Frank U. Bliss directed the Mess and Lodging Division. Outwardly he appeared somewhat aloof but he was a warm and kindly man. His most distinguishing feature was a silvery shock of curly hair and a high forehead. This division was responsible for management of all Lodging, Kitchens, Mess Halls and Meals. The Warehousing of Food and Housing supplies and equipment ~~was also under this department.~~ ~~was also under this department.~~ A health problem caused him to resign in mid August. Clifton E. Inelson served as Chief Stewart until mid August and then he assumed the leadership of the Mess and Lodging Division as a replacement for Bliss. This able man with deep set but placid blue eyes, high v-shaped hairline, thin straight lips and square jaw was a proficient successor for the demanding position.

Max Armstrong became the Chief Stewart after Inelson moved up to director of the division. He had served a number of years as instructor in the cooking and baking school at Fort Riley, Kansas and more recently as Chief Stewart at the Tulare Assembly Center until its closure.

Walter C. Pollock managed the Service Division. Prior to this he was the Central California director of the
