Norma S. Rees,
President

Of all the kinds of activity that University members engage in, surely the least well understood, and most poorly recognized, is service. When we think of community service, we may have the image of a one-way or one-dimensional activity: our experts give and some community group or agency receives. We may note that community service enhances our relationship with our neighbors, yet not regard it as integral to the mission of the institution. Our colleagues who spend time working in the community or with outside groups, though, know that both assumptions overlook the depth such experiences hold and their importance to the very essence of the University.

Just as surely as our buildings sit on foundations of concrete and steel, our existence as an institution of learning sits on the combination of teaching, research and service. In particular, service to the community confers many benefits on the University.

We gain in at least five ways from our community involvement: 1) we are able to test the ideas and assumptions developed from our research and study, 2) we learn new information, 3) we set a model for our students, 4) we create opportunities for student internships and employment, and 5) we help the community learn about the University even as we are learning about the community.

Let me just cite two recent and very different examples of faculty involvement in community service.

Mary Trapp, outgoing chair of the mass communications department, has been conducting workshops for the Newsletter Taskforce of the University-Oakland Metropolitan Forum at the Oakland Public Library. Her audiences have consisted of approximately two dozen individuals from nearly all areas of Oakland. In her first two sessions she covered newswriting, layout and photography. The third one will deal with organizing a newspaper and staff.

The man from the Metropolitan Forum who contacted our mass comm. department told Dr. Trapp how much he appreciated calling a place and getting some help. He had not always had such good fortune. For the layout and photography session, Peter Van Court, a student, and Bill Bergesen from the ALSS computer lab accompanied Dr. Trapp. Peter, who does photography for both the Pioneer and The View, not only enjoyed the opportunity to present information on his area of interest, but also got a good tip from someone in the class on where to find copiers that will reproduce half-tones.

Dr. Trapp found that she was highly respected as a representative of Cal State Hayward, and that her experience has taught her that the community has a high opinion of us.

In another area, Benjamin Carmichael of the criminal justice department was recently named to a four-year term on the Juvenile Justice Commission for Alameda County. He joins another faculty member, Bill Vandenburg of kinesiology and physical education, on the commission. The role of this body is to assess the public and private agencies that are responsible for carrying out services in the area of juvenile law.

Of all the kinds of activity that University members engage in, surely the least well understood, and most poorly recognized, is service.

Dr. Carmichael, chair of his department, has written articles about juvenile justice and sees his work on the commission as a way of "staying in touch." His work enhances his teaching by providing him with information and examples that are especially relevant to classroom presentations. In exchange, the legal system is strengthened by the theoretical, and historical perspective that a faculty member provides.

The University benefits in still other ways. Dr. Carmichael anticipates being able to arrange internships for criminal justice students and to be able to direct them to employment opportunities. In the past, students who were encouraged to contact various agencies about internships were not successful in getting placed. Serving on the commission and being in regular, direct contact with segments of the juvenile justice system will enable Dr. Carmichael to overcome barriers for students and to help relate the program more closely to the system. The University and the juvenile justice system will both benefit from Dr. Carmichael's "insider" status.

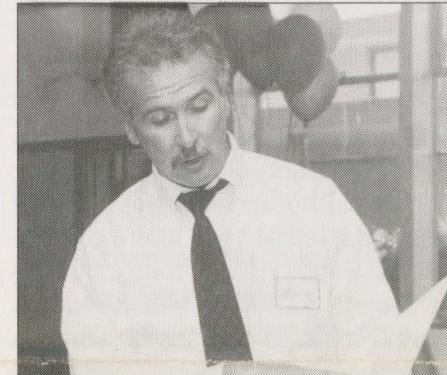

As the experiences of these two faculty members demonstrate, public service is a loop that flows and expands to the benefit of all of the parties involved. I anticipate that its role at Cal State Hayward will increase. In this issue of The View is an article on the Human Corps, a program mandated by the California Legislature to enable students to perform at least thirty hours of community service. Through this program and with the encouragement and example of our faculty and staff, I believe that we can maximize student participation in community service.

The big ten—The Contra Costa Center celebrated a decade of offering courses in Contra Costa County with an informational open house on May 23. A popular topic of conversation was the construction of the new center in Concord which is scheduled to open in fall 1992. The new center is expected to have an enrollment of 2,200 students, approximately 800 more than the current facility in Pleasant Hill serves. Mark Nickerson, left, director of Financial Affairs, is currently serving as acting director. Pictured above is Herb Graw, associate vice president, Contra Costa Center, explaining a scale model of the new center.

Human Corps aims for widespread community service by students

Cal State Hayward students will learn real life lessons through the newly established Human Corps. Recent legislation requires that the CSU and UC systems encourage all full-time students to commit at least thirty hours each year to community service. Currently about thirty percent of CSUH students volunteer for such service.

"Students will have the opportunity to apply theoretical course work to practical situations, develop their leadership abilities and in the process realize that they can have a positive effect on social problems," according to Human Corps Director Mack Lovett, assistant vice president, Instructional Services. Many of the projects will allow students to earn academic credits and participate in research projects while making a difference in their communities.

Volunteer opportunities will include research on the homeless population and a Black Male Mentoring Program. "The number of young African American males who are dropping out of the system and getting into drugs is alarming," says Lovett. "We need male mentors to act as big brothers and help turn these statistics around."

Lovett is establishing an Office of Volunteer Service Programs which will serve as clearinghouse for all volunteer activities on campus. The office will match students' interests with agencies in Oakland, Hayward and Union City.

"President Rees has made it clear that she wants Cal State Hayward to go beyond just complying with the law. We are developing programs that are truly beneficial to the University and students," says Lovett. —Ruth Carlson

Cal State Hayward undergraduate admissions close June 21

In an unprecedented action, the University will no longer accept undergraduate applications after June 21. This deadline applies to all new and reapplying undergraduates. Graduate applications for fall quarter will close on July 5. Exceptions will be made for some graduate programs.

"We're enjoying the benefits of a record number of applications at the same time we are experiencing the difficulties of unprecedented budget reductions," says Bob Trinchero, acting associate vice president of Admissions and Records. "It's causing us to limit our growth, although we still expect to grow by four-and-a-half to five percent. The variables are greater than normal in trying to project how many students will actually enroll." Fall enrollments are projected at 14,000.

The Office of Admissions and Enrollment Services has already received 7,200 applications for fall quarter, about 350 per week. At this rate Admissions expects to receive more than 8,000 new applications by June 21. By comparison, the campus had received 7,400 applications by the third week in August, 1990.

Factors contributing to increased applications include the forty percent fee increase by the University of California, the continuing recession which keeps students closer to home, and the fact that CSUH is the last Bay Area campus in the CSU still accepting applications for fall.

Faster research—President Rees had some specific publications in mind when she helped dedicate the new computerized catalog at the Library. Periodicals librarian Sharon Phillips showed her how to find publications in speech pathology and audiology on the new system. Melissa Rose, Library director and Shawn Hernandez, associate vice president, Computing Services, also had a special interest in the demonstration.

There'll be no sleeping in this HAYSTAC

HAYSTAC (HAYward STate Automated Catalog), a twenty-five terminal computerized catalog located throughout the Library, made its formal debut at a ribbon cutting ceremony on May 16.

"It's a wonderful step in making what we have more accessible," said Melissa Rose, Library director.

The new catalog is quicker and easier to use than a card catalog and will report whether a book is already checked out and when it is due. The most noticeable feature of HAYSTAC is the sophistication of searching. HAYSTAC can limit a search by language, material type, title, author or subject, publisher, and year of publication.

"We like to think of it as searching for a needle in a HAYSTAC," says Elsa Glines, head of Library Technical Services.

This summer "keyword searching" will be added and will be available for use by the fall quarter. Keyword searching also allows a user to find a book even if only one word of the title is known. Another feature of keyword searching is that it will look for books with similar spellings in case of misspellings. No longer will the screen flash "Not On File" if a user misspells a word.

This summer the system will be connected to the campus network. Students and faculty will be able to use HAYSTAC at a computer anywhere on campus or even at home if they have a modem.

Roger Siebert, a reference librarian, won a gift certificate to the Rue de Main in Hayward for submitting the name HAYSTAC in the Library's "Name the Catalog" contest. He was one of six individuals to submit the title and was selected as the finalist by having his name drawn out of a box. (He chose French food over a gift certificate to Holmes Books, the alternative prize offered)—Brenda McConaughy.

Acting library director named

President Rees has announced the appointment of Dr. Gene Poschman, political science department, as acting director of the Library. His appointment is effective September 1, 1991. The current director, Melissa Rose, is retiring in August.

Changes made in lobby hours

Effective Monday, June 17, the hours of the Admissions and Records Information Center in the WA Lobby are:

Monday - Thursday: 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. (previously A/R open to 8 p.m.)
Friday: 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.
(no change)

After hours, forms will be available on the Lobby table. Please complete the appropriate form and deposit it in the mail slot to the left of the counter. All forms will be stamped with the date that they were submitted.

Sun shines on CSUH with grant for computing facility

Sun Microsystems has announced it is awarding a grant to the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science in support of the department's Advanced Classroom Computing Facility. The funded proposal was submitted last February by Professors Istvan Simon and Chi Fai Ho.

The Advanced Classroom Computing Facility had already been awarded an NSF Grant in April 1990.

Sun's grant of nearly $33,000 will provide for a SparcStation 2 Workstation and software to be installed in the facility. The Sun equipment, together with a Macintosh workstation already purchased with departmental funds, will be connected to a color high-resolution projector and installed in a classroom in the Science Building. The equipment will be used to enhance the teaching of several Computer Science courses.

Software that will permit the presentation of graphic simulations of algorithms is being developed by Professors Simon and Ho, along with Shue-Lin Kuo, a student in the computer science master's degree program.

Pioneer leadership selected

A departmental selection committee consisting of faculty and student members in mass communications have selected the editors of the Pioneer for summer and fall quarters.

Delila L. Brooks, a senior from Oakland, was selected as the summer quarter editor. Steve Nordenstedt, a senior from San Ramon, and Lisa Thompson, a senior from Hayward, will be the co-editors for fall.

June travel claims are due by July 1

Travel claims for the month of June should be submitted immediately upon completion of the final trip for the month, but no later than July 1. Failure to comply may result in funds being reduced in the subsequent year.

Micro-computer classes for summer 1991

Computing Services Information Center has scheduled the following classes for the summer quarter. These classes are open to staff and faculty members at CSUH. For more information or to sign up for classes, please contact the Information Center at ext. 3596 or send an electronic mail message to "info."

Please note that a class may be cancelled if fewer than five people sign up for it. Also, many classes require previous experience in using computers. Please contact the Information Center for more information.

Sowers to go the distance for the Lung Association

Brian Sowers, an equipment technician in the biology department, participates each year in a bike ride to raise money for the American Lung Association. This year the course will take him 500 miles through the Trinities to the coast and back.

Sponsors who pledge five cents per mile ($25) receive a t-shirt. Sponsors who pledge ten cents per mile get a second t-shirt.

Anyone interested in sponsoring Sowers can contact him at ext. 3495 or in the biology department.

Early retirees should submit applications to PERS ASAP

Employees who are planning to participate in the 1991 Early Retirement Program are encouraged to submit their "Application for Retirement" to the Public Employees' Retirement System as soon as possible. Employees who opt to participate in this program would receive an additional two years of service credit if the retirement date falls within the window period of July 1 through September 30, 1991.

Please contact JoAnne Hill, ext. 3634 to obtain a retirement form or additional information regarding retirement.

Help plan your future with PERS seminar

Effective July 1, 1991, the Public Employees' Retirement System will be offering "Planning Your Future Now" seminars. The seminar is designed for PERS members age 45 and over and will focus on estate planning, lifestyle changes, PERS benefits and options, social security benefits and tax planning.

There is a $30 charge (no additional charge for spouse) for this two-day seminar.

For additional information, contact the San Francisco area office of PERS at (415) 557-0582 or JoAnne Hill, ext. 3634.

Jay L. Tontz (SBE) spoke to the Contra Costa Jewish Community Center, May 21, 1991 on "International Economic Trends in the 1990's and CSUH School of Business & Economics Response," and May 22, 1991 to the Fremont Rotary Club on "Report on Entrepreneurship Programs at CSUH, School of Business & Economics."

Steve F. Sapontzis (Philosophy) delivered a paper on "The Promise of Genetically Engineering Farm Animals" at the Institute on Ethics and Agricultural Biotechnology, held at Iowa State University, May 19-25.

Richard E. Bozak (Chemistry) presented a seminar on ferrocene chemistry to the staff of Dipartimento de Chimica, Universita de Romá, Rome, Italy on April 26, 1991.

Leticia Iliana Holbrook (Foreign Languages and Literatures) published an essay in The American Journal of Semiotics: "Poetry as Spatial Art: "Topoemas by Octavio Paz."

Benjamin Bowser (Department of Sociology and Social Services) has just published (Ed.) Black Male Adolescents: Parenting and Education in Community Context. Lanham, MD: University Press of America 1991.

Gary Geis (Health Services Pharmacist) was commended by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for his alertness in noticing a variation in the size of some antihistamine/decongestant tablets that were shipped to the Health Service by a generic manufacturer. Upon inspection by the FDA it was determined that the drug should be removed from the marketplace due to a thirty percent plus/minus variation in the strengths. This resulted in over 1.4 million tablets being recalled.

Colleen Fong (Ethnic Studies) served as the chair and discussant for two panels: "Gender Relationships and Asian American Women" and "The Chinese Community in America" at the Eighth Annual Meeting of the Association for Asian American Studies, held May 29-31 in Honolulu.

Julia Liang (Foundation) has been appointed controller of the CSUH Foundation effective June 10. Until most recently, Ms. Liang served as acting controller and accounting manager at San Jose State University Foundation.

Donald Warrin (Foreign Languages and Literatures) gave a paper on "Portuguese Immigrants in Early Nevada," at the "Conference on Nevada History." in Las Vegas, on May 22, 1991. The conference was sponsored by the Nevada Historical Society.

Darril Hudson's (Political Science) "Twenty years engagement for peace and conciliation. The World Council of Churches from Amsterdam (1948) to Uppsala (1968)," appeared in Kirchliche Zeitgeschichte (1/1991). He gave a lecture on American elections for the Fachhochschule für Wirtschaft in Pforzheim, (United) Germany and is co-teaching (honorarily) a course of American Foreign Policy with Professor Axel Murswieck, Institut für politische Wissenschaft, University of Heidelberg, in the spring semester.

Winfried Weiss (Foreign Languages and Literatures) published an article entitled "Ostovani's 'Jardin d'Alioff,'" an evaluation of the Iranian painter Farhad Ostovani, in FRANK (Paris), Number 13, Winter/Spring 1991.

Pauline J. Kelzer (Health Sciences Department) was appointed to the Statewide Working Group on Health Care and will participate in an all day workshop on June 21 to draft new legislation for statewide health insurance.

Janis Linfield (Financial Aid) was appointed as the CSU representative to the California Student Aid Commission's Program, Policy, and Operations Advisory Committee. She is filling out a term that expires December 31, 1991 and will be reappointed to a two-year term beginning January 1, 1992.

Elwood R. Brooks (Geological Sciences) addressed the UC Davis Department of Geology Seminar Series, June 5 on the topic "Why worry about peperite? Examples from North America and the U.K."

Douglas R. Littlefield (History) will have his article "The Rio Grande Compact of 1929: A Truce in an Interstate River War," published in the Pacific Historical Review. The article is part of a larger work in progress on the history of the Rio Grande water conflicts.

Mary Trapp (Mass Communications, ALSS) received the ceremonial key to Mt. Eden High School, June 8 in recognition of her contributions to METV, Mt. Eden High School Television. The awards ceremony was part of an international festival sponsored by College Bounders, Inc., held at Mt. Eden High.

Asoke Basu (Sociology and Social Services) has recently published an article, "Knowledge and Power: The Case of India's Ethnic Intellectuals," in New Quest (India) 86:99-104.
