QUALIFICATIONS OF A NAVAL OFFICER

By John Paul Jones

Extracts from a letter he addressed to the Marine Committee of Congress, as reconstructed by A.C. Buell.

IT IS BY NO MEANS ENOUGH that an officer of the Navy should be a capable mariner. He must be that, of course, but also a great deal more. He should be as well a gentleman of liberal education, refined manners, punctilious courtesty, and the nicest sense of personal honor.

He should not only be able to express himself clearly and with force in his own language both with tongue and pen, but he should also be versed in French and Spanish...

The naval officer should be familiar with the principles of international law, and the general practice of admiralty jurisprudence, because such knowledge may often, when cruising at a distance from home, be necessary to protect his flag from insult or his crew from imposition or injury in foreign ports.

He should also be conversant with the usages of diplomacy and capable of maintaining, if called upon, a dignified and judicious diplomatic correspondence; because it often happens that sudden emergencies in foreign waters make him the diplomatic as well as military representative of his country, and in such cases he may have to act without opportunity of consulting his civic or ministerial superiors at home, and such action may easily involve the portentous issue of peace or war between great powers. These are general qualifications, and the nearer the officer approaches the full possession of them the more likely he will be to serve his country well and win fame and honors for himself.

Coming now to view the naval officer aboard ship and in relation to those under his command, he should be the soul of tact, patience, justice, firmness, and charity. No meritorious act of a subordinate should escape his attention or be left to pass without its reward, if even the reward be only one word of approval. Conversely, he should not be blind to a single fault in any subordinate though, at the same time, he should be quick and unfailing to distinguish error from malice, thoughtlessness from incompetence, and well-meant shortcoming from heedless or stupid blunder. As he should be universal and impartial in his rewards and approvals of merit, so should he be judicial and unbending in his punishment or reproof of misconduct.

In his intercourse with subordinates he should ever maintain the attitude of the commander, but that need by no means prevent him from the amenities of cordiality or the cultivation of good cheer within proper limits. Every commanding officer should hold with his subordinates such relations as will make them constantly anxious to receive invitation to sit at his mess table, and his bearing toward them should be such as to encourage them to express their opinions to him with freedom and to ask his views without reserve....

I trust that I have now made fairly clear to you the tremendous responsibilities that devolve upon the Honorable committee of which you are a member. You are called upon to found a new navy; to lay the foundations of a new power afloat that must sometime, in the course of human events, become formidable enough to dispute even with England the mastery of the ocean. Neither you nor I may live to see such growth. But we are here at the planting of the tree, and maybe some of us must, in the course of destiny, water its feeble and struggling roots with our blood. If so, let it be so! We cannot help it. We must do the best we can with what we have at hand!

THIS YEARBOOK IS DEDICATED TO THE GOLDEN BEAR'S MANY YEARS OF SERVICE

She'll go to sea no more
The idea makes our heart stop cold
Del Orleans, USS Cresent City, T.S. Golden Bear
She'll go to sea no more
For her years of service to this nation,
For her years of service to this Academy,
She will not be forgotten.

May the midshipmen who have guided
Her and kept her heart alive,
Hold tight the memories of their first
Thank you for more than twenty years of training.

For a ship well traveled,
May your retirement
Be as fine as the sand
Of the tropical lands that you have traveled.

by Mark Taylor

A SHIP CALLED SHE

We always call a ship a she
And not without a reason.
For she displays a well shaped knee
Regardless of the season.
She scorns the man whose heart is faint
And doesn't show him pity,
And like a girl she need the paint
To keep her looking pretty.

For love she'll brace the ocean vast
Be she a gig or cruiser,
But if you fail to tie her fast
You're almost sure to lose her.
On ships and dames we pin our hopes,
We fondle them and dandle them;
And every man must know his ropes
Or else he cannot handle them.

Be firm with her and she'll behave
When skies are dark above you,
And let her take a water wave
Praise her, and she'll love you.

That's why a ship must have a mate,
She needs a good provider.
A good strong arm to deep her straight
To comfort her, and guide her.

For such she'll brace the roughest gales
And angry seas that crowd her,
And in a brand new suit of sails
No dame looks any prouder,
The ship is like a dame at that
She's feminine and swanky.
You'll find the one that's broad and fat,
Is never mean and cranky

Yes, ships are ladylike indeed
For take them altogether,
The ones that shoe a lot of speed
Can't stand the roughest weather.

Accomplishments: I didn't get beaten up, I didn't get arrested, I didn't die and I didn't bust up the pier like Roden!

Parting Words: You can't pink me anymore! Brown munchen ruden forkel. LMBS- T my D. Vallejo, the armpit of the bay area. I love CMA. 2D, where I wanna be, but I won't forget the bros. in 4E. Not very earth shattering parting words but think a while about this one... what happens to Calvin when he grows up?

Thanks James for helping me not remember my first 2 years at CMA! Thank you Linda and Dad! Good-bye L.U. R.I.P. They will take care of you.

I bet Mel Blanc could beat up Hannah and Barbarra at the same time. Be wary of girls named Jen!

Jason R. Wise

Division 1-D, BA

Parting Words: "So, we're finally here? How does one go about summing up four years at CMA? Heaven and hell sounds about right to me. Undoubtedly, some of my best and worst life experiences have taken place within my tenure here at CMA. These are memories that time simply can't take away. As for words of advice for those seeking: 1) Grab the bull by the horns. 2) Learning from your mistakes is still learning. 3) Always know who your friends are. Thanks to all my family and friends who supported me through the tough times and shared in the good times. 1D FOREVER! Non Copulata Mecum."

A black and white photograph capturing a dolphin in mid-leap from the ocean's surface. The dolphin is positioned on the left side of the frame, its body arched as it moves away from the water. A large, bright splash of water is visible at the point of exit. To the right, the white, curved hull of a ship is visible, partially cut off by the frame. The water's surface is textured with small ripples. The title 'Cruise '95' is superimposed in a large, bold, serif font across the middle of the image.

Editor's Note.....

First, I would like to thank those people that helped to put this edition together. I would also like to thank all those people who submitted photos. A special thanks to Mike Glynn and Harriet Millett for their help.

Secondly, ...anyone who might find a fault in this magnificent book can direct their complaints to themselves. The door to the office was always open and anyone could have come in to offer their opinions.

Putting this yearbook together was worthwhile though. It, like everything, was a learning experience.

Enjoy it.

Congratulations to the 1995 and 1996 Graduates

Hope Quinn, Editor
