

Standing room only: Muni

Golden Gater

60 seats per car,
80 have to stand

A check this morning showed the M line wasn't running to "full capacity," Frank Scheifler, Muni transportation manager, said yesterday.

"According to the check today, there is capacity room still on the line," he said.

Scheifler told the Gater that only two cars went by St. Francis Circle without stopping; 18 cars between 7:30 a.m. to 8:55 a.m. carried varying numbers, from 48 to 122 people.

The maximum load is 140. There are 54 to 60 seats per car. Other passengers stand.

Scheifler admitted that at least one more 17 bus may be needed.

More 17 buses would allow students to take a K or L car and transfer at West Portal.

Maurice Ittig, Muni traffic manager, said if more students from downtown would take the 17 express from Mission and Second it would help ease the crowds.

Asked why K cars aren't as crowded, Ittig said that they filled up on Ocean Avenue and were just as crowded as M cars when they reached City College.

Ittig said although there are more K cars in the morning, they aren't available for any line until too late to help 8:10 classes.

Then the cars are needed inbound on the K line for the rush downtown. The K line runs heavier than the M line inbound, Ittig said.

"We are trying to do what we can. We aren't ignoring the problem."

Last spring a survey indicated a need for a longer platform and a Muni collector for the 19th and Holloway stop. Both will be added in the future, he said.

Ittig stated that protests may be made, if students feel service warrants it, in the form of letters or petitions to the Public Utilities Commission, any of the City Supervisors, the Mayor, or the Municipal Railway itself.

Asked if more cars could possibly be added Scheifler said, "I couldn't say yes or no, we have 105 streetcars, we schedule 100. Overhaul and maintenance take the rest."

Directors meet for center study by Chancellor's order

The State College Health Service Directors will meet in Hayward tomorrow to discuss a study to be made of the State College health services as a result of the legislative budget cut made last summer. In response to "legislative request," the Chancellor's Office set the meeting to coincide with a week-end meeting of the Association of California State College Physicians, who ostensibly are trying to work out a solution to the State College health budget cut.

According to Chancellor's representative Bruce Fisher, the meeting will present the general structure of the proposed study and the problems that each of the State Colleges is going to have to face during the year.

John R. Moore, a former administrator of the Student Health Service at the University of California, Berkeley, will direct the study.

He is now the assistant coordinator of medical and health services for the state-wide office of the university.

Moore was appointed to direct the study "a few days ago," according to Fisher in a letter from Chancellor's Office.

The letter urged all State College Health Service Medical Directors to attend the meeting. "There is no question of the importance of the matters to be discussed (at the meeting)," Fisher said. "There is little need to acknowledge this announcement or to indicate your intent to be present."

'Operation 'shackup'

Survival in the south seas

"The pre-requisites to this course are underwater basket-weaving and sandpile."

This was the reaction of a student pursuing the latest project of Art 10.1, Section 3—simulated grass huts on an imaginary desert island—a problem in the design of survival structures.

The students were to imagine they've been shipwrecked on a South Sea island, and given a limited amount of materials, what sort of structure would they build as shelter from the sun?

Each student was allowed six bamboo (white pine) poles, grass matting, (brown paper) and all the rope (string) they needed. No tools floated ashore so everything had to be done by hand.

The blackout by the Arts and Industries building was the site of the island.

"We couldn't use the lawn because the Buildings and Grounds people objected," one student, who first staked his claim on the grass, commented.

The problem was not only to provide shelter, but to obtain the maximum amount of space in each hut, William Friedman, art department lecturer, explained.

The result was about a dozen paper huts designed in as many ways and sizes.

The biggest problem was with the reversal of the desired weather conditions. The paper sagged slightly from the dampness, and several huts were almost demolished by the wind.

"It was unfortunate there was so much wind and no sun," Friedman said.

Buildings and Grounds interfered again after the huts were constructed. The structures had to be moved to make room for a little green maintenance cart.

"You'd think they could have just gone around," a student remarked as he pulled his hut out of the way.

"There were a lot of snide remarks," he added. "So I've just been telling everybody it's part of the psych department."

One of the huts featured roll-up shades, others had windows and smaller air vents.

Some of the students pooled their resources and built large huts for communal living. There was no segregation of sexes.

"My partner is a fellow from Hong Kong," a woman said. "Luckily he knew quite a bit about living in the South Seas."

Many students have discovered important structural principles on their own, Friedman said. It's much more effective to build full-scale models rather than small-scale ones.

Anti-Castroites deny 'untruths'

The "lies and falsehoods about Cuba" were refuted on the Speakers Platform by two anti-Castro speakers yesterday.

John Ferris and Roasana Morrero of the Cuban American Liberation Alliance (CALA) rebutted the "glowing reports of Cuba" told by the students who traveled there last summer and presented an anti-Castro side of the situation.

"Can these people report impartially on a Communist country?" Ferris, an Oakland Tribune reporter asked. "They were very definitely left wing oriented."

Mrs. Morrero, a Cuban refugee and attorney for Castro in 1955, gave her impressions of Castro and his regime.

"Castro's son says that Fidel is his father only for the pictures," Mrs. Morrero declared and told how Castro has no regard for his son.

"A friend for whom I have much admiration saw Castro on TV and remarked 'his (Castro's) eyes are the cruellest I've ever seen,'" Mrs. Morreno said.

The audience laughed.

"The biggest traitor and killer in the war is Castro," she added. "He gave my country to the Russians."

"Before Castro, Cuba was a workingman's paradise."

The audience laughed.

Mrs. Morrero said she left Cuba in December, 1961, because she had lived for "three years under the Communist terror, and it's too much."

"The Communists are the best professors of terror," she said, explaining that spies were planted on each block to watch people.

Birthday celebrations and visiting friends was not allowed, Mrs. Morrero continued. Offenders were taken to the police station.

"This is Cuban justice now, under Castro."

All the good homes are now not for the people, but for Chinese and Russian troops and Russian technicians, Mrs. Morrero said.

Children are put in uniforms and given guns, she stated. So far, 3000 boys have been killed because they couldn't handle the weapons.

Student questions turned the talk to the freedom to travel.

"Freedom of travel isn't the issue here," Ferris protested.

Mrs. Morrero said she didn't believe the students who went to Cuba were citizens.

"They're either Communists, or stupid, or innocent, or foolish," she said. If they're Communists they can't be citizens because citizens only love Russia.

If you don't have a good reason to go to Cuba, you shouldn't go, Ferris said.

Bringing the discussion back to Cuba, Ferris said the revolt against Batista was political, not economic.

"There is no revolution in Cuba, only chaos and crime," Mrs. Morrero said.

Snake bite prevention

Want to know how to deal single-handed with a hungry python?

Calmly allow yourself to be swallowed to the knees. This completely immobilizes the python, and it may then be killed with a pocket knife.

So advises an article from a 1937 missionary magazine now circulating in the Geography Department.

"Read all about it"

Groups begin publication

Politically-minded students will get a new chance to read about campus political activities and express opinions this semester.

The Young Democrats, the Young Republicans and the Liberal Students League (LSL) will each publish mimeographed newspapers for the first time.

Bob Young, acting editor of the "Participant," said the YD publication is intended to inform members what the YD's are doing locally and statewide and also give them a chance to express themselves through editorials and cartoons.

"The 'Participant' will not censor any contributions," Young said, "but the paper will be distributed primarily to members and we expect most contributors to be YD's."

He said he hoped to get a dialogue going with the YR's and that he had invited YR President John Makemson to write a letter to the paper. According to Young, Makemson refused.

Makemson said that the purpose of the YR paper, "The Muleskinner," is that of the club itself, "to help the Republican Party win elections."

He said that the emphasis of the paper would be on Republican activities, controversies and philosophy. Any Republican can submit a story on any subject and have it printed verbatim, Makemson said.

When asked if he would print a letter by a liberal or a Democrat, he said he would welcome such a letter if it presented its case "intelligently and provocatively."

Aidan Kelly, editor of "Transfer" and of the LSL paper, "the program," said the newspaper's purpose was to encourage the student to express his viewpoint on college life or life in general. The student will be able to say things he might not be able to say even in the Gater, he said, in fiction, nonfiction and poetry.

Kelly admitted that an important purpose of the newspaper is to promote the LSL program and LSL-backed candidates. He said an article by a conservative might be printed "if it were reasonably literate and intelligent."

The LSL will sell "the program" every other Thursday at five cents a copy. A year subscription will cost one dollar. LSL members will be given free subscriptions.

The YR's will distribute their paper every week free. The YD's will give away their paper every second week to anyone interested.

Mosk rules home brew beer illegal

It's illegal to make beer at home, Attorney General Stanley Mosk ruled early this week.

It is also illegal for markets to sell equipment and ingredients for manufacture of home brew, Mosk said.

The ruling makes it unlawful for anyone to sell the vital ingredients, and specifically prohibits anyone from manufacturing their own suds whether for home consumption or not.

The only exceptions are persons licensed to make beer. A license costs $828 a year.

Letters to the Editor

Need facts

Editor:

In order for the Cuban travelers to expect SF State College students to believe their gross statements concerning Cuban affairs the travelers obviously need some factual information.

The Cuban travelers, in my opinion, should have had the foresight to realize that in order to communicate their observations effectively they need factual data — factual data being anything from a statistically derived consensus of opinion or just a systemized observation plan.

Although I respect the students' opinions (after all they go to SF State) I wish they would take the time to compile the interview they had and present the consensus in a comprehensive, objective-intelligible manner—so the college populace could grasp more meaning from the travelers ventures and so we could all share from their experience. That is to say, if they want us to share their experiences academically.

International Week activities to feature culture aspects

International Week, sponsored by International Student Affairs (ISA), has begun to take shape.

In a departure from last year's event, when each day was allotted to a different area of the world, each day will feature a different aspect of the participating country's culture.

Ten tents will be set up to house the exhibits of the ten expected international clubs. Each tent will be decorated to the discretion of the club. The location of the tents has not yet been decided.

Jerry Beiman, chairman of the event, said there are three possible sites under consideration.

"We hope to realize our aim of international unity by using a facility that would stimulate closer ties between American and international students," he said.

Beiman added that the best site would be one that would enable the tents to be placed in a circle.

On three days of the week, foods of several different nations will be available for sampling. Other events include an international fashion show, hootenanny, and poetry readings, in the original language and in English.

Belman also indicted a need for student help on International Week. Any organization or individual, he said, who would like to help make "the campus aware of the international community," is welcome.

Beiman sees, as the purpose of International Week, a means of bringing international students and American students together; it is not an end.

International Week will be held October 28 through November 3. Applications for work on the event prior to that time must be in the ISA office, Hut T-1, by Tuesday, October 8.

Fellowships to help study Congressmen

Fellowships carrying a minimum stipend of $4,500 are available for political scientists, journalists, and law school faculty members.

The winners will work in the offices of members of Congress or on the staffs of Congressional Committees.

The American Political Science Association is awarding the Fellowships to applicants between 23 and 35 who have had "superior academic training and practical experience."

The purpose of the program is to furnish first-hand experience in the workings of the legislative process.

About 17 Congressional Fellows are selected each year. Only one or two awards are available to law school faculty members.

Applications may be obtained by writing to the Association at 1726 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. The deadline for application is December 1.

Film finals showing set

Film Finals, the motion picture project by students in the Spring semester will be rescheduled tomorrow at 8 p.m. in CA 104.

Some of the films are: "Party Doll," "The Last Student," "Hand," "The Landscape" and "Man of Samora."

Admission to the showing is free.

Profs visit Mexico for de Anza fiesta

Three SF State professors flew in to an authentic fiesta in Old Mexico last weekend.

Dr. Alfred Sumner, professor of geography, Dr. Robert Stollberg, professor of physical science, and their wives flew to Arizpe, Sonora for the ceremony and fiesta in honor of Juan Bautista de Anza, founder of San Francisco.

Mrs. Sumner is an assistant professor of anthropology.

Drs. Sumner and Stollberg, both private pilots, flew as guests of the Western States Association of Sheriff's Air Squads.

Theirs was an uneventful trip down on Friday evening, but two other pilots were lost for hours over the trackless waste of Sonora's "Gran Desierto," coming into the central Sonoran mountain cattle town two hours behind the main body.

The main ceremonies included placement of a plaque to the memory of de Anza, who governed a vast area of the Mexican and American West from Arizpe, then known as "The Rlm of Christendom."

After speeches by Mexican and American dignitaries, and memorial masses for the Spanish soldier, a whoosh of rockets and a deafening blast of firecrackers signaled the start of the fiesta.

From dusk Saturday until Sunday morning, the fiesta went on at a furious rate. Dining, drinking, dancing, and singing, the residents of Arizpe and the 35 planeloads of Americans honored the founder of that city, beyond the rim of Christendom, which has outgrown its mother, Arizpe. At one point in the festivities, a light plane repeatedly "buzzed" the town, strewing it with orchids.

Water poloists open league action against Hornets today

Coach Walt Hanson hopefully leads the SF State water polo team into Sacramento today for its first league encounter with the Hornets.

The Hornets twice fell prey to the Gator team last year and has yet to win a game from Hanson's team. Last year's final game between the two was won by the Gators by the lop-sided score of 26-6.

"We shouldn't underestimate them but I will be both surprised and disappointed if we don't beat them," Hanson said.

Leading the varsity will be Leroy Farwell, an All-State goalie from last year's Gator squad, Gordon Jacoby and Jim Dunn.

"We would really like to do good this season as this will be the first year that water polo will be recognized as a conference sport," Hanson said.

"At Sacramento we will be playing in a shallow pool and this might offset our game," Hanson commented. "Sacramento also has a couple new players on their squad which should help them but I don't think they can be considered serious contenders."

Tomorrow the water poloists will return to their home pool to take on a powerful Stanford team.

"This game should be a real test for our team since Stanford is a pretty tough squad," Hanson said.

The week's schedule will conclude Saturday with another home game against the Fresno State squad.

"The team we will really have to watch out for are the Cal Aggies who handed us our only defeat last year," Hanson said. "If we can beat them we might be able to go all the way."

Saturday is Rowen day

Saturday is Vic Rowen Day. At least it is if you are a resident of Defiance, Ohio.

It was 10 years ago this week that Rowen, then Coach Vic Rowen of Defiance College, led his football team through its only undefeated season in that college's history.

Defiance College has dedicated Saturday's game against Wilmington to 'Ol Vic' and his undefeated 11.

JV gridders debut against Naval team

Coach Allen Abraham's injury riddled JV football team travels to Moffett Field tomorrow at 3 p.m. for its initial season encounter.

"The injuries to our squad are hurting us," Abraham said. "This plus the fact the Navy has a big and experienced team will make this a real test for the squad."

Quarterback Bob Schultz has a broken nose and probably will not be able to play. His spot will be filled by either the Mike Kovatz or Jim Caras.

The junior varsity will be playing under a new ruling that does not allow varsity members to join a junior varsity squad for any games. Any player on a junior varsity must remain there for the entire season.

I felt weak said Sandy strikingly

NEW YORK (AP) — Sandy Koufax conceded something that the New York Yankees in particular—and the nation in general—might never have suspected Wednesday afternoon.

"I felt a little weak," Koufax said after striking out a Series record of 15 for the Los Angeles Dodgers in their 5-2 victory over the Yankees in the World Series opener.

Koufax said he was not aware when he struck out Bobby Richardson in the eighth inning that he had tied Carl Erskine's Series strike-out record.

"It wasn't 'til I was going out for the last inning," he said, "that I saw the note about the 14 strikeouts on the message board. I figured I'd like to get one more in the ninth, but I was a lot more concerned about ending the game."

Koufax, who didn't allow a hit until there were two out in the fifth, was asked whether he had thought about a no-hitter earlier.

"I didn't even give a damn," he said.

Intramural football signups

Signups are now being taken in Gym 204 for all persons interested in playing intramural touch football.

League teams must have from six to eight players and competition will begin Monday, October 14, according to tournament manager Tom Kinnard.

The only restrictions put on prospective players are that any members of a SF State varsity, junior varsity or freshman football team are to be considered eligible.

Also, a team may have more than two players who have participated in junior college football.

Any questions concerning eligibility should be directed to Kinnard.

WORDS: THEIR CAUSE AND CURE

Today let us take up the subject of etymology (or entomology, as it is sometimes called) which is the study of word origins (or insects, as they are sometimes called).

Where are word origins (insects) to be found? Well sir, sometimes words are proper names which have passed into the language. Take, for instance, the words used in electricity: ampere was named after its discoverer, the Frenchman Andre Marie Ampere (1775-1836); similarly, ohm was named after the German G.S. Ohm (1781-1854), watt after the Scot James Watt (1736-1819), and bulb after the American Fred C. Bulb (1843-1912).

There is, incidentally, quite a poignant little story about Mr. Bulb. Until Bulb's invention, all illumination was provided by gas, which was named after its inventor Milton T. Gas many fine citizens were severely injured who, strange to tell, had been Bulb's roommate at Cal Tech! In fact, strange to tell, the third man sharing the room with Bulb and Gas was also one whose name burns bright in the annals of illumination—Walter Candle!

The three roommates were inseparable companions in college. After graduation all three did research in the problems of artificial light, which at this time did not exist. All America used to go to bed with the chickens, and many fine citizens were, alas, severely injured falling off the roost.

Well sir, the three comrades—Bulb, Gas, and Candle—promised to be friends forever when they left school, but success, alas, spoiled all that. First Candle invented the candle, got rich, and forgot his old friends. Then Gas invented gas, got rich, bankrupted Candle, and forgot his old friends. Then Bulb invented the bulb, got rich, bankrupted Gas, and forgot his old friends.

Candle and Gas, bitter and impoverished at the ages respectively of 75 and 71, went to sea as respectively the world's oldest and second oldest cabin boy. Bulb, rich and grand, also went to sea, but he went in style—as a first-class passenger on luxury liners.

Well sir, strange to tell, all three were aboard the ill-fated Lusitania when she was sunk in the North Atlantic. And strange to tell, when they were swimming for their lives after the shipwreck, all three clambered aboard the same dinghy!

Well sir, chastened and made wiser by their brush with peril, they fell into each other's arms and wept and exchanged forgiveness and became fast friends all over again.

For three years they drifted in the dinghy, shaking hands and singing the Cal Tech rouser all the while. Then, at long last, they spied a passing liner and were taken aboard.

They remained fast friends for the rest of their days, which, I regret to report, were not many, because the liner which picked them up was the Titanic.

What a pity that Marlboros were not invented during the lifetimes of Bulb, Gas, and Candle. Had there been Marlboros, these three friends never would have grown apart because they would have realized how much, despite their differences, they still had in common. I mean to say that Marlboros can be lit by candle, by gas, and by electricity, and no matter how you light them, you always get a lot to like—a filter, a flavor, a pack or box that makes anyone—including Bulb, Gas, and Candle—settle back and forswear pettiness and smile the sweet smile of friendship on all who pass!
