Despite a complete news blackout, the latest Garter machinations were uncovered Friday afternoon by a vigilant Gater photographer.

While snooping around the padlocked Garter offices in the basement of the Gym, Gater photographer Ed Bascomb was approached by the young lady. (See picture above.)

Apparently, she's editor Dave Felton's new secret super saleswoman and was practicing her technique on anyone who strayed past the Garter office where Felton has kept her.

SNCC struggles to 'make democracy safe for world'

The chairman of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee told an SF State audience that while the US was struggling to keep the world safe for democracy, "we will fight to make democracy safe for the world."

Speaking from the Speaker's Platform, Thursday, Charles McDew said that his group is trying to:

- Give form and direction to the frustrations of the American Negro.

- Establish serious communication between Negro and white students in the South.

- Register Negro voters in the South and get some of them to run for public office.

A Negro voice in politics is important, McDew said, because "southerners head every major committee in the Senate and the House."

The biggest problem in getting Negro voters registered, he pointed out, is the fear of violence which invariably follows. Another problem is the attitude which many Negroes have that "politics is white folks' business."

The SNCC employs 46 full-time field secretaries, mostly students who are taking time out from their studies to aid its causes. They are both Negroes and whites, and they receive minimal salaries. In the past four months, McDew stated, five of them have been shot while trying to aid registrations.

McDew admitted that his group is dissatisfied with the slow pace of the government in the fight against discrimination in voting. "A government that is rich enough . . . and big enough . . . should be able to move faster in these matters," he said.

McDew told of a meeting he had with Attorney General "Bobbie" Kennedy. Kennedy told him, he said, that very often it was hard to prove that the attacks against Negroes in the South were due to the registration attempts. McDew related the interview in an imitation of the attorney general's voice.

Telling of a meeting in New York with members of the United Nations, McDew said that Negro Ralph Bunche, undersecretary to the secretariat, without portfolio, was not really aware of the work done by the SNCC.

On the other hand, members of the African and Russian delegations were quite cognizant of the group, he said.

Reporter tells his story

By BRIAN FARLEY

William Worthy Jr., Negro reporter for the Baltimore Afro-American, was sentenced September 17, 1962 for entering the United States without a valid passport after returning from Cuba.

He will speak here tomorrow on "A Free Press and the Cold War" under the sponsorship of the College Lecture Series and the journalism department. The lecture will be held at 1:15 p.m. in the Main Auditorium.

The 41 year old reporter, recipient of a Neiman Fellowship in 1956, was relaxed and calm at his press conference Thursday in the Sheraton-Palace Hotel. He is presently on a country-wide speaking tour to stir up interest in his case.

Worthy's troubles with the State Department began in 1955 when he overstayed a visit to Russia, in 1957 his passport was revoked after an unauthorized trip to Communist China and his present dilemma resulted from a passportless trip to Cuba to report the development of the revolution there.

His first remarks struck out at the government's foreign policy as an example of "an unrealistic attitude toward world-wide colonial revolutions."

To the question of whether the revolution in Cuba had been "good" he answered: "there is no question — that the people are better off." He related, in regard to the executions of the new government, that they had almost become a tradition during the Batista regime, with some 20,000 people being murdered and tortured under his dictatorship.

He told of meeting Fidel Castro twice, during four visits to Cuba and described him as very different from his US image. "He is a hard working man — not a raving maniac. He has a constitution of iron and is a natural-born politician. Wherever he goes he is literally mobbed by thousands of people."

A greater percentage of people are now unhappy with the new government, according to him. "Support has gone down to about two-thirds of the people. This loss of support is part of the pattern of revolution. It happens when they start stepping on the toes of the upper class."

He believes his case is an example of an attempt by the administration to place stronger restrictions on the coverage of news. He sees the McCarran Immigration Act of 1952 as "unconstitutional" and states that he has "quite a bit of support" behind him.

Poetry reading today

Dr. Hoosag Gregory will read "Duino Elegies" from the poetry of Rainier Maria Rilke, today at noon in the Gallery Lounge.

Worthy was asked if his being a Negro had any connection with his case.

"No, I don't think this is the main problem. It is a matter of freedom of the press and speech. I was convicted for a technical violation — of the act which had never been invoked before."

Christmas gifts

Christmas cheer can take the wrap for any presents put under this tree at the Gallery Lounge. Any student or faculty member who would like to give a gift to someone should leave the gift, labeled with the person's name under the tree by Tuesday.

ve's trial portrayed by Players

The SF State Player's Club will present "Cain's Mother," original play written by a State student, Liz Calkins. The play will be staged tomorrow and Thursday, December 13 and 14 at 1 p.m. in CA 104.

Basically a morality play, "Cain's Mother" takes place in a courtroom and is concerned with the trial of Eve, proving or disproving her guilt in bringing sin and death into the world by eating the tempting apple.

During the play two women appear as Eve Pagan, and Eve Righteous, each stating her case.

Joe Whipp will play the role of Don Zelle, the clerk, and Ed Kohlman portrays Eve Righteous. Connie Campbell is Eve Pagan, and Diane Himes is Eve Righteous.

trip still open

Time openings are still available for a five-day camping excursion in Death Valley during Christmas vacation. Interested students should see the group leader, Dr. York Mandra, associate professor of geology, in S 104 by Tuesday.

The one-unit course will cost $10, plus $17 for food and transportation. Students must provide their own transportation, either singly or through a carpool. The group will leave December 15 and return December 21.

Student majority needed

DURING THE DISCUSSION at last week's meeting of AS President Jay Folberg's proposal that two more students be added to the Board of Governors of the SF State College Foundation, several points were voiced against the plan.

One of these was that Chancellor of the State Colleges Glenn S. Dumke is currently studying foundations on the state college campuses. We don't see how this affects the proposal. If any changes were to be made as a result of the survey, they could be made just as easily with a larger board. If not, why wait?

PRESIDENT DODD'S OBJECTION that he has no control of the Foundation, yet has the responsibility for all matters concerning the campus, is valid from a limited viewpoint. But this is the situation now and was when Dumke was president of SF State.

The Board of Governors is composed of three administrators: Dr. Dodd, Executive Dean Harry Brakebill, and Dean of Students Ferd Reddell. Two members come from the faculty, and there are four students.

WITH THIS MEMBERSHIP, the administration does not have control. President Dodd's conflict exists whether there is a change or not.

We do not see the basis for Dodd's feeling that a situation where the board failed the school would be more likely to arise with a student majority on the board. We hope it can be charged to his newness on campus, not the thought that students don't have the best interests of the college in mind.

SINCE THE STUDENTS are the biggest patrons of the Foundation, we doubt that they want to see it ruined by irresponsible action, or for that matter, irresponsible inaction, such as Dean Brakebill suggested when he brought up student attendance on the board in past years.

Should the proposal be passed, and sometime in the future, students do not fulfill their responsibilities on the Board, the matter could be handled at that time.

IT WOULD BE THE duty of the Gater to inform the campus of any negligence. It would be the duty of the AS President, who sits on the board himself, to select responsible members. And it would be the duty of the whole board to reprimand any of its individual members for failure.

The Foundation is not a private affair; it is the concern of the entire campus. Its policies should be decided by those whom it affects the most.

"The program says it's the festival of Bacchus -- that's a strange theme for college students to select for half-time ceremonies...!"

Orientation-Registration Board members honored

Five Orientation - Registration Board members were presented certificates for outstanding service to the Board at the Board's annual banquet held Saturday at the Place Pigalle.

Past and present Board members Sandy Gervoldstad, Steve Gillis, Curt Mengotto, Vince Mueller and former Board Director Jack Kendall received the certificates. In addition, Kendall also received a gavel from Board Director Dan Long.

Letters to the Editor

Out-of-state tuition

Editor:

In theory I agree with the Gater's and Allan Sutherland's view that California students should not subsidize out-of-state students for several reasons.

As a California student with many out-of-state friends now at State, I know that 1) there is a considerable difference of $564 per school year between the $436 ($218 per semester) which they assure me they paid this fall, and the $1000 per school year which was approved in Long Beach, and 2) for students who are already here and came here with the idea of the lower figure, this difference could have serious consequences.

In short, this ruling does not seem fair to those out-of-state students presently attending a state college. Wouldn't it be only fair to make the new fee applicable only to students applying from 1963 on? In this manner we would be fair to all involved and not really lower the income a great deal.

Donna Mickleson
SB 2294

(Student Mickleson is laboring under the misapprehension, possibly due to the Gater's editorial of November 15, that the proposed out-of-state tuition hike will result in a fee of $500 per semester.)

(Orrin DeLand, SF State business manager, told Gater that the new fee for out-of-state students would probably be $606 per year. This increase results from raising of the cost per unit to $17 (formerly $12) for a maximum of 15 units, retaining the $38 charge for materials and services (which students pay), and the $100 student body fee.)

(Out-of-state students will be glad to note that the difference in fees paid will be only $150 per year, not the $280 figure first reported to the editor.)

A-V center stocks 1,000 films

Who brought the popcorn? This might be the reaction of a student upon entering a classroom and seeing a movie projector loaded with film. He might consider catching up on some lost sleep.

Little thought is probably given to how the film got there or what good it does him.

With close to 1,000 films in center, located beneath the library, the Audio-Visual center, located beneath the library, attempts to supplement the instructional program "by offering the faculty breadth and depth of resources appropriate to their needs," said Dr. Robert Weisgerber, coordinator of the A-V center.

The films are bought from independent agencies for usually around $100 to $200, but may cost upwards of $1000. The center has not purchased any of this amount yet.

Encyclopedia Britannica Films has loaned the center 10,000 worth of films on the elementary level for student teachers. The loan was made indefinitely.

In addition to the films, the A-V center offers tapes, film strips, slides, closed circuit TV, and other new media.

Presently related to minor audio - visual facilities, the new media may soon include automated instruction.

Dr. Weisgerber calls this "self - instruction by definition." The student reacts to a program created by the instructor who presents instructional information with some sort of accessory equipment," he said.

Automated instructional devices range from simple teaching machines to computers capable of conducting an entire class.

Although automated instruction does not at this time have a strong foothold on campus, Dr. Weisgerber strongly believes in its possibilities.

"Every division and department has particular instructional requirements that lend themselves very well to specific applications of newer instructional media.

"The challenge open to them (divisions) is being flexible to new approaches and applications of technology to the learning process.

"Programmed learning (automated instruction) lends itself to those things of step-by-step development of facts and principles," he continued. (Math and algebra are examples.)

"It does not pretend to replace the teacher or activities creative in nature."

Dr. Weisgerber stated that programmed learning enlarges instructional resources by providing a variety of techniques. Areas which lend themselves well to this type of instruction may accelerate learning.

In addition to supplementing the instructional programs, the A-V center provides other services to the academic community.

The center provides part-time employment for approximately 30 students who are trained at the center to show the on-campus films.

It provides a public address system for student activities such as dances and rallies.

Servicing of the intercoms and audio-visual equipment in the dorms.

Campus surveyed for views on proposed union building

The College Union Council had an open meeting in the Gallery Lounge Wednesday to acquaint students and faculty with the operations of the union.

In an opening statement, AS President Jay Folberg stated that the meeting was "an initial start to find out what the students want" in the proposed college union.

Joe Persico, college union council member; Ron Rau, activities manager; Assistant Dean of Students Joe Verucci, and Associate Dean of Students Edmond Hallberg explained what a college union would mean to SF State.

"We are only dealing in ideas," stated Persico, "the facilities will be decided by the students."

Dean Hallberg told the group that the campus will be surveyed tomorrow and Wednesday to find out exactly what the students want in the union building.

On finances, Hallberg said that figures were still vague. "We want to start with a program. When we have a list of facilities needed to carry out the program, the cost will be figured," he said.

Rau emphasized the need for expanded facilities for activities. Speaking of the Main Auditorium, the Little Theatre and the Gymnasium, he added that "facilities must now be booked six months to a year in advance."

If plans proceed according to schedule, the College Union proposal will be put to a vote of the Associated Students in May.

Gators improve, but lose heartbreaker at San Jose

By DICK KRECK

When SF State lost its game to San Jose State, 52-43 in overtime, it may have marked the birth of the Gators as a well-functioning team.

For in defeat, the Gators had the Spartans beat at their own game — defense — until the overtime period.

Gone were the bad passes, the numerous infractions and the lack of coordination in running patterns.

The Gators led by as much as five over the surprised

Spartans shortly after the second half began.

Guard Dave Roberts, getting his first start of the season, was spectacular. He scored only seven points, but his ball handling and work on defense were outstanding.

It was a slow, defensive game, the kind the Spartans love to play, and the Gators led 22-18 at the half, paced by Mike Carson's 10 point showing and the Gators' ability to stymie the San Jose patterns.

The Gators played so well, and had the game so much in command that San Jose did not lead until 6:41 left to play.

With three minutes left, the Gators led 40-39, but a free throw by Bill Yonge tied it at 40 with 1:43 showing on the clock.

The Gators lost the ball on the ensuing play, but a bad San Jose pass brought it right back.

Trying to get the last shot of the game, SF State called time out with 10 seconds remaining in order to set up a play for one shot.

The "honor" for the final attempt went to Brad Dugan, the night's high scorer with 14 points, but he received a bad pass and was forced to take a shot that was less than "clean." The ball hit the rim but failed to fall through the hoop.

In the overtime, the Spartans ran over the fatigued Gators, scoring 10 consecutive points, much to the delight of 2,000 fans packed into the gymnasium.

The loss meant SF State will head for its Midwestern series of games with an 0-3 record, but a good deal more confidence now that it knows the potential for an outstanding team is there.

The Gators will leave for Chicago Wednesday afternoon and play at Valparaiso on Thursday.

The tour will also include games against Western Michigan, Murray (Ky.) State and the Eastern Montana tournament. Roberts suffered a muscle cramp in his left leg in the closing minutes against the Spartans, but coach Paul Rundell said he thinks it will be all right in a couple of days.

More serious is the injury to center Tom Cleary who has a stone bruise on his foot. Rundell said he doesn't know yet how long Cleary will be out.

Practice makes perfect, keeps Michele on ice

By PETER EDWARDS

LAST WEEK an 18-year-old freshman here won, for the fourth time, the Central Pacific Ladies Ice Skating Title. She is Michele Monnier, an attractive brunette majoring in languages.

IN REACHING the Pacific pinnacle, as it were, Michele proved that hard work pays off. Her training schedule would make most Gator footballers feel slothful.

FOR THE PAST EIGHT YEARS she has been getting up at 5:30 in the morning four days a week to drive to Sutro rink, where she puts in two hours before breakfast. With afternoon practice, which she does when even the footballers are up and running, she skates three to four hours every day.

Why did Michele start skating?

"Well, my father was an instructor at Colorado Springs, I just began skating when I was three," Michele explained. "Later on I started to compete, but my parents had no special plans for me."

Freshman Michele Monnier demonstrates a "stag jump" and manages to look pretty lively despite a spartan training schedule that gets her up at 5:30 a.m. four days a week.

SINCE SHE BEGAN COMPETING Michele has worked her way up through seven classes, starting with the juvenile girls title in 1956. Now, as the local senior ladies champion, she will enter the Pacific Coast competition in January. That title, too, has been Michele's for the past two years.

THE NEXT STEP is the national junior championship where she must place in the first three to qualify for a shot at the senior title. Michele admits that last year she "didn't do well enough in the juniors."

THE OUTLOOK for the future is uncertain. "There are many things to look out for it's impossible to tell how you do," she said. "Nobody skates at the same level every day, you just hope for the breaks."

MICHELE'S TEACHER today is Berkeley's ex-US champion, Gene Turner. Under him she practices, and must keep up, 36 figures which she might have to perform in competition.

HER PARENTS describe her as "a dedicated girl who has known what she wanted to do since she was ten." Besides skating, Michele water skis, snow skis, swims, and takes ballet lessons — quite a schedule for a girl who was "almost straight A" at high school.
