Dearest Patricia:

Your Mom told me via the phone that you "sounded terrible" this morning, so I repeat, "Please let me do for you anything that I can. You have been so good to me during my life size that the ~~the~~ most I can do for you will not be enough."

Other things being equal, I'll be going up to the Palo Alto area this evening to have dinner with Mabel Buss & Max Crittenden & to discuss any remaining changes that need to be done or made in "Mabel's book on 'Western Wild Flowers'" - but if I can be of service to you, I'll cancel the whole thing & stay here - even if you'd just like me to be on call. Mabel is agreed to such a cancellation. After all, I can see her later. You are too important to me for me to fail you in any capacity. Please take me seriously in this and phone me when you read this note. I admire you for wanting to keep up in your classes and I want to do anything I can to help you do so but you should be spared every possible extra exertion. I'll take you to the clinic, the library, get you medicine, or anything you say - just let me know. I'll bring you dinner - or even gladly skip our dinner this week, even though that is the highlight of my week, if it will make things easier for you.

Anyway, give me a ring and I'll plan accordingly.

With all my love -

My rose is beautiful! Carl
