London Semester: For the experience of a lifetime, contact the School of Arts and Humanities, 278-3056.

The Office of International Programs is responsible for leadership and coordination of international programs at California State University, Fresno. The office is designed to assist faculty and administrators in developing and strengthening international education efforts. An advisory board works with the director to assist in this task. A resource center, maintained in the Office of International Programs, provides international education materials for faculty, staff, and students, while a newsletter, Horizons International, facilitates communication.

In its determination to enhance global understanding, CSU Fresno encourages international academic exchange and cooperation. Students and professors are assisted in participating in programs that facilitate academic enrichment abroad. Several "semester abroad" programs, exchanges with sister universities, and a variety of projects conducted jointly with international universities allow students and professors at CSU
