

My personal experiences of COVID-19 pandemic

My experience with COVID-19 has been harsh when it comes to online classes. Although I had more time to study, I had a hard time understanding the subjects and felt that classes were shorter although they were the same amount of time as in class. Getting in contact with tutors and advisors was difficult as all online appointments were full most of the time and I was having trouble with writing assignments and in need of help with choosing fall semester classes.

As for my family, it was hard not to be able to see them as often since my foster parents were so concerned about the virus and they made visits limited for me to see my siblings.

Thankfully I was able to still keep my paid internship and work from home helping foster youth to have access to free laptops for those attending college and free phones for the rest to be able to reach out to family and friends through this pandemic.
