Core Student Affirmative Action-Retention

The retention component of Student Affirmative Action is designed to assist first-time entering freshmen and transfer students who are from non-traditional backgrounds. The program serves as a referral center for students who are in need of or request assistance in upgrading academic skills, want to become familiar with campus services, or who need help in adjustment to university life. The retention staff consists of professionals and peer counselors who are student interns and work in close cooperation with instructional faculty and student affairs professionals.
