Dear Mr. Hearst:

I am sorry the Indian rugs were misused at Jolon.

Arrangement was carefully made to have the three chests containing largely modern rugs unpacked and the rugs cleaned and put back until I could get back to Jolon.

In honor of your trip over, I suppose the temptation was too great not to put them down. Will see only suitable ones are used.

This kind of well-intentioned mistakes is chief reason of my constant shuttle.

As always,

Dear Miss Morgan, It is not safe to let people handle rugs and blankets who know absolutely nothing about them.

Mr. Taylor was paralyzed when I told her the fine ones cost so much.
And of course the fine ones are not as showing as the modern ones so she put them on the floor.
