March 13th, 2020 was the last day I was on Campus at SJSU. Eight months have passed so quickly yet so slow. This week I am graduating and it's crazy to think that only eight months ago I was working the CHHS Student Success Center. My coworkers and I went out to dinner after our staff meeting. Little did we know that was the last time we would see each other in person. We all believed we would be back after spring break. When that did not occurred, we hoped that we would return in august for the Fall Semester. I was excited to enjoy my senior year by going to a lot of school related events and my sorority events. Some events went virtual, meanwhile, many were canceled. I spent my senior year with all online classes, working remotely, and attending my sorority virtually. It was not the same nor as fun. I miss in person classes and activities. It saddens me to have finished my senior year without being able to personally say goodbye to my campus, professors, and friends. Regardless of it all, I am still proud of succeeding this semester and for graduating. Making the most of it while staying safe is all we can do right now!
