

Enter sweeps Leg race

Enter, the only organized group running in the AS Legislature elections, emerged victorious yesterday, filling every open office with its candidates.

Less than eight percent of the student body voted. "Considering the lack of publicity, it wasn't too bad," Greg DeGiery, Enter campaign manager said.

The largest number of votes cast for a single candidate (760), went to Lewis Engle, Enter nominee for Representative at Large.

Bruce Hanson, the group's candidate for Business Representative won with the least votes, picking up only 46.

"Many students voted for only a single candidate," DeGiery said.

"As I see it," he said, "it certainly wasn't a victory for strong personalities. None of those elected have strong personalities.

The Enter group is composed of students who were active in "Whatever It Is," along with others drawn from the Experimental College.

David Ragnetti, newly elected Creative Arts Representative, criticized the lack of campaigning by non-Enter candidates.

"If a voter had asked me why I was better qualified than my opponent, I couldn't have told him because I never even saw the guy," he said.

Other Enter winners were;

- Representative at Large; Diane Braford
- Freshman Representative; Mark Braunstein, Judith White
- Sophomore Representative; Ksenia Tsenin
- Graduate Representative; Floyd Turner (unopposed).

Mid-Eastern mid-section

With a group of Arab students milling in the background yelling "yallah yallah," Aida the belly dancer displayed her wares before an enthusiastic crowd on the Speakers' Platform yesterday.

It was all part of Arabic Day, a program of Arabic culture sponsored by the Arab American Association.

The program began with a quintet playing Arabic music. It consisted of a tambourine, a recorder, two drums and an oud, described as a "pregnant guitar" by its player.

After five musical selections the star attraction appeared on stage.

Disappointingly fully clothed, Aida, an Arabian dancer who has appeared "all over the west coast," held the crowd of 250 in the slit of her shimmy skirt.

At one point she even dragged a somewhat dumbfounded male spectator into the act.

Although the crowd appreciated Aida's efforts one

Greek student said she wouldn't shake up the Middle East.

"Personally I enjoyed her but over there she wouldn't satisfy their tastes. They like them plump, with a little more flesh," said Dmitri Mitsanas, a graduate student in art history.

Despite a lack of the allegedly required obesity Aida, judging by the crowd's reaction, exercised the right muscles at the right time.

Campus coalition condemns Sat. 'Hate Rally'

San Franciscans will be treated to a rare experience this weekend when the American Nazi Party, the Ku Klux Klan, and members of the Hell's Angels join in a "Hate Rally" in the Civic Center.

The rally will take place in front of City Hall on Saturday at 1:30 p.m.

Announcement of the rally by its extreme right-wing sponsors drew immediate hostile reaction from "New Left" organizations at SF State.

Opponents of the "Hate Rally" include the Student Zionist Organization, W.E.B. Du Bois Club, Students for a Democratic Society, Vietnam Day Committee, Young Socialist Alliance, Progressive Labor Club, Campus Ecumenical Center, and Young Democrats.

'UNHOLY ALLIANCE'

In a joint statement, the campus groups said, "This unholy alliance can only lead to a continuation of the beatings, bombings, and political hate-mongers with their program of racism and mass murder."

"Therefore we call on all concerned students to demonstrate their opposition by picketing the . . . rally on October 22."

"Since the Chicago incidents where thousands of people acted as a swastika-waving mob, the Nazis are no longer to be regarded as a harmless, lunatic fringe group," they said.

The "Stop Fascism" demonstration will be organized at a meeting at the Speakers' Platform at noon today. Tentative plans call for the counter-pickets to assemble on the City Hall steps at 1 p.m. on Saturday.

Special late notices

CIKAXA

An advertisement appearing in the Gater this week mistakenly listed October 1 as the date for the Circle K-Alpha Chi Alpha-sponsored dance in the Commons.

The correct date is October 21—and that is tonight.

Sponsors of the dance say students attending the affair will get to meet Cikaxa—whoever or whatever it is.

UNITED NATIONS

Political Affairs Officer Noel J. Brown from the United Nations Secretariat, will speak on "Human Affairs" today at noon in Ed 117.

Brown was one of the original authors of the United Nations Proclamation on Human Rights. His address is sponsored by the College Lecture Series.

DRAFT TEST

Today is the deadline for filing applications to take the Selective Service college qualification tests Nov. 18 and 19.

Application cards and information bulletins may be obtained at any local draft board.

Tax exemption for campus groups

The AS Legislature considered action yesterday which may affect the whole area of tax exemptions for AS affiliated organizations.

The Married Student Cooperative Nursery, started by Gatorville residents, asked the Leg to allow it to affiliate with the AS in order to come under the non-profit corporate status enjoyed by the AS.

This would mean that gifts received by the Nursery could be used as a tax write-off by donors.

The Leg was leery of establishing such a precedent before guidelines were drawn up defining which organizations would be eligible to receive the tax blanket.

Most members felt that some guidelines on the spending of the funds should be established.

At present, all on-campus organizations conduct their business affairs through the AS business office under specific rules and regulations; but none can claim tax exempt status.

Action on the proposal was tabled until the next Leg meeting so that the guidelines could be developed.

The Leg also passed a resolution favoring Proposition 2, the State education bonds issue, which will appear on the ballot Nov. 8.

Funds for partial subsidy of Stateside magazine were officially withdrawn on the basis of a letter from Stateside editor Linda Taylor.

She refused to accept money from the AS and declared Stateside an independent on-campus organization.

We, too, can be 'rah-rah'...

THE LAST THING anyone would call the Gator would be "rah-rah," because we believe that there are more important and constructive things to do on a Saturday afternoon than wave pom-poms and chant inane yells.

But today, one day before the Golden Gators' first home game in FWC competition this year, we must take other recent developments into consideration.

We should, for example, congratulate the football team for its quick start, upending the favored Nevada Wolfpack last Saturday in Reno by 27-0.

The win pushes the team over the .500 won-loss mark, including the pre-season games.

We should also encourage those students who enjoy a football game now and then to make "now and then" tomorrow, to give the always-sagging attendance—as well as the Gators—a solid boost.

The attendance would also be a gesture of tolerance on the part of SF State fans. Showing up for a game played on a high school field would demonstrate our ability to operate on a realistic value system.

The game and the spirit, after all, are the most important ingredients of the weekly grid ritual—not the condition of the turf and the colorlessness of the surroundings.

And, finally, we should congratulate the Gator coaches, Vic Rowen and Allen Abraham, on their good taste in selection of the public-address announcer for the home games.

The laudatory comments from fans at the most recent Lowell Field encounter show us that, all together, SF State's football program is progressive and worthy of more attention.

In our non-rah-rah way, then, we wish the Gators a most successful campaign.

Prop. 2 may add $11 million to campus

Proposition 2, a $230 million bond issue on the November ballot, if passed, will provide SF State $11 million in additional funds.

The proposition is designed to enable thousands more students to enroll in the State Colleges, according to Victor H. Palmieri, California State College Trustee in charge of construction and site acquisition.

Palmieri said if the bond is not passed there is a chance that the State Colleges will also lose a large amount of federal aid because they will not be able to foot their half of the bill.

Homecoming farce

Editor:

The so-called "tradition" of homecoming on the campus of SFSC is a farce. It is a farce because it's based on the high-school notion of cheering for the football team and "rah-rahing" to express one's school spirits. Every year during "homecoming" a female is selected as a representative student of this campus.

It is my contention that as long as this high school ideal exists, no woman selected will typify the State College student. For the students on this campus do not relate to the football field... they relate to the world and their expansion of self-awareness.

Perhaps this is why organizations like SNCC, the Tutorial Program, the Viet Nam Day Committee and other activist groups scoff at and refuse to enter members of their organizations into this supposedly "all-campus" selection. Two years ago SNCC did enter a woman who typified the pervading attitude of this campus. The spirit of involvement — of doing something for her fellow man and wanting to do something for the betterment of the world she lives in. She caused a turmoil within the football structure because she came damn close to winning and upsetting that establishment.

Let's have a real choice this year; let's have a cross-section of this campus from these organizations!

Psychedelic mix-up

Editor

Regarding the article appearing in the Gator on Thursday, October 13, 1966, "Sack Lunch insights; LSD to parapsychology," I would like to make a few important corrections.

First of all our Guest speaker on Monday, October 10, 1966 was incorrectly identified as Dr. Theodore Keller of the International Relations Department, instead of Dr. William Littell of the Psychology Department. Dr. Keller came on Wednesday when Viet Nam was the topic under discussion.

Not only did the reporter mix up the guests, he also misquoted the content of the discussion. For example:

1. "The fact that a person is going nowhere implies that he is going somewhere" ... a remark of a student ... during a "Sack Lunch with the Faculty" ...

2. ... Student ... a boy LSD: "I have never taken LSD and never will. But I would like to know what it does." (This question was answered by another student.)

3. Student: "Today's bohemians are much younger than those I knew ten years ago." (There was NO statement about drugs implied by this student.)

Foundation heads review OSE contract proposal

The union contract of the Organization of Student Employees will be reviewed by the SF State Foundation's Board of Governors tomorrow morning, Tom Mazzolini, co-chairman of the OSE said. The contract, approved in its proposed form by the OSE electorate last week, will be the subject of bargaining efforts between the Union and the Foundation.

"Avilez said that the contract would probably be referred to committee on Friday and negotiations would begin shortly after that," said Mazzolini.

The Foundation will meet in room G-1 of the library 8 a.m. Friday.

"Other actions of the OSE this week have been hampered by a poor turnout of members, said Mazzolini. "Election of union officers was attempted twice this week but on neither occasion was a quorum (30 members) present."

OSE elected shop stewards, elected three weeks ago, are Jeff Reznik, Judith Frisch, Dorn Campbell, and Tom Lederer. The next OSE meeting is scheduled for Friday, October 29.

Peace Corps here Monday

Led by two SF State graduates, the Peace Corps will begin recruiting here on Monday.

Jon Deason and Karen Linberg are among the five recruiters.

The Peace Corps will operate two booths, one in front of the Library and one in front of the Commons.

The only requirement is a half hour language aptitude test, Miss Linberg said.

"It's not a pass or fail test. It merely assists in placement," she said.

Students who apply now will know the results by Christmas but they must arrange to have their transcript sent to Washington DC, she said.

Students who take their tests now will begin their training in 1967. The training period lasts three months while the service lasts two years.

Films will be shown on

Peace Corps operations in Kenya at noon daily in AV-1.

A 'free spirit' revisited

By PAM BERG

In times of chaos and destruction composer Cole Porter saw the world with an impudent, highly sophisticated and indomitably euphoric gaze.

In keeping with this vision Ben Bagley has assembled a package of Porter's lesser known hits, called it "The Decline and Fall of the Entire World as Seen Through the Eyes of Cole Porter," and allowed the 33 included works to speak for themselves.

The result is what Bagley hoped for, a tribute to the composer and a historical comment on the chaotic years which stretched between the two world wars.

In the September issue of "Playbill," Bagley wrote, "To be an individual is all... freedom is everything... and one of the world's freest spirits, Cole Porter, has come of age."

By this he means the image of life concocted in Porter's mind constituted subjects of taboo a few years ago, while audiences today can recognize the significance of that image as an a living actual.

From eroticism to politics, Porter's view is impudent and sophisticated and there are qualities captured in the current production of the Cole Porter show at the Little Fox Theatre.

Jumping between film clips, songs, and dance numbers a talented cast of five has managed to turn a long list of musical works into a sparkling, fast paced cavalcade of humor, satire, even pathos.

The show has already run for six successful months and the producer, Stan Berney, just announced that special performances at 10:30 Friday evening and 7:30 Sunday evening have been arranged for the benefit of minors, who, until now, could not be admitted because of a bar in the theatre's lobby.

SF State hosts prexy conference

SF State is the host college for the fall semester meeting of the California State College Student Presidents Association beginning today at noon.

The theme for the three day CSCSPA meeting is "Student Initiated Academic Reform," and workshops on the theme and other topics suggested by member schools will be conducted.

All workshops and general sessions will be on campus with the expected 45 delegates centering their activities in the Gallery Lounge.

AS President Jim Nixon is also the president of the 18 school Presidents Association and will keynote the conference. Les Cohen, the State College lobbyist in Sacramento will speak at Saturday lunch. SF State President John Summerskill and several of his administrators will attend some of the sessions. Two representatives of the State College Chancellor's office have also been invited.

The conference will forego the traditional "resolution" format and depend on "suggestions for action" with several alternatives included with each "suggestion."

Workshop topics include: Models of student initiated educational institutions, free universities, Experimental College etc.; general education revision; Student representation on Academic Senate Committees; and Student-teacher relationships (pass-fail grading, special study courses, etc.).

Also: Possible statewide coordination of tutorial and community involvement programs; Proposition two; Student representation on the statewide Academic Senate (which has requested it); the Collier Bill on State College tuition; Married students housing; Activities programs; and the CSCSPA newsletter.

RFK talk at Berkeley

Senator Robert F. Kennedy will address SF State and Cal students Sunday October 23 at 3:30 p.m. in the Greek Theater in Berkeley.

Last semester a group of students circulated a petition to invite the senator from New York to speak on this campus but the plan was never realized.

Kennedy was invited to Berkeley by the Cal Inter-Fraternity Council which is also planning to have other well-known public figures such as Stokeley Carmichael and Martin Luther King.

The invitation to SF State students was made by a spokesman of the Council.

Although the Greek Theater seats about 15,000, arrangements have been made to broadcast the speech outside the theater.

Queen contest rule discussion set for today

Homecoming queen candidates and their sponsors will meet with the Homecoming Committee today in Gym 215 at 1 p.m.

"The committee will discuss the various aspects of Homecoming," Sue Bolger, Queen's Committee Chairman said. "The candidates will learn what will be expected of them."

Committee members will also discuss the schedule, rules and activities of Homecoming.

Further information is available from Sue Bolger at SE 1-6525.

Project tenants organizing

(This is the last of 3 articles on the Hunters Point riot.)

By PATRICK SULLIVAN
Managing Editor

Some 1500 residents of San Francisco housing projects recently banded together in a grass roots movement to fight alleged injustices in the administration of the city's public housing.

Known as the San Francisco Tenant Issues Council (STIC), the new group has representatives from 11 tenant unions in seven of the city's 25 housing developments and is still growing.

At the first meeting in August, STIC members set three main goals for the organization:

- to get direct action and effective representation on the Housing Authority Commission;
- to press for city-wide attention to the issues of the poor and public housing;
- to aid in the development and organization of new tenant unions.

Each tenant union has a number of committees—welfare rights, social activities, youth, and strategy—made up of block captains and representatives of unit buildings.

AREAS

As of now the membership of STIC is drawn from three tenant unions in the Sunnyvale project, two each from the Western Addition and Chinatown projects, and one each from Potrero Hill, North Beach, Valencia Gardens, and Alice Griffith projects.

Chairman of the Alice Griffith union, near Candlestick Park, and temporary chairman of STIC is Rayford Riley, a 39-year-old former nightclub singer from Chicago who now works at the War on Poverty office in the Hunters Point-Bayview district.

Riley's picture of life in a public housing project is a far cry from what private renters experience.

"When a man in a project gets a raise, his rent goes up,"

STIC's greatest concern right now is housing, Riley said, but the organization could eventually move into work on problems of education and unemployment.

Those, and the myriad other problems of Negroes in a ghetto are what STIC is working to bring to the attention of the city.

A lack of attention, Riley said, was one of the prime reasons for the riot three weeks ago.

"Youths in the area didn't really want to do what they finally did," Riley said, "but they had to for the attention—the attention they had been begging for."

Riley said. "If there is a teenager in the family who has a job, the rent goes up also.

"If you get a month behind in the rent, you have to pay two months rent the next month — plus $15 in 'court fees,'" he said.

The court fees are for filing a complaint in Municipal Court, a Housing Authority spokesman said.

Riley said some people in the projects are as much as five months behind in rent because of the regulation.

"People are having problems staying in the projects that they shouldn't have," he said. "It's just about impossible for a person to move out because when he gets a raise and wants to save money, the rent goes up."

Riley said the rent also goes up when someone comes to stay for a while with a project family.

"The rent should stay at the same amount for a resident as at the time when he moves in," Riley said.

Riley said STIC hasn't yet decided just how to fight the injustices. He didn't rule out the possibility of a rent strike, but said if there was one "it would have to have the support of every housing project in the city."

FIRST STEP

As a first step in alleviating the situation in the housing developments, STIC has made a demand to the Housing Authority for majority representation on the commission.

The spectacular Gator football upset, 27-0, over the Nevada Wolf Pack last Saturday afternoon was everything the word "upset" implies.

It is entirely possible that the best team didn't win — even probable, if the oddsmakers are to be believed.

Talent-wise, the current SF State club is not on a par with last year's Gator FWC champions, when the likes of Jim Crum, Tom Piggee, Denny Dow, and Don McPhail ripped the conference apart.

But this team has something perhaps even more valuable than talent. It's the intangible ingredient, the unknown quantity, the elusive quality that defies description. Perhaps it's unity, or maybe spirit, or desire, though these things are better felt than defined.

But whatever it is, I could sense it in Nevada last weekend.

Traveling to Reno by bus with the team, I could feel the change in mood as the hours to kickoff dwindled.

On the way up Friday afternoon the players were relaxed. Tackles Bill Mathson and Don Lanphear, end Joe Koontz, and back Dan Lucas played bridge.

Defensive tackle Terry Oakes, no bridge player, jokingly tried to start a game of "war."

Within a few minutes "war" was a reality as several players joined him amid shouts— in mock seriousness— of "deal from the top of the deck" and "don't peek at your cards."

Other players tried to sleep or study, but the booming voice of 260 lb. Lyle Baucom shouting "Gold Rush!" in preparation for a possible guest appearance on radio station KFRC, prohibited such endeavors.

Football players enjoy razzing each other and they did plenty of it on the way up. Baucom is recognized by his teammates as the prime needler. He keeps them loose and laughing.

After a short practice session in Reno late Friday afternoon, all thoughts began turning to football.

"I knew on Friday night that we were going to win," second club defensive end Tony Volk said. "There's a feeling—an electricity—that passes through the whole team before certain games, and when we have that feeling, nobody's going to beat us.

"The only other time this year that we felt this electricity was in our first game against San Luis Obispo."

The Gators won that game 38-0.

At the pre-game meal Saturday morning, which consisted of steak, potatoes, and string beans at 9:30 a.m., things became even more intense. Chalk talks were held in the dining room, strategy discussed, opponents analyzed.

The bus ride to Nevada's Mackay Stadium was in complete contrast to Friday's carefree trip. Nobody said much. The laughing and joking had subsided. The cards were gone. Lyle Baucom was silent.

In the pre-game locker room the players stared at the ceiling, or looked straight ahead from their cubicles. It was all football now. Think football, breathe it, digest it.

And the electricity — the intangible something that makes good football teams better ones—was there. The feeling that victory was going to come pervaded the room.

Head coach Vic Rowen's pre-game talk ignited the spark. The Gators came out of the locker room ready to live football. That they did, 27-0, does not tell the whole story.

It does not tell that the entire Gator squad stood for all 60 minutes rooting for the 11 men on the field and shouting like they've never done before.

It does not say that QB Dick Schultze, with no chance of playing because of injury, worked out his own game plan anyway, and helped call plays for the Gator offense.

It does not tell that defensive coach Allen Abraham was ready to fight the whole Wolf Pack team when his tackle, Terry Oakes, was roughed up by several Nevada players.

It does not tell that Whitney Dotson, Lyle Baucom, and Rudy Lopera played with severe injuries.

Nor does it express the emotion that was crammed into every member of this Gator squad.

Maybe what best illustrates that emotion was the reaction of Abraham at game's end. Players were pouring Coke over his head while laughing, screaming, whooping. And there amid all that jubilation was Abraham—crying.

That intangible ingredient is hard to define, but its presence last week in Nevada cannot be denied.

I mean, the better team didn't win.

Gridders face 'Cats

The high-flying SF State football team will have to come out of the clouds tomorrow when it plays the Chico State Wildcats at Lowell High field.

The Wildcats have been buried in the FWC cellar for so long they have to look up to watch the grass grow.

But the Gator brass fears a letdown following last week's stunning upset win over Nevada, 27-0, which established SF State as the team to beat in the FWC.

"Our kids have reached a certain peak," head coach Vic Rowen said, "and now the coaching staff has to keep them there."

The Gators, 1-0 in conference play, plan no offensive changes, which means Randy Ketlinski starts at quarterback, with Whitney Dotson and Joe Currie as his running mates.

On defense, Lyle Baucom, who played the best game of his college career in the Nevada contest, has developed water on the knee and may be replaced at middleguard by Dave Kiyoi.

Chico, 0-2 in league action, has lost 18 straight FWC games.

Last season SF State walloped the Wildcats 63-20.

Tomorrow's game starts at 1:30 p.m.
