

Science Symposium Scheduled for April 28

Camarillo, Calif., April 18, 2006 - California State University Channel Islands will present a science symposium, "Invaders of the Human Body," Friday, April 28, from 12:30 - 5:30 p.m.

The event, which will focus on HIV/AIDS, the avian influenza, and other infectious diseases, will feature Laurie Zoloth, Ph.D., Center for Genetic Medicine, Northwestern University; Anthony James, Ph.D., University of California, Irvine; Lauren Pecorino, Ph.D., University of Greenwich, United Kingdom; Edith Porter, M.D., California State University, Los Angeles; Dianne Langford, Ph.D., University of California, San Diego; James Ito, M.D., City of Hope Medical Center; and Tom Scott, Ph.D., University of California, Berkeley.

The CSUCI symposium is free and open to the public. Parking is $6 for each day. Permits must be purchased from permit dispensers. Follow events sign to Aliso Hall Auditorium.

For more information, visit <http://biology.csuci.edu/poe2>. To RSVP by April 25, call (805)437-2779 or e-mail jessica.dalton@csuci.edu.