

CHECK RUMORS

Would you aid in lowering the morale of the Center residents?
Then Dont Spread Rumors.

Rumors are usually the fruit of some misguided persons attempt to gain attention and can cause much needless worry. Especially is it morally damaging in a community such as this where the uncertainty of the future is an easy breeding place for rumors.

You can kill rumors by asking the following three questions.

Can you prove it? - Did you see it? - Can you name the source of your information?

In order to fit ourselves usefully into this new life, we must have the confidence and the trust that the present conditions are for our security and welfare. Rumors can disrupt and hinder this confidence.

Remember that we are a closely knit community of people brought abruptly together through unavoidable circumstances, and our mutual welfare is in our hands. Let us strive toward harmony by checking rumors and accepting only that which has been authoritatively confirmed. - - Carl Kurihara
