Dear Betty,

Here I come on the last stretch again. Thanks heaps for your last newsy letter. Thanks also for enlightening me on why Wilda and Lloyd had broken up once before their happy reunion. I'm impatient for the day to arrive when I can actually see and talk with all of you again.

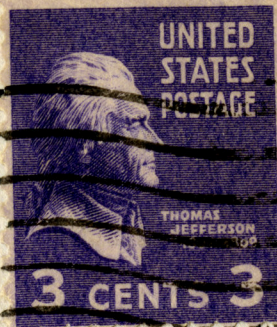

Just about two weeks more and I'll be "hitting" the trail for California! We're in the thick of finals now. My only final today will be in playground management which shouldn't be too hard since it's to be a library test (open book test). I take that back, though, because they are sometimes more difficult than the other type. Our finals will be over this Friday; then, commencement week; and after that, a wedding of one of our graduating seniors. As soon as possible, I shall then catch a train for home. My roommate has had several pictures up on the wall of California scenes (including one of the L. A. Union Station) which hasn't helped matters at all.

My girlfriend, June, who was attending U.C. L.A. has found it necessary to drop out. She's in need of a lot of rest since her nervous breakdown last summer.

A friend, who is stationed in Japan, wrote that Hides is now stationed in Tokyo under the Army Intelligence.

Despite of a big disappointment this past month, I'm keeping psychologically, spiritually, and physically up to par. With love,
Miri
