When TOAD came to town...

by Sumaya and Christy

When I interviewed members of Toad the Wet Sprocket last year, I drove them to and from KCPR. Now that they're "rock stars," getting them to the station was like a bad episode of "Mission Impossible."

Sumaya, the hip photographer, and I waited in the U.U. for the "signal." When the time was right we were supposed to meet Dean Dinning (bass) in back of Chumash. Meanwhile, we spied a pushy photographer and journalist. We were wise to them when the okay to meet Dean came and they followed us down the stairwell. Sumaya and I ducked into the women's bathroom in an attempt to lose the leaches, but instead they beat us to the meeting spot. No fear, Dean was a no-show. A little birdie (Miles) told us Dean was already down at KCPR waiting for us. The two cheeseballs overheard and rolled down to the station. That was a good thing, because when they left Sumaya and I convinced Todd Nichold (guitar) to come down for the interview. He doesn't like interviews, but he did a fine job.

To make a long story shorter, Sumaya got exclusive shots [see this issue] of Dean and Todd in the station. The interview also went smoothly. Dean and Todd were great sports; success hasn't made a failure out of them (to paraphrase Sinead).

In case you're wondering, "What interview?"--it wasn't publicized to avoid drawing a crowd to the station--here are some highlight from the October 3rd interview with Dean and Todd from "Toad":

*Dean about performing that night: "We're gonna go out there and win."

*About the song on the "Buffy" soundtrack: "We thought Luke Perry deserved his own Toad song since he works so hard."

*Jay Leno gave them toad-shaped candy when they were on the "Tonight" show.

*Fear was recently released in England and they're going over to play for the industry types.
