'Fight for Water' film with Fresno State alumni featured screened May 2

The film "Fight for Water: A Farm Worker Struggle," a documentary depicting the human drama of the California Water Crisis of 2009, will be screened at 5 p.m. Thursday, May 2, at Fresno State. The free, public screening will be in University Center 200. The filmmaker, Juan Carlos Oseguera, an alumni of San Francisco State University and the CSU Summer Arts at Fresno State, will discuss the film with guests who were featured in the film.

The film highlights the human impact a federal ruling had on a farm working community, in the West Side of the San Joaquin Valley, when its water supply was shut off and the unity they staged in order to fight for their water. It features Joe Del Bosque and George Delgado, two farmers in the West Side of Fresno County who are Fresno State alumni. Sponsored by the Department of Chicano and Latin American Studies and the Literatures, Arts, and Cultures of the Americas (LACA) Program.
