of the new campus. For it was during the summer of this year that the Trustees of the California State College System changed the official name of the College from Alameda County State College to California State College at Hayward. Toward the end of August of this year the Fine Arts and Science Buildings were completed and occupied early in September.

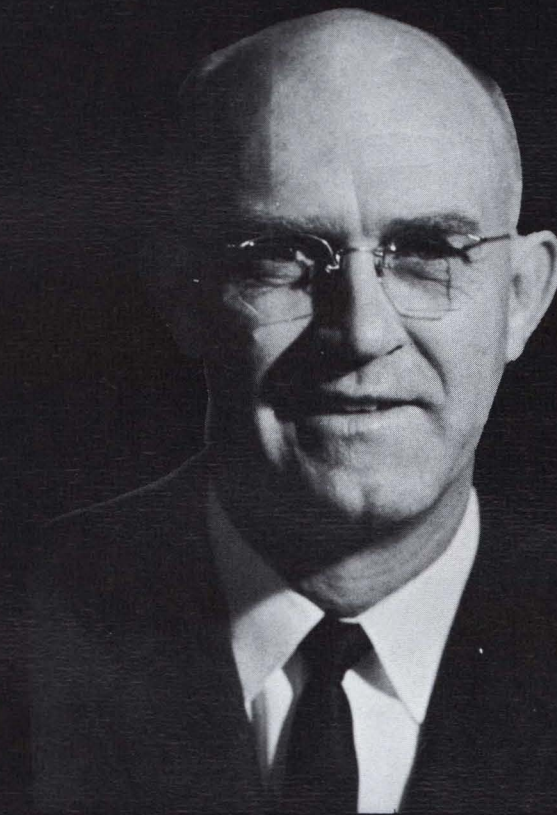

Perhaps the event which climaxed this notable year was the arrival of over 700 new freshmen eager to take advantage of the superior cultural and educational opportunities that the College made available.

What those first freshmen saw that first day of Orientation Week in September was the gratifying result of approximately $20 million in State funds and approximately 28 months of arduous effort. The land had been considerably leveled in preparation for a large-scale program of future development. It consisted primarily of two structures. The one farther to the south was the four-story Science Building. This building contained the library, audio-visual services, and laboratories for both the physical and biological sciences. The second structure was the three-story Fine Arts Building, which contained additional classrooms, faculty and administrative offices. In addition to these two structures, freshmen saw and made use of a 4,000 seat outdoor glade and several hard-surface parking lots. During the course of the academic year, students and faculty were spectators to a broad program of further campus development including beginning construction of the first off-campus dormitory, continuing construction on a physical education field house, tennis courts, a track, football field, two baseball diamonds, and the launching of a full-scale program of landscaping.

The newness of the campus and its lack of being fully developed did not hinder the spirit and vigorousness of the students. The athletic program during the 1963-64 academic year, although limited, received a great deal of support from the student body. A wide range of cultural and social activities were also available this first year. As for the first freshman class, most came to realize that they were not only launching a college career, but also the beginning of an institution which will prove of primary significance in the lives of all who attend it. The feeling of the majority of these freshmen can be expressed by one of them, Doug Shipp from Berkeley; "Despite limited facilities this past year at Cal-State, we were not hindered scholastically or athletically. For when we graduate, we will have surmounted these problems, and we will be able to say, 'We were there when it began.'"

CAL STATE 1970

The academic year, 1963-64, has been an exciting one—full of many “firsts.” In September we greeted our first freshman class — an outstanding group of people with tremendous potential. Our hectic beginnings, as we moved onto our barren campus with the beautiful view, gradually took form and became our academic home.

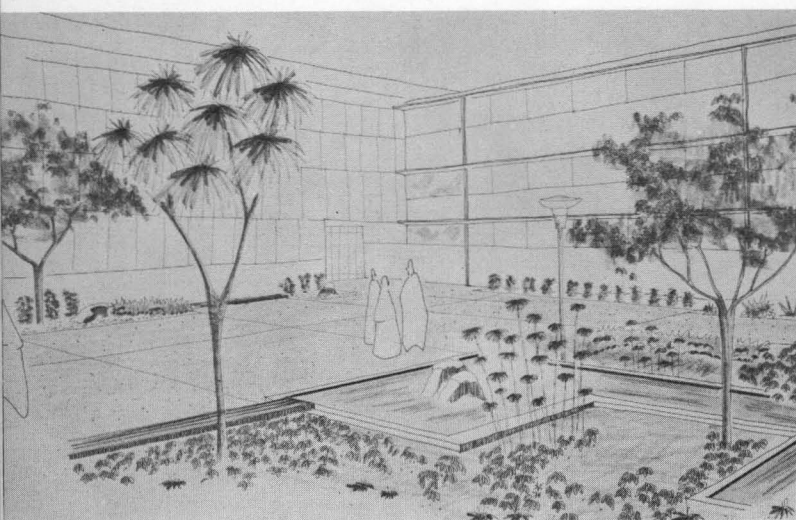

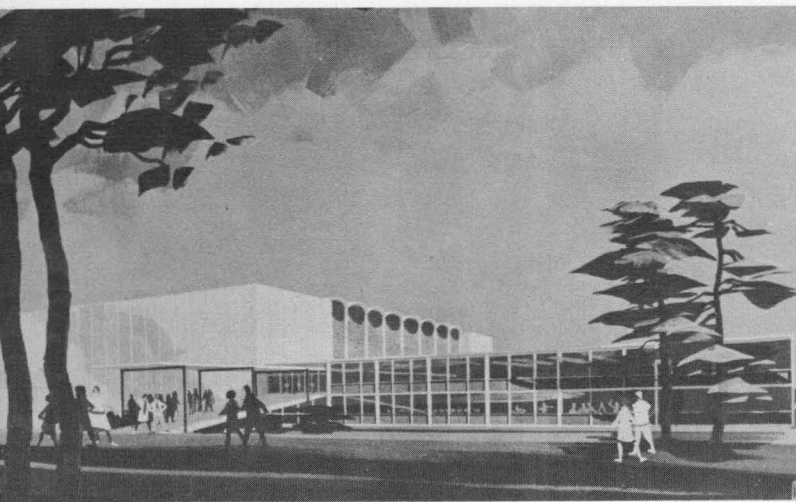

The “Class of ‘64” was our first graduating class to leave with personal memories of our permanent campus. The formal dedication week was packed with speeches from important visiting dignitaries and presentations by our academic divisions. It was a total college effort — and a time to be long remembered.

In years to come we can look back on this year as one of great achievement for students who scaled new educational heights; for faculty who labored long in difficult circumstances to provide a superior opportunity for students to learn; and for a devoted staff who worked far beyond the call of duty to bring order out of the chaos created by our move.

All of this took place while bulldozers played “musical mountains” around the buildings — and the sidewalks, plants, trees, and grass were gradually emerging and taking shape on the landscape.

It has been a memorable year for all of us — and one we can look back on with a real feeling of accomplishment. To the Class of 1964 in particular, we give our best regards and wish them fond farewell. We hope they will come back to see us often as our college grows, and that they will carry the spirit of “Elan” through the rest of their days.

Fred Harclerod

Bulldozers, earth-movers, dirt walkways, a rather provoking parking situation, and mud were a few of the difficulties encountered by Cal-State staff, faculty, and students during their first year on the new campus. However, it must be understood that these obstacles, will materialize into a spectacle of far greater measure — a campus, far-reaching in dimension, and academic offering.

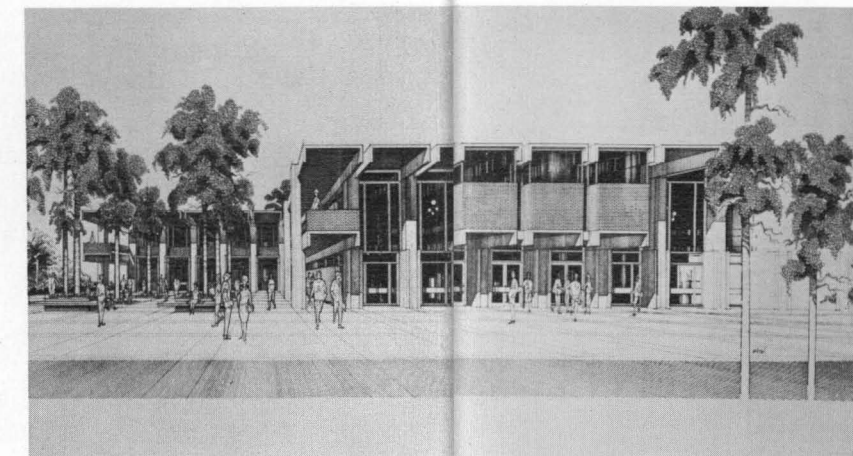

It is estimated that Cal-State will have a full-time enrollment of 15,000 students by 1980. In order to meet this tremendous influx of student population, provide them with adequate housing, and educational facilities, the state has formulated for the College a long-range master plan of development. This master plan will comprise over a decade of labor and will cost approximately $75 million dollars.

A ten-story Administration and Library Building is scheduled for completion in July of 1969. This building will house the administrative staff of the College, business management, student personnel, a greatly enlarged library, and audio-visual services.

Instruction in the areas of mathematics and science will greatly expand with the completion of a five-building science center, on which construction is scheduled to begin in approximately eight years. Also, 35 acres of land adjoining the southern boundary of the campus will be utilized as an Outdoor Science Laboratory.

Creative arts will comprise a significant part of the College curriculum. This will be made possible by a Music Building and Speech-Drama Complex to be located in the far northeastern corner of the campus. Scheduled for completion in July of 1965, the Music Building will house facilities for the storage of all music equipment, an organ studio, and a 200-seat choral rehearsal room. The Speech-Drama Complex will include a classroom building plus a 500-seat Little Theater, all scheduled for completion in July of 1968.

WHAT IS TO COME

A physical education center is scheduled for completion in the Fall of 1966 and will be located directly above the present football and track stadiums. The center will be comprised of a 3500-seat basketball pavilion, two outdoor swimming pools, and additional gymnasium facilities. Upon the completion of this center and the present outdoor facilities, the College will have quite an extensive program of inter-collegiate athletics.

Additional classroom and office facilities will be located in an academic center in the southwestern part of the campus. This center will consist of several buildings, the first to be completed by July of 1967. Also, a 953-seat cafeteria building is scheduled for completion in 1966.

Adequate housing will be provided as student population increases. The first off-campus dormitory will be completed by September 1964 and will have accommodations for 312 students. During the next ten to twenty years, a multi-building residence center will be constructed and will ultimately house 3000 single students.

The ultimate completion of this long-range development plan will be an institution representing the most advanced architectural techniques and commanding an atmosphere of beauty and serenity. It will be of benefit not only to its students, but also to its surrounding area, providing a center for cultural and intellectual stimulation.

DEDICATION

CAL STATE'S NEW BREED

As college freshmen we have taken a very large step, perhaps the most significant in our lives, for it has led us from one environment characterized by adolescence and regimentation, to another characterized by adulthood and self-determination. Upon entrance to college we should have ideals firmly implanted within our minds, a growing respect for knowledge, and a realistic lifetime objective. Trivial desires and pleasures of our childhood and youth should be mere memories.

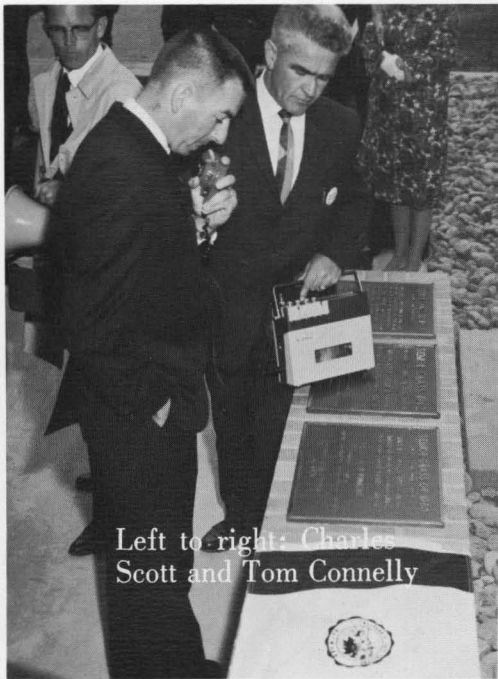

To most of us college is primarily a place for the acquisition of intellectual insight. During our years at California State College, we will become acquainted with a vast array of knowledge encompassing many fields, either explored scantily or in great depth. Acquiring this array of knowledge will give us a broader idea of the significance of education in the understanding of the world in which we live.

During the past year we have fully perceived of the secondary significance of a college, which is the broadening of one's social perspectives. The numerous social and cultural activities sponsored by our widely diversified student government have given us an insight into a better understanding of our fellow man and into the infinite number of vistas being opened in our rapidly expanding society. Our athletic contests conveyed to us the true meaning of loyalty, spirit, united effort and their significance in our sentiment toward our nation as well as toward our school. The many new acquaintances that we have made this past year have added a new depth and extensive degree of pleasure to our educational experience.

Intellectual insight and broader social perspectives are only two of the unlimited contributions made to us by Cal State for which we are endlessly grateful. However, gratefulness is only a fraction of our attitude toward the College. A very large proportion of us have acquired a rather deep sense of obligation toward it and a consideration of contributions we can make to it. As a result of this consideration, we have come to realize that the most significant contribution which we can make is the perpetuation of the spirit, ideals, and traditions of the college as set forth by its "pioneers".

We would like to convey our most sincere gratitude to the faculty for the inspiration and intellectual challenge which they have conveyed to us; to the administrative staff for the miraculous educational benefit which they have created for us despite limited facilities; and especially to our student leaders, all who have assisted in making our freshman year at Cal State a priceless era in our lives.

JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY

A man of his age who understood his age;
A patriot who loved his country's history and made vows to its future;
A man of lively and disciplined intelligence who respected the works of the mind and looked forward to an America which would not be afraid of grace and beauty;
A man of courage, and authentic heroism in war, who knew that courage is not foolhardiness or the will to fight but the will to accept the burden of complexity and the wisdom to combine valor and hope;
A man of sincere but unostentatious religious faith;
A president who gave our nation a new sense of itself, a renewed conception of our role as a young, questing nation destined to live with danger but called to strive for peace;
A statesman who regarded politics as a noble art of the governance of men and who understood the limits and responsibilities of power to advance the just purposes of the nation;
A man of vitality and enthusiasm, of wit and gallantry, of humor and compassion, of courtesy and cool precision, of tenacity and affection — a man with a contagious zest for life and for the full use of his powers in the pursuit of excellence;
A leader who challenged his country to make the promises of democracy come true in our generation;
A young president who evoked the residual idealism of youth and helped awaken a civic and global consciousness in the student generation of our day;
A man of vision who spent his last days leading his nation to turn toward peace and to recover its historic commitment to equal human and civil rights for all;
A happy warrior who walked the stage of history unafraid, and whose brief days gave us a vision of greatness in our time.

STUDENT COUNCIL

Student Council has had a hard year preserving its areas of responsibilities with respect to its own budget. President Harclerod has sought to take over the traditional student budgeted areas of athletics, music and drama. It has been my conviction and that of Student Council, that student fees should be controlled by students. I still hold to a statement I made during my election campaign which stated, "If we are to have student government then let it serve the students, if it doesn't let's abolish it." The budget of Student Council is a key area to student government and if this area is delegated to an authority outside the control of Student Council then I can't see how it will serve the students as directly as the converse situation. The President has cited incidents of student irresponsibility on other college campuses and infers he would not stand for this at Cal State. My reply is that student responsibility is not developed in the ivory tower of the administration but must be allowed to encounter the mistakes that will be made by students so that future decisions will be strengthened by their errors, hence the responsibilities of the students will grow appreciably. Student Council has fought to maintain this goal during the preceding year.

WSO

The Women's Service Organization was started in 1963. It is a club for upper division women who are interested in serving their school and community.

The past year W. S. O. has ushered at all plays and musical productions here at Cal-State. The members have worked with civic leaders in various talks and tours of the campus. Commencement was also a service which the members served a luncheon after graduation exercises.

W. S. O. members also worked diligently during freshman orientation week and also during dedication week.

All the members of this organization are very indebted to the fabulous assistance from Miss Marge Martin, advisor. The club also appreciates the service of Dean Joann Seavey.
