Dear Jane:

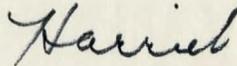

Congratulations on being one of the Democratic women nominated for public office in our Bicentennial year.

Although women have been only a trace in the body politic during the first 200 years of our history, the data on these women indicate that they are dedicated, issue oriented, and hard working. This confirms our belief that the quality of government at local, state, and national levels will be higher when the number of elected women officials is in proportion to their number in the population.

I hope the enclosed summary of campaign information and advice from elected Democratic women will be helpful to you in your campaign. A list of "How To" material available from our office is also enclosed.

I wish you success in the election this fall. If you would like to have any of the listed material, or if I can help in any way, please let me know.

Sincerely,

Harriet Cipriani
Director of Women's Activities
