

'Y' offers faculty sack lunches

Opportunities to meet and exchange views with faculty members and international students are being planned by the College "Y" for open campus participation.

Under the direction of Ruth Adams, executive director and campus president Shirley Otterson, the "Y" is working in close connection with the "People to People" organization, initiated this semester to allow exchange of ideas between students of different cultures.

Today the "Y" series will kick-off with the initial meeting of "Sack lunch with the faculty." Dr. Urban Whitaker of the international relations department will discuss any topics selected by students present.

Dr. Whitaker recently returned from a year leave of absence where he worked with the United Nations in studying the Red Chinese situation. He will be heading Monday meetings throughout the semester in the Coffee Bar of Hut T-2 from 12:15 to 2 p.m.

Other faculty members will take over the discussion groups on Wednesdays at the same time and intercultural discussion groups will occupy the time slot on Fridays. The groups will consist of American and international students exchanging cultural ideas and problems.

Thursday evening, September 27, will feature Dr. Baird Whitlock, chairman of the humanities, language and literature division, at the first "Fireside Forum" of the semester. Dr. Whitlock will speak on "Modern Arts — in transition or decay." Interested students may sign up at the "Y" office.

A weekend with "New Perspectives" is planned in the Santa Cruz Mountains October 6 and 7. Associated Students officers, SF State faculty members, international teachers in the United States on Fulbright grants and college students will participate in two days of recreation and discussion groups.

Discussion groups on international relations, led by Dr. Urban Whitaker, Jr., of the Social Science division; mass communications, led by Professor Herbert Zettl, of the creative arts division; and American higher education, led by Dr. Hilda Taba, of the education division will highlight the weekend activities.

The weekend is open to all students on campus. A registration fee of $7 will cover meals, lodging, transportation, recreation and insurance. Interested students may register at campus "Y" headquarters.

McClelland, Smith new deans

SF State President Paul A. Dodd today announced that he had appointed Dr. Charles A. McClelland and Dr. Robert R. Smith acting deans of instruction.

In making the appointments President Dodd stated that there will be at an administrative reorganization due to the increase in size and enrollment of the college.

Dodd stated, "Drs. McClelland and Smith have been asked to serve on an interim basis to expedite the transition and also to maintain continuity of functions."

Dr. McClelland, who has served as chairman of the social sciences, replaces Dean Frank L. Fenton, who retired. Dr. Smith, chairman of the Division of Education replaces retiring Dean Reginald Bell.

Both men bring a wide range of experience into their new posts. Dr. McClelland made a study of undergraduate international relations programs under a grant from the Carnegie Corporation, while Dr. Smith has been working on the SF State educational program for the African country of Liberia.

The first of the regular Monday noon poetry readings by faculty members will begin today in the Gallery Lounge when Dr. Edward Cassady, professor of English, will read from the works of six noted Negro poets.

Dr. Gaby Onderwyzer, director of the faculty readings, said that "these gatherings will allow the faculty to meet with the students in a manner which is not usually available to them" and that they will have an opportunity to read poetry which their class situation would not allow. Dr. Cassady has emphasized this aspect of the readings by choosing such men as Claude McKay, James Weldon Johnson, Langston Hughes, Richard Wright and others who normally would not be given such lengthy consideration in a class in American literature.

These six poets show emotional perception, social awareness, human warmth, and a sense of words and rhythm. Dr. Cassady will not read these poets in dialect unless their specific poem was so written.

He emphasized that "these spokesmen of the Negro people clearly reveal what it is to be a Negro in the United States." Dr. Cassady further stated that these poets "reveal the assurances as well as the indignities, but in terms of poetry, not propaganda. Their work is an affirmation of the dignity and the creativity of the Negro people."

Admission is free.

'Schwarz is dying out'

By JACK HUBBARD

"Dr. Schwarz is dying out." Dr. Urban G. Whitaker said this at the forum, "Anti-Communism Goes to School," Thursday. "What Schwarz is really fighting is liberalism. The methods he attacks could have been taken from a mirror of himself," continued Whitaker.

Whitaker described the up-and-coming champion of the anti-communist crusade in California as Dr. Max Rafferty, a candidate for state superintendent of schools, who ran a close second in the primary election.

He quoted a recent pamphlet calling today's college student "Spineless luxury loving, spiritless creeps — pseudo sophisticates who clutter up the campuses."

"That's you," Whitaker said, after the laughter in the audience died down. "Do the basic proposals of men like Rafferty warrant his election?" Whitaker referred to Rafferty's proposals of teaching pro-Americanism via a severe indoctrination program.

Several students aimed questions at the panel: "How do you teach anti-communism?" asked one student.

Scholars should look at phenomena as is and then give value judgments, not before, not negatively, said Pentony. "Having no limit on discovering things is the essence of academic freedom."

"We should be definitely anti-communist, but in a positive manner, by understanding the issues at hand," said Whitaker. "We should teach what it is."

Spring hasn't sprung but sex should

SOMETHING IS MISSING from the campus. Old timers (who have been here two or three years) know that in the spring, one dast not walk across the lawns for fear of stepping on some loving couple. They're stretched out, covering every square foot of open space—delightfully preoccupied.

Now last week's weather was the equal of any spring. If it keeps up, it would be a shame to let it go to waste.

BESIDES, NOW IS the time when this sort of thing would do more good. The new students need some sort of an introduction to the school. Rally 'Round the Campus and the Activities Fair can go only so far in cementing student relations. It is up to the students themselves to work towards a warm and friendly campus.

Just think: in future years, as old alumni, we'll recall these as the best years of our lives. It's our duty to see that this is truly the case.

SO BOYS, WALK up to some lonely looking girl, take her by the hand, lead her to some soft plot, and introduce her to college life. Lest you feel shy, remember: whenever she came from, she was the center of attraction, a campus queen; here she's a poor little girl looking for fun and excitement in the most romantic of all cities, San Francisco. You are supposed to provide her with all of this, and of course she'll be grateful.

And girls, you also must do your part. Cooperate.

THIS GREAT PLAN for bringing joy into the life of lonely lovelies does have a drawback. Suppose the sun, perhaps having a perverse case of spots, refuses to shine. Or lawns are wet, which does not infrequently occur.

The solution to either of these possibilities we leave to our wise and ingenious readers.

"You'll lose some supporters in a TV debate with your opponent . . . There'll always be people who will resent your pre-empting their favorite shows . . .!"

Bookstore gripe

Editor:

Congratulations on editorial re high cost of books! I believe the epitome of this practice was reached last year with the amount I had to pay for texts for Geography 30—$19.50 for this one course alone when my total tuition was only $21.50 (Part-time student). Surely some "bulk rate" could be worked out when several books are required for one course.

Also resent having to climb stairs to the crowded, hot second floor in the Book Store for books, while the airy, roomy downstairs section is used for so many non-essential items more properly found in the 5 and 10.

Reg gripe

Editor:

When confronted with San Francisco State College's registration week, I must admit that registration at the two other colleges I had attended seem dull by comparison. I spent three to four hours more just registering here than at either of the previous two colleges. And this does not include the time I spent in those interesting and informative

Official notice

In order to qualify for a master's degree at the end of this semester, candidates must file the subject of their thesis or creative work in the Office of the Dean of Graduate Studies, AD 116, no later than Friday, October 12. The subject must be approved by at least two supervising faculty members. Forms for this purpose are available in the Graduate Study Office.

orientation meetings, general meetings, credential meetings, English tests, speech tests, eye, ear, nose, and throat tests, and tests to see if I was ready to take tests. But the capper was registration day itself. Sort of like the war to end all wars. . . .

I have a simple solution for next year's registration. No registrant should be allowed within a mile radius of the campus until 7:30 a.m. Then, at 7:30 throw open the gym doors and let classes be given on a first come-first serve basis. . . .

Oh, and one other thing. If this plan is adopted, the gym should be opened at 6:30 a.m. for a special pre-reg group. This group should be made up of students whose last names begin with Lo-Loo. In fact, you should adopt this even if the rest of my plan is scrapped. Please? Or else give six units credit for registration week.

Robert M. Loomis

Possible solution

Editor:

Yes, I was one of those who arose in the dense fog of the morning to serve a moist and chilling vigil. As I dodged sprinklers and searched for coffee I had many ideas come to me of the situation I was in and the system that required my attendance. . . . Those who shook their heads and questioned the sanity of my colleagues did not understand the principles of the registration procedure. It is a matter of priority. . . . Those who are willing to accept the most physical punishment are granted priority over those who are not. . . .

Wouldn't it be possible to assign numbers by lottery to all applications for admission to a given semester? It would be a simple matter to draw up a rough schedule of the times that the various numbers would be called. On the day of registration as a number is called any student holding a number less than, or the same as, the called number would be admitted. Thus, the person holding No. 1 could register at any time that he pleased. Of course, with the volume of students to be handled, numbers could be called in blocks of ten, twenty-five, or whatever was easiest.

The disadvantages of such a system are obvious. It would require a certain amount of extra time and expense. Yet this system, or refinements of it, would certainly eliminate this all night business and put the whole procedure on a more sound, logical basis.

In the reporting game a hot story often breaks because of hard work on the part of the reporter. Sometimes, however, it's just plain luck, and if you'll stay with me for a few more lines I'll tell how I uncovered the shame of SF State.

Let's call it the story behind the story about the "People to People" project that our new student government is promoting.

As many of you may know, but probably most don't, the idea of P-P is that American students befriend their classmates at SF State who hail from overseas.

The idea is catching hold fast, and soon there'll be all sorts of American students living, eating, and commuting with all sorts of foreigners, and generally trying to live as equals.

Indeed, equality is suggested by the name, "People to People." Think how the project would sound were it called "Haves to Have-nots," or "Lucky Us to Poor You."

Anyhow, I popped down to the P-P office and offered myself as a poor, unadjusted, far-from-home, son of the realm, one who obviously needs the services of P-P. In the office I found out that one of the prime instigators of P-P at State is H. Jay Folberg, better known, possibly, as the sexy prexy. He seems to have made an auspicious start at the helm, or on the bridge, of our very leaky ship, and P-P has been one of his most laudable efforts to date.

But it seems that old Sexy is not completely altruistic. Even campus politicians do things for their own benefit occasionally, and Sexy's racket is that he has first look-see at all foreign females in need of US aid.

Now that's a strange pastime for a married man with two kids!

Rhodes scholarships available for qualified, unwed men

Applications are now available for Rhodes scholarships, affording upper division male students of at least two years of study in the fields of their choice at Oxford University, beginning October 1963.

Candidates must be between the ages of 18 and 24 on October 1 of this year, and, in addition, unmarried. They must also receive official endorsement of their school.

The last will and testament of Cecil Rhodes specified that selection was based upon candidates possessing the following qualities: "1.) literary and scholastic ability and attainments; 2.) qualities of manhood, truthfulness, courage, devotion to duty, sympathy for and protection of the weak, kindness, unselfishness, and fellowship; 3.) exhibition of moral force of character, and of instincts to lead and to take an interest in his fellows; 4.) physical vigor, as shown by fondness for and success in sports.

"Some definite quality of distinction, whether in intellect or character, is the most important requirement for a Rhodes scholarship, and it is upon this that the selection committees will insist."

Further information may be obtained from Professor Curtis Aller, Department of Economics, HLL 117. Deadline for applications is November 1.

GLAMOUR

What is it that Sophia Loren, recently chosen 1961 Academy Award Winner, the Fairmount Hotel and that neighbor of yours down the block have in common? It's glamour! We've been hearing a lot about glamour — but what is it? Webster says it's a "spell" — a modification of a Scottish word which means "magic." And if you'll take a good look at the people you know who have glamour, you'll have to agree they have magic in common! Our lives would be humdrum and monotonous without it — as we all need an element of mystery and magic in our everyday living.

Grid team gets pre-season meals

By DICK HINTON

Gator gridders had the Redwood Room reserved for training lunches during pre-registration practice, a two-week period.

This action was in full concordance with Far Western Conference rules, which provide one meal a day for practicing football players during pre-school sessions.

According to Vic Rowen, head football coach, the football players get no benefits from the College. Many of the players gave up summer jobs to come to fall practice, losing from one to two hundred dollars, Rowen declared.

To compensate players in the only legal way, a training table was established to feed the players a daily meal.

Rowen stated that the training table offered the players a good meal a day.

The football players received a rounded lunch: broth, meat, vegetables, toast, ice cream or jello, and coffee or tea. "This is the best we have been able to do," commented Rowen.

Asked if the training table helped the team, Rowen replied, "It helps us in every way, physically and mentally."

He continued, "The training table was a great thing. It gave the players a lift and incentive, which is a big part of football."

Rowen also added that the table would be continued in future years.

With regard to the Redwood Room as the choice for the training table, the head football mentor answered, "The football players had nothing to do with the choice. We were put there."

At this moment, Joe Verducci, head athletic director added, "We just asked for a place to eat. We have no control where we do eat."
