

Experiencing COVID19 during my last semester of college has been a roller coaster of feelings. This is a picture I took on May 18, 2020 which is a pretty good depiction of how I've been feeling during the shelter in place. I have been lucky to be able to have a job that is still paying me during the shelter in place, but that will end this month. I feel anxious that I might not have a stable income anymore due to COVID19. I have been job searching almost every day and applying to positions. It has been nerve-wracking to know that there are so many others in my position and I pray that we all get what we need during this time. I constantly feel stuck between wanting others to succeed in their career and also wanting that for myself. Although I feel nervous and anxious, I always turn to my religion and understand that what is meant for me will be and that rejection is a redirection. I try my best to keep these in mind during this time because I know I must be patient. These clouds symbolize the darkness and anxiousness I feel, with pockets of blue that keep me going. Some days, I am so motivated to apply and search for jobs. Other days, I feel so tired and careless to what may happen. I never expected this to be the outcome of graduating from San Jose State University, but I know that in this I am not alone. I pray that sooner than later we all get to see our family and friends again. For now, we keep pushing and focusing on bettering ourselves as this is the best time to do it.
